Garbage Disposal Fees Are Still Not Settled

After long negotiations and repeated meetings with city council, Belleville's new garbage disposal contract with Commercial Refuse Services is still apparently undecided.

Some months ago the city negotiated with the firm for disposal of garbage at a Sidney township site.

But there was objection to a proposed additional charge for private cars and trucks from the city using the site.

Two weeks ago it appeared Commercial Refuse Services was prepared to waive the proposed 50-cent charge for private cars.

But councillors were still not happy with the $1 charge for trucks dumping commercial wastes and the city manager was directed to continue negotiations.

Yesterday, City Manager J. H. Reynolds reported the garbage site firm had agreed to sell special permits to retail merchants operating their own pickup trucks at $50 per year.

This would allow merchants to make deliveries at will to the garbage site.

At the same time, however, the garbage site firm withdrew its offer to allow cars in free and the originally proposed fee of 50 cents stands.

Under the terms of the contract the city would not commence using the new garbage site until January 1. In the meantime, dumping will continue at the Zwicky's Island site although the Ontario Water Resources Commission has mentioned it is expected that this be discontinued.

Alderman Paul Russell, chairman of the city parks board, said it was important that all the garbage fill possible be received at Zwick's Island to ready the site for park purposes.

Yesterday Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission, was perturbed that the permit system offered to merchants had not been extended to manufacturers and industrialists.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott felt that industrialists should be prepared to pay charges set by the firm without expecting such costs to be loaded onto all the taxpayers.

In the end council turned down a recommendation that the city engage Peto's latest report on the garbage question be received and directed that it be referred for further clarification.

An Canada is now undergoing a distressing period a special Prayer for Peace was read by Iris Downing to open the meeting.

Today's businessman is a travelling man, and often finds it is a matter of urgency to travel across the country and even internationally. Mrs. Black has now joined the R. M. Armstrong Travel and Insurance Agency of Trenton and she stressed the importance of obtaining as much information as possible on the towns, when and how long plans of her boss. Mrs. M. Hakestetter expressed thanks on behalf of the Chapter for the many travel tips and suggestions to make the secretary's path just a little smoother too.

President Gabriella Watkins chaired the business session and welcomed a number of guests including Lorraine Roebuck, Mutual Life Assurance Company; Mrs. Elaine Brooks, Mutual Life Assurance Company; Mrs. Marlene Neal, Kerr, Simmons and Associates; Miss Anna Collodon, Dept. of National Revenue; Mrs. Marion Hunter, Arthur A. Most Hindu Women Have Sole Devotion

BOMBAY (CP) — Most Hindu women believe their lives are indissolubly linked with those of their husbands.

This belief is particularly strong among rural wives who will go to any length to serve their husbands. This is why divorces are so rare in India, though Parliament passed an act permitting divorces nearly 20 years ago.

Sometimes this kind of devotion can lead to tragedies.

Indian newspapers have given wide publicity to a report from Kosir village in Madhya Pradesh state which said that a village woman jumped into the funeral pyre of her husband and killed herself.

The local people tried their utmost to prevent Mrs. Bela Devi Gokulprasad from hurling herself on the burning pyre. But she appeared determined to end her life, saying: "Please don't stand in the way of my joining my beloved lord during his last journey from the earth."

The Calcutta daily Amrita Bazar Patrika reported that a similar incident took place in another village in the same area shortly before.

Preliminary police investigations in both the cases suggest that the two wives had made up their minds a long time ago to die along with their husbands.

At a women's meeting in the Madhya Pradesh town of Raipur speeches were made mourning the death of the two wives. While praising them for their "courage," speakers said such "extreme" steps should be avoided.

Family Honors Couple On 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Middleton, Bridge St. W. were pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening at the home of their daughter and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Lyle (Nancy Lou) Clarke, RR 2, Belleville when family and friends gathered to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Guests were present from Peterborough and Kingston as well as those from the Belleville area and all enjoyed an evening of good fellowship which included dancing and games.

The honored guests were presented with a money tree along with a number of individual gifts for which both expressed sincere appreciation, and for the party given in their honor.

Following the serving of hors d'ouevres a bountiful lunch was served which included an approximately decorated anniversary cake. Numerous flash pictures were taken for the occasion.

Her Spanish hood of the same material, held in place with a pearl and crystal tiara, was attached to an ermine trimmed cape which formed a train at the back. She carried a bouquet of gardenias.

Matron of honor, Mrs. James Alexander, of London, Ontario, sister of the bride, wore a floor length empire styled gown of sky blue polyester cashmere. Miss Julie Alexander, flower girl, walked with her mother, wearing a floor length gown of same color, and carried a tiny basket of yellow and orange star flowers. Ann Landers

Difficult to Tolerate New In-laws' Bigotry

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been sitting here trying to figure out how to tone down the language so you can print my letter. I've decided there is no way without destroying the sense of what I want to say, so I'm going ahead in the hope you will print it anyway.

I married a very fine man last year after having been a widow since 1966. His parents are virtual strangers to me and to my three children. I have two boys who are 18 and 8, and a girl, 6. The children like their new grandparents very much and the grandparents adore them.

ANN LANDERS

We just returned from spending a weekend together in their home and it was a very trying experience for me. My husband's parents continually talk about "niggers, kikes and wops." Our children did not know the meaning of these words until Grandma happily spelled it out for them. During the detailed lecture on "the inborn differences in certain groups" I had a terrific time controlling my temper. My jaws ached from grinding my teeth. My knuckles were white from clenching my fists. My husband's eyes pleaded with me to keep quiet.

I don't want a head-on collision with my in-laws, but I find it impossible to tolerate such bigotry. We have been invited to return for Christmas. Please tell me how to deal with the problem if it should arise again, as it inevitably will. I am — STUMPED IN CONNECTICUT.

DEAR STUMPED: If the grandparents use those words again, out in — in a no-nonsense tone of voice. Say, "We don't allow that kind of language in our house. Those are gutter words so please don't use them in my presence." Children should learn early to speak out against ignorance and prejudice. As parents it is your responsibility to give them the benefit of some on-the-job training.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the lady who wrote to say Monterey, California, is the Petrified Forest of the U.S. She is wrong. The real petrified forest of the country is right here in Illinois — a town of 1,900 people.

Our high school principal is living with his girl friend. Not only is he the coach but he is teaching, would you believe, only is he the coach but he is teaching, would you believe, Social Studies. A few of the mothers complained but were told that so long as he does his job his personal life is his own business.

Then there is our ex-minister who became involved with the banker's wife. He started by counselling her with marital problems and ended up running off with her — leaving a wife and children. The banker's wife came back three weeks later — Illinois — a town of 1,900 people.

Our high school principal is living with his girl friend. Not Illinois. — JUST A READER.

DEAR JUST: Your bet has no takers. If your facts are incorrect I might get a call from the state's attorney — unless he's in jail, that is. Thanks for writing.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Salmon Turnovers A Hit

By MARY MOORE

In May 1968 I gave you a recipe for French Meat Turnovers that turned out to be a smash hit with our readers.

Success went to my head because I decided to use the same flaky pastry for Salmon Tourtieres. It worked. At time of writing I - lb. cans of salmon are selling at 99 cents. Our freezer corners will be pleased to hear that they freeze most satisfactorily.

SALMON TURNOVERS
(French Tourtieres)

Pastry:
2 cups sifted cake and pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
2/3 cup hard butter
6 tbsps. cold milk

Filling:
1¼ slices whole wheat or white bread broken up
1-3 cup milk
½-lb. can salmon, including bones and liquid
1 egg
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. freeze dried chives or finely chopped green onion tops
2 tbsps. chopped parsley or bottled flakes
2 tsps. lemon juice

To make Pastry cut hard butter into flour and salt with pastry blender until size of peas. Add milk, 1 tbsp. at a time, tossing with fork. Press into a ball between your palms, place on square of foil flatten to a round about 6" in diameter, wrap up and chill until hard. (I challenge anyone to make easier better flaky pastry.)

To make Filling soak bread in milk and add salmon and egg and combine so well that bread and salmon are all broken up and mixed in. Stir in salt, pepper, chives, parsley and lemon juice.

To make Turnovers roll out dough on well-floured board to ⅛" thickness. Cut out eight 6" rounds. (I used a saucer as my guide around which to cut.) Put scant ¼ cup salmon filling on one side of each, spreading it a little to within 1" of one side. Dampen this edge of dough and lap other side over and seal with floured finger tips. Carefully lift with floured lifter to ungreased cookie sheet. I had to roll out my scraps of dough to shape my eighth round. Cut 1" slit in tops. Neatly brush tops with beaten egg. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 18-20 min. Serve hot. If to be frozen cool and wrap well in foil and freeze. To serve reheat in oven at 300 deg. Fahr. 15 min.

Good for lunch boxes or late evening snacks or, of course, as a main course item for dinner. NOTE: To the health egg leftover from brushing tops my secretary suggests adding it to an egg nog for the children.

Medical Secretaries Hear Talk on Telephone Manners

The 5th annual meeting of the Quinte Medical Secretaries Association was held recently in Education Hall, BGH and chaired—by the president, Mrs. Doreen Ware.

Christmas dinner plans are well underway. Only 12 questionnaires have been returned to date, but more would be needed to produce an accurate report. The collection of supermarket register tapes has been adequate to purchase one item for use in the hospital and the girls are now collecting for a second item. It is expected that the general study course will be ready by February 1 and specialty courses later, if requests indicate the need.

After the regular business meeting, the following officers and chairmen for 1970-71 were presented by Mrs. Mae Cathcart as follows: president-elect, Mrs. Diane Maxwell; honorary president, Dr. F. M. Swaine; vice-president, Mrs. Eileen Conley; secretary, Mrs. Marion McFaul; social convener, Mrs. Lena Anderson; program committee, Mrs. Lida Dowling; historian and publicity, Mrs. Doreen Ware, OMSA representative, Mrs. Beth Cunningham.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Marg. Bakey who spoke on telephone manners and the proper use of telephone equipment. She suggested one should leave a list of frequently called numbers beside the phone as it takes three times as long to place the call without the number. One should wait until the long distance operator asks for the number calling from and slower prompterly. Direct distance dialing is expected to come to Belleville in Sept. '71.

Some comical skits were put on by bobble gum-chewing Susie from the X-ray dept. to accent the do's and don'ts of telephone conversations.

Mrs. Bakey was thanked by Doreen Ware.

The next regular meeting will be held Nov. 11 in Education Hall, BGH.

Only A Few Assist in Recreation Program

By DORIS CLARK

A hard working volunteer at a recreational centre thinks parents should take more interest in their kids.

Ken is a member of a sponsoring service group. He gives countless hours — his precious evenings and sometimes weekends — to giving a hand where he is needed. Sometimes it is on the basketball floor, sometimes he finds himself serving hot dogs. He takes on lifeguarding or amateur swimming instruction in the pool.

He is interested in the boys and they love him. Around the pool, someone is constantly yelling, "Ken, watch me do this", "Look Ken, I can swim on my back", And at his other side of the pool a little boy pipes up, "Ken, how do you do the dog paddle?"

Ken tries to be all things to all boys. But he can't replace the interest of a boy's own father in what his son can do. Fathers are invited to come around and help, but mighty few do.

Last summer there was an influx of a bus load of boys from a church in the States. The boys took home the request for mothers to come and help with serving a meal to them. One hundred and fifty boys have membership in the club, but just six mothers turned up.

Dear Doris: What has happened to the older woman's foundation garment? We could once get a really good strong foundation garment, high waisted and with steel (after whalebone passed out).

No wonder the child-bearing mothers and older, stouter women are shapeless. The young have taken over everything in wearing apparel. — Complaint.

DORIS CLARK

Dear Complaint: I have a friend with a weak back who swears by her steel - boned lingerie.

But you wouldn't want to go back to that laced - in waist, would you? Such extremes could hardly promise help and comfortable movement to the wearer. Today's young mothers are encouraged to start exercising immediately after childbirth in order to regain their figures regularly. It works, too!

But you can still find specialists in foundation garments who will come up with something custom - built and sufficiently firm for shapeliness.

Dear Doris: I want to thank you for taking the time to answer my letter personally. I appreciated it more than you will ever realize.

I know for sure where to turn now for good sound advice. — Sure Now.

Dear Sure: You're the girl whose boy friend brings along his sister and her girl friend, who persist in talking French all the time.

What happened about it? If you took my advice, was there a happy ending? Come again.

Points for Parents

Ann: "With my mother wasn't such a fuss budget. You've barky your mother lets you stay out late without niewing about it.."

Jane: "She doesn't worry. I don't think she cares what I do."

It's natural for teen-agers to flame about restrictions, but they do not really want complete freedom. Lack of control may seem like lack of interest to them.

High school youngsters are not yet grown-up, and they still need parental control and definite rules about where they go and when they come home. The wise parent makes the effort to retain necessary control.

'Purple Gang' Stops Rams to Gain Tie for Central Lead

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Carl Eller, simply explained that Minnesota Vikings took the right attitude to the line of scrimmage on a game-tanking goal-line stand against Los Angeles Rams.

"We never doubt ourselves," said Eller, a six-foot-six, 250-pound defensive end.

"We realize the percentages. But we will never concede."

The Rams, after Kermit Alexander's 49-yard return of a deflected punt, had a first down on Minnesota's two with 19 seconds left in the first half and the Vikings leading 10-0 in a rainy, muddy National Football League game Monday night.

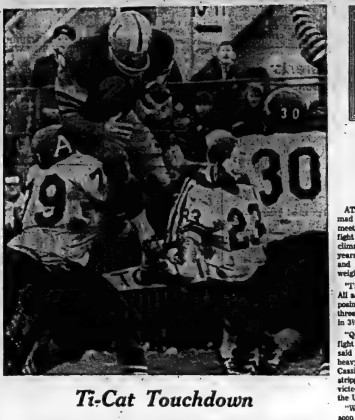
First, Les Josephson got a yard in the middle. Roman Gabriel got a few inches on a quarterback sneak. And Gabriel was smothered in the middle again on third down as time ran out and the Vikings finished up with a 13-3 victory.

The Rams actually got an extra down after Gabriel's second down threw over right tackle and no time on the scoreboard clock. But referee Fred Silva ruled that the Vikings did not unpile in time, and gave Gabriel another down.

But it made little difference. Alexander thought he had put six points on the board with his run after Willie Ellison stormed in to get a hand on Tom McNeil's punt. Jim Lindsey tackled him at the two.

"I thought I was over," said Alexander, "I should have tried to elude Lindsey... but I was worrying about a fumble."

Alexander had cause for worry. The Rams lost four of seven fumbles and Vikings turned two of them into 10 points.



Rams return man Alvin Haymond dropped a punt on the Ram 18 in the first period, and Reid Kramer recovered for the Vikings.

Bill Brown slipped between guard and tackle, sped up the middle up the field and took Gary Cuozzo's 17-yard touchdown pass in the end zone for a 7-0 edge.

Rams' running back Larry Smith fumbled in the second period, Alan Page picked it up at the Los Angeles 22 and ran to the 14. Fred Cox kicked a 13-yard field goal.

Dave Ray kicked a 22-yard field goal for the Rams in the third period, but Cox booted a 25-yarder for the Vikings in the final quarter.

The victory gave the Vikings a 5-1 record and they are in Detroit next Sunday to meet the Lions, also 5-1, for the Central Division lead of the National Conference. Los Angeles dropped to second with a 4-2 record in the West behind San Francisco's 4-1-1.

Ti-Cat Touchdown

Hamilton Tiger-Cat halfback Dave Fleming leaps high to catch this touchdown pass from quarterback Wally Gabler for third couchdown in 27-7 win over Argos in Hamilton Civic Stadium. Four Argos include Jim Corrigall 79, Jim Tomlin 23, and Chip Barrett 30. Hamilton earned first place in the east with the win.

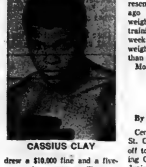
Clay Ready to Clear Title Picture In Heavyweight Bout with Frazier



ATLANTA (AP) — Muhammad Ali is back and ready to meet champion Joe Frazier in a fight that should be an explosive climax to what has been several years of confusion, frustration and doubt in boxing's heavyweight division.

"I'm ready to settle the title," Ali said Monday night after disposing of tough Jerry Quarry in three rounds in Ali's first fight in 3½ years.

"Quarry was much harder to fight than Joe Frazier will be," said the man who rose to the heavyweight championship as Cassius Clay and then was stripped of his title when convicted of refusing induction into the U.S. Army.

"We're ready to fight him as soon as we can get rid of Foster and as soon as Clay can get ready," Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, said in East Stroudsburg, Pa., where Frazier is training for a title defence against light heavyweight king Bob Foster in Detroit, Nov. 18.

Foster, who has a thunderous left hook, could upset an All-Frazier fight. Another blood could be Ali's conviction which drew a $10,000 fine and a five-year prison sentence. The conviction still is being appealed.

Ali was a heavy favorite to win the historic fight at Atlanta's old Municipal Auditorium, Jammed with 5,000 people, but it was the manner in which he won it which showed that indeed he once was a major force in boxing.

From the opening bell of the scheduled 15-rounder until the fight was stopped at the end of the third round with blood gushing from Quarry's split left eyebrow, Ali was in complete command.

Using his 5½-inch reach advantage and showing he had not lost his punching speed, Ali peppered Quarry with stinging left jabs and jolted him with left hooks and rights. It was a straight right in the third round that ripped open Quarry's eyebrow, a wound that required 15 stitches.

All, now 28, last fought against Zora Folley March 22, 1967, and won by a seventh-round knockout.

Ali's transformation from lecturer, actor and fast food impresario to a fighter that closely resembled himself 3½ years ago was truly amazing. Ali weighed 238 when he began training for the Quarry fight six weeks ago. Monday night he weighed 213½, 16 pounds more than Quarry.

Monday night's fight did more for Ali than just restore his pride. He figures to get more than a $1 million from his percentage while Quarry could end up with about $500,000. Ali had been guaranteed $200,000 against 42½ per cent; Quarry $150,000 against 22½ per cent.

There were no figures on the live gate or the gate from closed circuit television shown at 208 locations, with 800,000 seats in the United States and Canada.

The bout also was beamed live to Europe, South America, Australia, Asia and the Soviet Union, with a delayed telecast to Great Britain.

Winning the fight was termed by Ali "more than a win for a fighter—it was a social victory." This was a reference to his victory against the banishment imposed on him after his conviction.

Dionne Paces Junior A Scorers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Marcel Dionne, 19, of St. Catharines Black Hawks is off to a strong start as defending Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring champions.

The Drummondville, Que., native, who won the individual title last year with 132 points, leads with 14 goals and 11 assists for 25 points, two more than Tom Cassidy of Kitchener Rangers.

Left winger Brian McKenzie of the Black Hawks occupies third spot with 20 points, including a league-leading 16 assists.

Dionne is favored to take a strong run at the all-time OHA Junior A scoring record for one season. The record, 161 points, was set in 1954 by centre Ron Cullen of St. Catharines Teepees.

The current list of leaders includes three rookies, Centre Bob MacMillan, 18, who joined St. Catharines from Charlottetown Islanders of the Maritimes Junior League, shares fifth spot at 13 points with team-mate Clyde Simon.

Dave Gardner of Toronto Marlboros and Wayne Merrick of Ottawa 67s are grouped with four others in eighth spot with 12 points.

Gardner, 18 year-old son of former National Hockey League star Cal Gardner, scored 55 goals in the Metropolitan Toronto Junior B League last season for St. Michael's College. Merrick, 18, scored 34 goals and 25 assists for Sarnia, Ont., Midgets last year.

Stops Quarry After Three

Clay Makes Big Comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — "He's still the champ," a fan shouted in Madison Square Garden Monday night after watching Muhammad Ali stopped Jerry Quarry on cuts in three rounds.

And a close-to-capacity crowd in the 19,500-seat Garden for the closed circuit telecast of the fight from Atlanta gave the boxing exile a royal reception for his first regular fight in 3½ years.

From the moment he was shown on the huge, four-sided screen in the Garden, the arena rocked with cheers for the flamboyant fighter.

At least half of the crowd that paid $7.50, $10 and $15 appeared to be black.

Quarry came on the picture first and the Garden crowd booed lustily. There were only a few cheers for the blonde Californian. Then came Ali, also known as Cassius Clay.

The crowd roared loud and long, drowning out the announcer. It was the same way throughout the fight.

When referee Tony Perez tried to give the fighters the pre-fight instructions, the camera panned on Ali. When he stared at Quarry and then started talking to him, most of the fans laughed and then roared.

As Ali came out, dancing and stabbing with his snapping left-hand jabs, just as he used to do in the old Garden, the fans roared again.

"Same old Cashus," said a fan.

"He ain't never been away. That Quarry ain't got a chance."

It seemed only a question of how long Quarry would last.

There was a constant roar when Ali cut Quarry over the left eye and then hammered with a stunning left-right-left combination to the head in the closing seconds of the third round.

When the fight was stopped, the crowd seemed surprised. But only for a moment. When the fans realized the fight was over, they let loose with a thundering ovation for Ali.

Then when the unbeaten, once-undisputed heavyweight king said he wanted to fight Frazier "to settle the title" the crowd's cheers almost lifted the roof off the new Garden.

At Los Angeles, disbelief and even astonishment were the general reactions of fight fans here over the early stoppage of the fight.

Followers of Quarry were well aware that he is often cut but has a history of quick mending by his cornermen.

Veteran promoter George Parnassus, who watched then fight on closed-circuit television along with 14,000 others at the Forum in suburban Inglewood, said in disgust: "It was a disgrace."

"In my 50 years in boxing, I never seen a referee in an important fight such as this take the sole responsibility of stopping a fight without conferring with the ring doctor."

Robert Voit, a member of the California Athletic Commission, also at the Forum, said: "I've seen Quarry cut up twice as bad and nobody stopped the fight. I just couldn't believe it."

The crowd, however, plainly favored Ali. The cheers on his introduction were much greater than that accorded California's Quarry.

All does not appear to have lost any of his magic in Toronto where, as Cassius Clay, he pounded out a 15-round decision over Canadian champion George Chuvalo in March, 1966.

More than 11,000 paid $4.50 to $8.50 to see the closed-circuit event Monday night and cheered Ali's every move on the giant screen at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The take at the Gardens was reported to be about $50,000. But there were no cries of "fake" or "farce" when referee Peres stopped the bout.

Most agreed that slow-motion re-runs of the final round were proof enough that Ali's punches were indeed potent and Peres was wise to step in when he did.

"It's too bad it didn't go three or four more rounds," said Earl Wilson, Canadian Canadian heavyweight boxing champion, when you could tell if he (Ali) still had it. His timing was off a bit in the first round, but he sure looked good.

"It might be a different story, though, with Frazier."

The closed circuit was shown in several Canadian cities including Montreal where 4,415 showed up at seats ranging from $5 to $7. There were 2,500 at the Hull Arena, most of them paying $5 a seat although there were about 300 standees only tickets going for $1.

About 1,000 attended the fight showing in both Edmonton and Calgary while 713 saw the match in Regina. The Vancouver screening drew another 2,500.

The total of 1,672 at Winnipeg was the largest known gathering ever in the city for an event of this nature.

Soccer Head Explains Minor Club System

The following is a copy of the letter issued by Bill Hockley, president of the Belleville and District Minor Soccer Association, at a general meeting of the minor soccer body last week. In it, he attempts to clarify the meaning of the "club system," which the association hopes to adopt next season.

DEAR SIR:

In addition to the many hours of discussion that have been devoted to the explanation of the club system in soccer, perhaps the following will simplify the understanding of what it is, and how it will affect the youngsters playing under the auspices of the above association.

The club system is a bringing together of a number of boys as a team, or a number of teams as part of a club. The organization is structured so as to enable boys of like ability to play in the company of boys of similar ability. While age has a certain bearing on the placement of a boy, the ultimate criterion is the boy's own natural ability as an individual considered along with his sense of team responsibility.

Another facet of the club system is the inculcation in the boy of a sense of belonging. By playing from his initiation into the game with one particular club or team, he becomes better able to understand those he plays with, his weaknesses and strengths are better able to be assessed by those coaching him . . . the weaknesses corrected and the strengths channelled toward the ultimate goal of blending successfully as one of eleven players striving to reach harmony and understanding as a team unit.

The house league system provides "x" number of boys with an opportunity to chase a ball for 60 minutes each week. A coach has to develop and keep the boys he receives in the draw, good, bad, weak or strong. Thus he tends to overplay the strong and good players while ignoring those of lesser ability. The club system obviates this.

I must emphasize that the club system does not exclude any boy regardless of his size, age, strength or ability. All boys will play on an equal basis but will be playing in company suited to their particular ability.

I hope the foregoing will assist in the understanding of the club system. If there is any point that still is not clear either I, or the executive of the above association will be only too happy to clarify it with you.

Yours truly
William Hockley,
President 1970.

Louis Picks Frazier

ENVER (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis appeared to be more excited about a possible future heavyweight match between Mohammad Ali and Joe Frazier than in the quick Ali finish of Jerry Quarry Monday night.

Louis, co-promoter of a closed circuit television showing of the fight in Denver, said Ali, also known as Cassius Clay, looked good in his first fight in 3½ years "but is not ready to meet Frazier."

A Frazier-Ali fight, Louis said, would pair two different fighters. He said Ali, although not as fast as he used to be, has developed a much harder punch, but would have to contend with Frazier "making you fight his fight on the ropes or in the corners."

Belvedere Backstop

Defencemen Larry Potter and Jack Gilbey come to the aid of Belvedere netminder Claude Carr as Stinson forward Rick Deanard tries to jam the puck in the net during the opening game of the Quinte Hockey League schedule. The defending champion Hotelmen got a shutout from Carr to record a 5-0 victory, while Central Taxi edged Aluminum Star 3-2 in the second game of the doubleheader.

Belvedere on Right Track

Belvedere Hotel marked itself as the team to beat in the opening night of the Quinte Hockey League schedule as the defending champions came up with a 5-0 win over Stinson Construction.

In the other game played, Central Taxi nipped last year's finalists, Aluminum Star, 3-2.

Bill Goodfellow and Jack Francis paced the Belvedere attack with two goals apiece, while Jack Hughes added the final score as the Hotelmen held a wide territorial edge throughout the game.

Gene Francis, Larry Marshall and Larry Potter each picked up a pair of assists. Claude Carr earned the shutout for the winners, who drew seven of the game's nine penalties.

Tom McDonald tallied what proved to be the winning goal for Central Taxi as they edged Aluminum Star 3-2. Ted Schwager converted passes from Terry Casselman and Howard Skelly for the first marker and Grant Hagerman added an unassisted goal.

Bill Rushlow counted both of the Aluminum Star tallies with assists going to Don Moore and Dave Middleton.

Aluminum Star drew six penalties, two more than the winners.

BCI Kickers Cop Crown

BCI Seniors flexed their scoring muscles in the final game of the Bay of Quinte high school soccer schedule, while the Junior Collegians were stubbing their toes in a 2-1 loss to Quinte.

The senior Bay of Quinte champions completely dominated their contest blanking Quinte to the tune of 8-0. The win gave BCI the Quinte district championship.

Jim Lovett opened the scoring with a hard drive from the right wing and minutes later John Thompson headed a pass from Warren Rushlow into the net for BCI's second goal to close the halftime scoring.

The Collegians found the range in the second half with Peter Hillier and Rick Hogan netting a pair of goals while Charles Nestorovski, and John Thompson had one each.

The seniors now advance to the COSSA championships in Peterborough this Saturday.

The BCI juniors had their bid for a championship halted in Quinte's upset 2-1 win.

The Collegians could be the early play but couldn't convert any of their scoring chances.

Brian Kaiser opened the scoring in the second half sending BCI ahead 1-0 on a fine individual effort. Quinte took advantage of a pair of BCI defensive errors to notch two goals and the win.

The loses get a chance to redeem themselves in a play-off match with the Centennial Juniors.

Alec Gordon Plays Pipe Organ in His Home

Organist Will Mark 50 Years at Console

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The neighbors complain when S. Alec Gordon sits down to play the organ in his living room.

Their beef is not the noise, but the lack of it; their inability to tune in on a free concert as the veteran organist practises on his personal Casavant Freres pipe organ.

For 50 years Mr. Gordon has been making a joyful noise unto his Lord as a church organist and Now, 1, All Saints Day, he will celebrate the anniversary by playing a recital in Bridge St. United Church here. The proceeds will go to Nigerian hospitals.

His 50 years on the organ bench of several city churches has been "a relaxation" for Mr. Gordon, the culmination of a childhood dream.

"I always went regularly to church as a boy, and always manoeuvred my family to a pew close up and to one side so I could watch the organist and dream of one day playing an organ in a church."

Mr. Gordon began picking out tunes on the piano when he was only two or three, and began serious study of the piano when he was about eight, shortly after arriving in Belleville from his native London England.

But it was some time before he summoned up the courage to ask the organist at his church, Victoria Ave. Baptist, to give him lessons.

He earned the $1.25 for his weekly lesson by delivering newspapers on his bicycle.

At that time, he recalls, Belleville boasted two newspapers, one Liberal and one Conservative, and carrier boys delivered both, for 10 cents a week.

"In those days, you had to be careful to get the right newspaper on each doorstep, or there was trouble," he says. "We made quite a week profit on each customer."

One Saturday night when he was 15, young Alec was informed his teacher had been taken ill, and he would have to handle the music at the service next day.

It was the beginning of a career that is still in full flower for one of eastern Ontario's best known liturgical musicians.

Because the organist at Christ Church (Anglican) had not had a holiday for many years, the young organist was given a crash course in Anglican liturgical music and took over services in her church for a month.

He acted as a supply organist in nearly every church in the city until his graduation from Belleville Collegiate.

A year at Toronto Normal School followed, "so I could earn my living as a teacher and keep music for pleasure, a recreation. I never wanted to teach music; I prefer playing it."

Back in Belleville, Mr. Gordon took a permanent position at Halloway Street United Church, moved to John Street United and finally in 1937 to his present post at 11th Bridge Street United.

But he found a way to use his musical knowledge as a teacher at Ontario School for the Deaf.

Into the silent world of his pupils he introduced rhythm — the first time rhythm bands and related work was started in deaf education in Canada. It has now become a vital part of education of the deaf in all schools. Mr. Gordon retired in 1964 after 39 years as a teacher at OSD.

In 1963, Mr. Gordon realized another dream, when he had a two-manual, three-rank pipe organ installed in his living room.

"It is essentially a practice organ: I believe in a lot of practice or you lose your technique," says Mr. Gordon. "It is better than going all the way to the church to practice, and in the old days you could never be sure of less in the winter time."

An organist needs lots of stamina — not only to endure chilly churches, but also to get him through hours of athletic performances at the console, when both hands and feet are in constant action.

"At the end of a recital or a performance of an oratorio, I'm bushed," confessed the organist.

But music has its lighter moments, and on his retirement from OSD Mr. Gordon wrote a book about some he has experienced.

The slim volume, Weddings I Have Met, tells of his struggles to keep secular music out of church wedding ceremonies.

"Some music we played in the past was better suited to the stage than the church, however beautiful it is," he says. "I now play the hymn God is Now Our Sure Salvation for the processional and the Trumpet Voluntary of Purcell for the recessional. In between, for a solo, O Perfect Love is a bit hackneyed but appropriate."

But Mr. Gordon has learned to go easy on Bach, whom he terms "the Shakespeare of church music".

"People seem to be able to stand only so much of him before getting bored to death," he notes. "But I include Bach selections now and then for the few people in the congregation who like it."

The musician has seen musical sophistication increase over the years in the churches he has served. He says there should be appropriate to the house of God. So far we have been successful in keeping guitars out of Bridge St.

"Everything I play is to the glory of God. Playing is my offering to Him for the talent he has given to me."

Instrumentalists Get Valuable Experience

A new venture took place at Centennial Secondary School today from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Instrumental Enrichment Program planned for the day brought together 200 instrumental students drawn from 8 secondary schools, and the music section of the Canadian Forces Vimy Band, one of Canada's finest military bands.

The band played a concert in the morning for the students and then, under the direction of Captain Kenneth Moore, the students rehearsed with, and were assisted by the band members. The workshop brought the students into direct contact with perfoging professional musicians.

Captain Moore and his band have played concerts in many high schools and have visited music classes to the schools. Their experience and their high degree of musicianship fully qualify them to provide this unique opportunity for these students who are drawn from schools both in Hastings County and in Lennox and Addington County.

The inspiration for the workshop came first from the Quinte Arts Council's Youth Music Development Committee under the Chairmanship of Colin McLeod, Director of Education, Lennox and Addington County. This committee met with music teachers from the two counties and with representatives of the Youth and Recreation Branch of the Department of Education and of the Belleville Recreation Centre. The entire project demonstrates once again how school boards, teachers, arts council and recreation can work together for the benefit of our young people.

Wet Weather Delays Dundas Street Opening

Recent wet weather has pushed back the hoped for Nov. 18 date for opening the new Dundas Street Bridge with the end of November now set as the new target date.

City council was informed of the new date at yesterday's meeting.

At the meeting council awarded a contract for $67,814 to Lightfoot Construction Ltd. for rebuilding and paving of Bay Bridge Road south of the CPR overpass and for reconstruction of Coleman St. between Bridge Street West and Dundas.

Bay Bridge Road will be widened for 1,150 feet south of the approach to the CPR overpass and covered with full depth asphalt. Coleman Street south of Bridge will be completely reconstructed with curbs and gutters and new paving.

But in the Bay Bridge Road improvements the line of popular trees separating Zwig's Island from the mainland will have to go — for financial reasons.

The road widening will necessitate removal of the trees but the city works and parks departments hoped they could be moved rather than destroyed.

Moving of the trees was ruled out by a noted root figure of $11,000.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said it was hoped reconstruction of Bay Bridge Road and the lower end of Coleman Street could be completed this year.

The work on Coleman Street and the Bay Bridge Road will have no bearing on the opening to traffic of Dundas Street West and the new Moira River Bridge.

Contrary to what had originally been expected, it will not be necessary to detour traffic on Highland Ave. before putting the new Dundas Street roadway into use.

Traffic along the highway 2 traffic route on Highland Ave. will be continued until the two lanes of Dundas Street now under reconstruction are ready for use.

Hamilton Is Elected

Harleigh Hamilton, long-time member of the Belleville Separate School board of governors, has been elected to the Ontario Hospital Association executive.

Mr. Hamilton was one of eight new members named to the 39-member board as the OHA opened its 1970 annual meeting in Toronto Monday.

A former reeve of Sidney and Hastings County warden in 1961, Mr. Hamilton has served on the BCSH board for eight years.

In 1959 he was board chairman.

Prison Perversion Subject of Query

PICTON (Staff) — "Does prison - enforced celibacy foster homosexuality?" This question was addressed to William McCabe by a member of the Picton Kiwanis club during an open discussion last night. It was suggested that men who spend long terms in prison could perhaps become perverts before their release.

This query was probed by Mr. McCabe who explained that "situational homosexuality" does occur among a number of heterosexual men confined in one another's company. He emphasized however, that the "constitutional homosexual" is a homosexual on the streets as well as in prison. The John Howard Society worker stated that homosexuality in prisons is "not as rampant" as the press leads the public to believe.

Mr. McCabe later called conjugal visiting in prisons "the worst way to handle it". He reported that present legislation permits inmates to return home for a three - day period with approval. "This is more constructive than a few honeymoon lodges inside the walls," he added. He remarked that the three - day interval permitted inmates to travel downtown and to seek future employers.

Better Electronic Equipment Said in Need by Hospitals

TORONTO (CP) — Hospitals need better electronic equipment and better trained operators to prevent accidents the assistant director of medical engineering at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto said Monday.

Dr. A. Michael Albisser told the Ontario Hospital Association's annual convention that electronic monitors can cause shocks, burns, heart fluttering and rhythm and heart arrest.

Dr. G. Harvey Agnew, a Toronto hospital consultant, said a United States expert estimated that 20,000 persons die in the U.S. from heart arrest caused by equipment.

Dr. Albisser said, however, he thought that was an exaggeration but said there'are at least 30,000 burns a year from electronic equipment.

He said a major problem is that a piece of equipment which is safe by itself may be unsafe with other equipment.

What engineers call leakage currents may escape from one piece of equipment which can have disastrous effects for the patient tied into several machines.

Dr. Albisser said people should be well trained because even the placing of electrodes on the body can affect the operation of machines.

In a separate session, the association was told that nursing directors do not use management techniques. But a professor who trains nursing administrators disagreed with the statement.

Peter Swerhone, executive director of Winnipeg General Hospital and Shirley Stinson, professor of the University of Alberta division of health service administration, disagreed during a panel discussion.

Mr. Swerhone spoke on a study group report on nursing service, said many nursing administrators have the academic qualifications but lack training in management techniques. He said that in one hospital a message from a nursing aide had to go through seven persons to reach the top nurse, and by the time it arrived it was distorted.

He said too many hospital procedures are designed for the convenience of doctors, not of patients.

Prof. Stinson said too often nurses are encouraged to learn and then are unable to apply that learning.

She disagreed with a recommendation from the study-group report quoted by Mr. Swerhone which said that nurses and nursing service should be evaluated.

"You cannot evaluate nursing in a vacuum. It's like trying to measure the quality of a cake by measuring the butter in it."

Prof. Stinson said there is a danger of reaching simplistic conclusions. She said the study-group report seemed to concentrate on symptoms rather than causes.

She said it is impossible to use industrial or business techniques.

The producer today takes the risks that one of his products is defective and the consumer takes the risk that it may be so, but "in hospitals we can't have that degree of consumer risk."

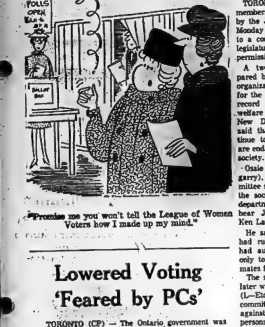
Mr. Swerhone said 50 per cent of a hospital's budget is spent on nursing and he thinks nursing has been handled efficiently.

He said nursing directors are managers, "whether you want to be called that or not," and should be trained to handle people as well as finances.

Dr. David Turner, a nutrition researcher, at the Sick Children's, spoke to the convention about how knowledge gained from the space program can benefit the general population.

One instance he quoted was how it was discovered that freeze-drying can destroy most vitamins in food.

Dr. Robert McClure, a medical doctor and moderator of the United Church of Canada, told delegates of Ontario and Million Words, president of Toronto senior citizens.



He said the civil rights of senior citizens are being destroyed because of "injustices and inhumanities" imposed by officials of the department of social and family services.

Mr. Braithwaite said many senior citizens would have appeared before the committee with complaints except for fear they would lose their subsidized housing.

The attitude of fear of reprisals that permeates all elderly citizen housing units is the greatest abuse of civil liberties, Mr. Braithwaite said.

But the greatest damage was done by the officials of welfare agencies who check the financial position of the elderly time after time, against every possible new benefit they might receive.

"Pardon me you won't tell the League of Women Voters how I made up my mind."

Opposition Raps PCs for 'Social Injustice'

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty members of groups represented by the Just Society showed up Monday to tell their grievances to a committee of the Ontario legislature but were refused permission to speak.

A two-page statement prepared by the Just Society, an organization claiming to work for the poor, was read into the record by Margaret Reginnick, welfare critic for the Ontario New Democratic Party. She said that politicians who continue to ignore citizen groups are endangering themselves and society.

Ossie Villeneuve (PC—Glengarry), chairman of the committee studying the estimates of the social and family services department, refused earlier to hear Just Society spokesman Ken Lahay.

He said the legislature clerk had ruled that the committee had authority from the house only to consider spending estimates for 1970.

The same ruling was applied later when Leonard Braithwaite (L—Etobicoke) tried to get the committee to hear complaints against the treatment of retired persons in government housing.

Mrs. Renwick said the Just Society brief said the Ontario government "has no excuse for its contemptible failure to use the Canada Assistance Plan to provide a life of basic human decency for Ontario's people."

It accused John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, of hiding the fact that welfare payments are inadequate to meet health standards for food or to buy clothing after rents are paid.

The Ontario government pays nothing towards the cost of drugs, dental needs or glasses for persons on general welfare, although there is federal money available for this, and municipal governments take their lead from the province and also refuse vital services, it said.

The brief said Mr. Yaremko had not told the truth when he told the legislature recently that his department does not have a special investigations unit. It said there is one, headed by John Biel, identified as an ex-RCMP officer.

Conservatives on the estimates committee defeated 8 to 3 an attempt by Leonard Braithwaite (L—Etobicoke) to delay voting money for homes for the elderly until outside witnesses were heard.

Mr. Braithwaite wanted budget approval withheld until the committee heard Alan Borovoy, Canadian Civil Liberties Association; J. J. Loretta, president of the United Senior Citizens of Ontario; and Million Words, president of Toronto senior citizens.

He said the civil rights of senior citizens are being destroyed because of "injustices and inhumanities" imposed by officials of the department of social and family services.

Mr. Braithwaite said many

Bales Target of Lewis Attack

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Human Rights Commission is badly in need of a "shaking up," Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party Leader, told the Ontario legislature Monday night.

"In one instance after another," Mr. Lewis said," there are just too many cases where injustices brought to the commission are not satisfactorily resolved."

"My impression is that the entire Human Rights Commission needs a shaking up," he said, adding that what began as an exciting experience "has begun to falter."

Opening its party's attack on the labor department estimates, Mr. Lewis referred to what he described as 17 cases of mistreatment of Indians in Northern Ontario by Ontario Provincial Police which remain unresolved after a year.

"Nobody is sure what happened to these cases," he said.

Earlier, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said many of these cases had been investigated and the complaints found to be "totally baseless."

Mr. Lewis demanded an accounting of every case by Labor Minister Dalton Bales, whose department administers the commission.

Mr. Lewis drew the wrath of Mr. Bales when he accused the minister of catering to corporate pressures by not proclaiming regulations of the Employment Standards Act approved last spring. The act provides that employers give notice of layoffs, or plant shutdowns.

Mr. Lewis said the minister's action was without parallel in the history of "any other ministry in his province."

Mr. Bales jumped angrily to his feet to denounce the remark as a slur and insinuation.

"I am never adverse to real criticism . . . but I resent that kind of remark being made to me as a member of this house."

When Mr. Bales was ruled out of order, Mr. Lewis continued his attack by saying the minister has "to genuflect before the corporate state . . . before you proclaim one law."

Lowered Voting 'Feared by PCs'

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government was accused in the legislature Monday of refusing to lower the voting age to 18 because it fears youth will vote against it in the next provincial election, expected in 1971.

Speakers for both opposition parties made the charge during debate of a private member's bill to lower the voting age to 18 from 21.

Paul Yeoung (NDP-Toronto Yorkview), who introduced the bill, said the only conclusion to be reached from the government's hesitancy in lowering the age is that it knows youth has "not opted to vote Tory in the next election."

Private members bills to not come to a vote but are "talked out" during debate.

Editing of Television Film Concern of John Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts expressed concern Monday about the difficulties of editing film if television cameras were permitted in the Ontario legislature.

"I'm not anxious to have one of my speeches edited," he told the house, adding without elaboration that "some of us have unfortunate" experiences in this area.

Mr. Robarts said providing live coverage of major debates or events in the house presented no problems, except for the discomfort of members caused by the hot television lights.

But the problem arose on day-to-day coverage, where editing would be required to fit into tight television schedules.

"Who's to decide what's to be broadcast?" Mr. Robarts asked.

"Newspapers do this (editing) all the time," interjected Walter Pitman (NDP—Peterborough).

"I'm only pointing out some of the practical difficulties," Mr. Robarts replied.

Live television coverage has been provided in the past of such key events as the throne speech debate involving the party leaders.

But the premier said it would be "impractical and I don't think proper to have the cameras in here all the time."

However, he said the question of television coverage of the legislature was "still wide open."

Reiterating a position he outlined last spring, Mr. Robarts said the question should be decided by the "whole house" and not the government "because it has rather large ramifications."

Mr. Robarts promised to consider Liberal Leader Robert Nixon's suggestion of an all-party committee to look into the problem.

Judge 'Tried Everything'

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Judge J. V. Fregeau is a former mayor of this Northern Ontario community who says that sending Indians to jail "doesn't do any good, but it takes them out of circulation."

"I probably extend their lives 15 years," he said in a recent interview. "They are warm, clothed, and well fed in jail. Some never had it better."

Judge Fregeau says he has "tried everything I know," and if there is a better way to deal with the Indian problem in his area "you tell me the answer."

"The Indian here is a different breed of cat. It seems like this has been the dumping ground for the worst."

Jack Doner, a civil rights lawyer and close friend of local Indians, says the judge "is a fair and just person."

"His remarks are the result of a decade of frustration where he has tried everything ever suggested about dealing with native people.

"I agree jail isn't the answer. But what is the alternative when we must act within the law which applies to all Canadians?"

Both men were commenting on Indian women Doris Henry, 23, and Agnes Land, 29, who were sentenced—one to 12 months definite and six months indeterminate and the other to nine months definite and six months indeterminate —for breaking $3,000 worth of windows on nearby White Dog Reserve last August.

The Ojibway women are serving sentences at Vanier Institute for Women at Brantford, about 1,200 miles south of here.

A social worker at the institute says their cases are "shocking."

"How can we rehabilitate someone like this, if rehabilitated is the word? We know nothing about their life and they know nothing of ours."

F. J. Hare, area supervisor of Indian Affairs at Kenora, says that Treaty No. 3 is the Indian's pledge "in all respects to obey and abide by the law."

Chief Roy Mcdonald of the White Dog Reserve says, however, that sections of the treaty are not upheld by the whites.

"That treaty also promises schools for our people but today 40 children are not in school because there is no room for them," he says.

Shipping Pollution Controls Would Be Toughest in World

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Don Jamieson answered pollution hawks Monday as the Commons gave second reading to a bill which gives the government sweeping powers to control oil tankers in Canadian waters.

Ending five hours of debate on the bill, Mr. Jamieson conceded there was a natural feeling it does not go far enough.

"In ideal terms, perhaps, various parts of the measure should be extended," he said.

But, he added, some MPs have already supplied the correct answer to the charge in that "we have gone further unilaterally in this particular area than any other country on the face of the earth."

"What we have done is to stretch our jurisdiction to the outer limits."

The bill, which amends the Canada Shipping Act, imposes anti-pollution controls on all tankers entering Canadian fishing zones — jurisdiction going beyond territorial-water limits but much less than the 100-mile anti-pollution zones established by legislation last spring for the Canadian Arctic.

Offering reasons for the more limited approach in his bill, Mr. Jamieson said circumstances in the North are different and the same powers are not required.

"If we were to extend the so-called pollution zones 200 miles to sea off, for example, the East Coast, it would be tremendously difficult for us to try to investigate which vessels, among the enormous amount of shipping in that region, were heading for Canadian ports."

The minister offered, however, to consider any suggestions to strengthen the bill in the special Commons committee on environmental pollution which now will study the measure.

Opposition speakers continued to give the bill their general approval but they were also ready with numerous suggestions for more effective pollution control.

Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore) advocated creation of an international pollution control commission to deal with joint U.S.-Canadian pollution issues. Mr. Crouse said the Shipping Act amendments are weak in that they are not based on international agreement.

Also introduced for second reading Monday was a government bill providing for stringent new controls on investment companies, enterprises which borrow from the public for purposes of re-investment.

Debate Next Week

Emergency Powers Act Upcoming

OTTAWA (CP) — New legislation to replace the powerful War Measures Act will be introduced by early next week, the Commons was told Monday, and in the meantime the government is prepared to stand or fall on the action it took to combat terrorism in Quebec.

Faced with another round of questions about events in Quebec leading to invoking the act, Prime Minister Trudeau told the House the government acted "on the facts as we interpreted them."

And as his supporters banged their desks in approval, he added: "On this, the government will stand or fall."

The latest official statements he made in the Commons, Mr. Trudeau said the decision to use the act was based on facts now known to the public, although "it may be that we will have further facts to communicate to the House."

He said the facts are clear.

"We had from the authorities from the province of Quebec and the city of Montreal an apprehended insurrection." He also referred to large-scale thefts of dynamite and small arms.

It was Justice Minister John Turner who told the Commons new legislation to replace the act will come before the House by early next week, perhaps later this week. He later told reporters it likely will produce "pretty severe debate" and besides dealing specifically with the FLQ will provide measures for dealing with future civil disturbances.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) told reporters there are numerous indications that a repressive mood has developed through Canada as a result of the act. He said the British Columbia government had already passed a restrictive measure dealing with teachers and Vancouver city council was considering plans to outlaw all radical groups there.

Gold Mines Need Subsidy

OTTAWA (CP) — Most gold mines in Canada would have to close down if assistance were abruptly ended, Resources Minister J. J. Greene told the Commons Monday.

Even with the current scale of government aid, three mines have been shut down this year and two others have indicated they will close in the next few months, Mr. Greene said.

CBC TV Film Is Criticized

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was asked Monday to have the CBC cancel a program, scheduled for showing tonight, entitled Documentary for Revolution: Legacy of Lenin.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—South Shore) asked in the Commons whether State Secretary Gerard Pelletier felt such a program is appropriate while Canada is "experiencing the agony of revo-

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Mood Pills Have Place

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My doctor says if I don't improve he is going to prescribe what he calls "mood pills." Just what are they? Do you believe in them? I've lost confidence in them. — Mrs. U.

Comment: I believe a patient should take the medicine (and advice) of any qualified medical doctor. Unless you have reasons to disbelieve in him, it is better to find someone else.

Now, first question: what are "mood" pills? There are many kinds. We call them psychotropics. I don't know what type of medication your doctor is considering in your case.

Are you "up"? (Then he may want you to take medicine to bring you "down." For example, sedatives or tranquillizers.) Are you "down?" Then he may give you a stimulant to bring you "up."

For example, here is Mrs. D., who has been depressed. The doctor will try to find the reason and correct it. Meanwhile, he may prescribe pills that will give her spirits a lift. In other words, a change of mood from low to higher.

On the other hand, here is Mr. H. He cannot relax. He can't sleep. He is wound up. What to do? As in Mrs. D.'s case, it's important to discover the reason for his living in tension.

But meanwhile the patient needs to be quieted down. So the doctor has him take tranquilizers during the day and a sleeping pill before bedtime. He wants to change his mood from one of hyperactivity to one of more normal calm.

Estimate is that nearly half of all adults in the United States have used mood-changing drugs at one time or other, and about one in four is still using them.

To name their common use, they are tranquillizers, sedatives and stimulants. (Of course, use of indicated mood pills only under a doctor's direction. There's always potential trouble abrewing when people treat themselves.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What are the most common causes of colic in an infant? — Mrs. V.

Comment: One baby is overfed and gets colic; another has pains because of underfeeding. Here is a baby that eats too fast and gets air in the bowel. Result: colic. Another reason is inability to take a formula because of allergy and food intolerance.

But one reason often present is uncommon anxiety in the mother. It is because she is so frightened in the care of her baby (usually the first) that she may overlook important details which contribute to colic. Besides, anxiety is "catching."

* * *

For Mrs. M.: On general principles I'm against too rapid weight reduction by the use of starvation diets. But recently another danger has crept into this reducing fad: The use of combinations of drugs prescribed by some physicians.

For example, some patients take thyroid, digitalis, amphetamine (pep pills) diuretics (fluid removers) and laxatives — every day — to help shed the excess weight fast.

In some cases the use of these drugs has caused serious heart abnormalities. As I keep saying, the best way is to lose weight gradually — and sensibly. Besides if you lose fast the chances are you will regain fast. Your weight will go up and down like a Yo-Yo.

* * *

For Mrs. C.: When an apparently healthy infant suddenly begins to vomit, has weight loss and suffers from constipation or diarrhea and the doctor finds an enlargement in the region of the stomach called the pylorus — the usual diagnosis is "pyloric stenosis." It is relieved by surgery. Dangerous? And operation is.

But Dr. Martin J. Bell of Louisville, Ky., reported a series of 300 patients (ages 4 to 114 days) who had the operation. The only mortality was in a premature baby which had been symptomless from the second day of life.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very satisfying improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . rectal reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was accompanied by loss of long standing, and (not important of all, results were so thorough that the use of cortisone was minimized over a period of TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The pressure is off for the moment. Move to offset any recurrent established pressures devices. Attend to health conditions, start new diets. Have a bit of fun this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Approach unfinished business with enthusiasm. Get it done as you can. Then pause and meditate, as the evening promises many interesting possibilities.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Attend to legal matters. Read serious efforts to understand family disputes and get matters into a more even level. The latter hours provide news to digest.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Things slow down a little so you can establish some order, make better estimates of projects, eliminate complications. There's no time to waste despite conditions.

Tradition in Doubt

Democrats Having Tough Time to Match Republican Image

WASHINGTON (CP) — Heavily in debt and lacking clear-cut leadership at the top, the Democratic party in the United States is battling hard to maintain an old American tradition in next Tuesday's election.

Tradition is that the president's party—in this case, the Republicans—loses ground in Congress in mid-term elections. In the 37 mid-term elections since 1910, the president's party has lost on average of 35 seats in the House of Representatives, with comparable losses in the Senate.

Democratic prospects of matching that average in this year's voting appear slim. But a week before the election, most polls and observers agree that President Nixon is again likely to find himself dealing with Democratic majorities in both House and Senate in the next Congress.

In the 1968 elections, the Democrats wound up with 248 of the 435 House seats versus 180 for the Republicans, and with 57 Senate seats versus 43 for the Republicans.

But they lost the presidency and found themselves victims of another tradition—the eclipse of the losing presidential candidate.

Unlike the Canadian system, which assigns a continuing role and on-going publicity to the loser as leader of the opposition, the American election process sends the presidential loser skimming toward oblivion.

The Democrats' Hubert Humphrey is trying to make a comeback this year by regaining a Senate seat in Minnesota. He has lost almost all his previous claims to being national leader of the Democratic party.

Vice-presidential candidate Edmund S. Muskie is leadership material, but he, too, is involved in his own Senate election campaign in Maine. So is another Democratic prominent, Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

One Democrat who has been carrying much of the campaign load for these elections is Lawrence F. O'Brien, 53-year-old national chairman of the party. But O'Brien made his reputation, by managing the campaigns for both John F. Kennedy and Robert Kennedy and his status is more that of the party functionary than the moral leader.

It is O'Brien, however, who has had to be most concerned about the Democrats' empty coffers. The party ended the 1968 election heavily in debt and O'Brien estimates the Democrats still owe more than $9 million nationally, most of it for television advertising.

The Democrats have often complained, indeed, have even made a virtue of their poverty compared with what they like to regard as the fat-cat Republicans, whose party funds are patriated as being replenished by monopoly businessmen and wealthy Park-avenuers.

There are obvious advantages to such a portrait for a party which proclaims its allegiance to the poor and the working class. But the current financial crisis has gone beyond the point where the Democrats feel able to find electoral comfort in it.

An added problem for the Democrats in the current elections is their fear that a pillar of Democratic support—the laborers and blue-collar workers—has weakened.

Both Republicans and political observers have noted inconsistency at the novelty of hard-hat construction workers lining up behind Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"You should see the new girl at the office!... I don't think I've ever seen a member of the opposite sex that was so opposite."

Lindsay Says Nixon Deserts Party Principles

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John V. Lindsay has charged that President Nixon is personally accountable for introducing the tactics of fear into campaign efforts to eliminate his political opponents in next Tuesday's congressional elections.

"This is one of the few campaigns in memory in which men apparently seek not merely to defeat their opponents but literally to eliminate them from our public life," the mayor said.

Lindsay, a registered Republican, accused the Republican president and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew of abandoning party principles to claim "that opposition to their policies somehow is an incitement to unrest and violence."

"It is the voice of national leadership—backed by writers, researchers and senior advisers from the White House and by the president of the United States," he said, "It strangely echoes the frightening voice of the Rs when 'soft on communism' was the all-purpose weapon."

Lindsay, who has repeatedly denied rumors that he might switch his party affiliation, said: "I believe that America and the Republican party traditionally stand for honorable goals honorably sought.

"But when the president and his lieutenants tell us to be afraid, when they pretend that respected candidates condone violence—as though Weathermen were running in this election—then they are deserting the essential principles of both country and party."

The mayor defended by name five liberal Democrats and one liberal Republican who, he said were being unjustly attacked. They were Democratic Senators Albert Gore of Tennessee, Vance Hartke of Indiana and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts; Rep., Joseph Duffey, Democratic candidate for senate from Connecticut; Senator Ralph Yarborough, who lost in the Texas Democratic primary, and Republican Senator Charles E. Goodell of New York, whom Lindsay has previously endorsed.

Foreign Funds Help Create Jobs: Randall

TORONTO (CP) — Economic nationalists believe that Canada's problems can be solved if companies were owned by Canadians, Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, said Monday.

Speaking to the Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto, Mr. Randall said "theirs is a shell game designed to manipulate public opinion for narrow political advantage."

"The simple fact is nationality alone doesn't create jobs."

Mr. Randall said current federal policies are inadequate for creating a business climate in which Canadian and foreign capital "can be used to build a better society for all of us."

He called for:

—A national taxation policy that strikes a balance between equity and growth, and provides essential revenue at provincial and municipal levels.

—A national housing policy for low- and middle-income families—long-term goals for mortgage financing that "can't be turned on and off by the federal authorities."

—A national policy on foreign investment that "spells out once and for all the rules of the game, so that we can get on with creating the vitally-needed jobs in this country."

—A national resource development policy that can foster use of resources for all Canadians.

—A national regional expansion program that balances growth in all areas.

—A national trade development program to stimulate exports.

Text of his address was released in advance of delivery.

Specialists Plan Leaving Quebec

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. George Windek of Montreal, president of the Quebec Medical Association, said Monday many Quebec specialists are planning to leave the province—more than in August now.

In Toronto at the invitation of the Ontario Medical Association to report on the present position of the Quebec physicians, Dr. Windek said the specialists will not renew their fight with the government over medical insurance, while the political situation remains unstable.

The specialists went on strike Oct. 8, except for emergency service, in 28 of Quebec's 29 hospitals. But most had returned by Oct. 19.

The provincial government passed a bill Oct. 18 setting severe penalties for doctors who did not return to work, but Dr. Windek said this was not the reason for the return.

"They went back to work because they were told violence might erupt that would demand full medical attention.

He said the doctors now feel the government took advantage of them by using the climate of tension to "ram something down our throats we wouldn't otherwise have accepted."

Noticeable signs of doctors, leaving the province will not be seen until next summer, Dr. Windek said, because it takes time for them to relocate.

Few Ounce Loss Of Brake Fluid Instant Trouble

The complete hydraulic brake system contains about 16 ounces of fluid. The loss of only a few ounces of this vital fluid spells instant brake failure.

Rubber cups about the size of a 25-cent piece act as seals inside the master cylinder and the four-wheel cylinders to prevent brake fluid from seeping out of the hydraulic system.

Each time the brakes are applied the rubber cups slide under great pressure along the metal bores of the various cylinders. As with tires, eventually these cups wear to the point when replacement is necessary. Condensation and excessive heat also lead to, deterioration.

A visual glance readily detects worn tires, whereas the hydraulic cylinders must be dismantled and inspected internally before defects can be definitely established.

Just one minute hole in the network of steel and rubber lines used in the hydraulic system means instant brake failure. These lines are exposed to all the elements, plus any objects that may be thrust at them by the retaling wheels. I have seen them rusted to one-tenth of their original thickness — ready to blow open under the severe pressure generated by a panic stop.

By no means am I condemning hydraulic brakes, a system that has been standard equipment on all domestic cars since 1928. When properly maintained it is far more efficient and much less troublesome than the maze of steel rods, cables, cross shafts and the like that were used originally.

In the old days, merely attempting to adjust the brakes properly was often a major challenge, and even after this was accomplished the mechanism could seize or freeze solid in cold weather. Undoubtedly, hydraulically - operated brakes have prevented far more accidents than they have caused.

But the point is that regardless of the efficiency of the hydraulic system, it cannot and will not last the life of the average car.

Though worn brake linings seldom cause complete brake failure, when the brakes need attention many motorists are willing to only replace the worn linings. Sometimes they will authorize repairs to scored brake drums or questionable wheel cylinders. But a garageman who suggests doing the master cylinder is often accused of over-selling, or the customer may tell him it is working fine.

Advertisements offering brake relines at a set figure frequently lead to confusion. Many motorists do not realize that the price quoted includes only new linings and the labor to install them. Overhauling the hydraulic system and other related items could well amount to double or more the cost of just replacing the brake linings.

The apathetic attitude towards preventive maintenance is a major contributing factor to our highway carnage. But how do we reach the motorist and convince him of the need of periodic inspection of his vehicle?

Perhaps we should follow part of the rigid training program given to aircraft pilots. Before being granted a pilot's license they must prove to the authorities that they have a good mechanical knowledge of the aircraft they propose to fly. Perhaps the authorities should use the same approach when we apply for or renew our driver's license.

Ignorance is not an acceptable excuse when we disobey the rules of the road, but it is a strange twist how seldom the driver is charged after he is involved in an accident which was triggered by sudden brake failure.

To minimize the chance of sudden brake failure, insist on the hydraulic wheel cylinders being dismantled and repaired as necessary each time the brake linings are replaced. At the same time, make sure the network of steel and rubber brake lines is thoroughly inspected.

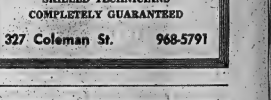
Care of Auto's Glass Important in Winter

The following suggestions for auto glass maintenance are offered by Karl K. Alberti, auto glass replacement manager for Libbey-Owens-Ford.



- Keep windows clean. A dirty windshield, rear window or sidelights impairs vision. Dirt accumulation may form a grit that scratches the glass when it is moved.
- Knock off ice wiper blades in winter, to maintain the efficiency of the wipers.
- Replace broken or cracked windshields immediately. Clear, unobstructed vision is important at all times.
- Never use abrasive cleaners such as rubbing compound on the inside of the rear window if it is the defogging type. The lines on the glass surface carry an electrical current and damaging them can break the circuit.
- Don't use glass as a handle to slam door. This undue stress may break the glass.
- Inspect the weatherstripping regularly to prevent scratches from wornout stripping. If the rolling mechanism binds, have it inspected and repaired to prevent the glass from rubbing internal door parts.

Safety Check Not All Answer

By RAY STANLEY

Keep three things in mind when vacationing on a long-distance vehicle. First, the price paid for the car, plus insurance, is necessary regular, regular purchase price.

Next, when the automotive complied the list of components to be inspected during a recent, these inspections, they were connected only about safety. A vehicle may readily pass this test and yet under certain conditions be the source of annoyance, if there are rear, dealer, tools and other things in the way for best well collapse.

Many food deals have been made when the purchaser assumed that a mechanical fitness certificate included the vehicle was in excellent condition.

Finally, during a used car, regardless of the make, all these certificates, issue car by a responsible mechanic — for a thorough examination — including the body for substantial rust. Then ask for an appraisal, make no purchase for a month before buying privately, or from a dealer, made the deposit or plan terms until this all-important inspection — need new cars placed. If the vendor will not cooperate, don't buy the car. It'll likely be down a thoroughly in- pairs.

For those seeking transportation a car machine of low and six-cylinder imported and domestic compacts and sub-compacts, the Datsun 1600 — Canada's number one rally- ning car. With winter on its way, before to make sure your car heater is functioning properly.

Other passengers in the front seat are comfortable but those in the back seat are cold. Your hum up the heat in it doesn't in there is the heat in the back. The hot gets hotter and the cold stay cold.

One reason for this may be a faulty under-seat. Generally the heat flow is designed to travel under the front seat to the rear compartment. If there are rear, dealer, tools and other things in the way for best well

Windshield Wiper Work

When the snow and the freezing rain and other natural winter plagues occur, the driver of this vehicle will be seeing the road ahead. Le Capitol, a mechanic at Stevenson Ford Sales Ltd., replaces old wiper blades with new ones — good winter insurance.

Don't Delay Winterizing Much Longer

Any time now we can expect the mercury to plunge well below freezing and vehicles that have not been tuned and made ready for cold weather may be difficult or impossible to start. As well, insufficient antifreeze in the cooling system can result in split radiators, cracked cylinder heads or engine blocks.

Frequently the engine must be replaced when solid ice has formed inside the cooling jacket. With the average car this could mean an expense of $500 or more.

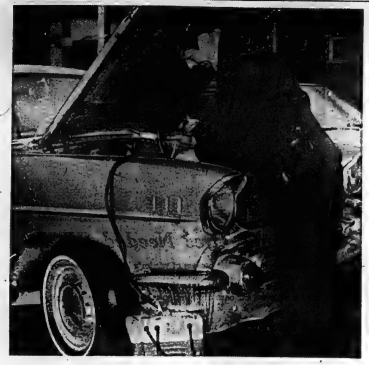
Rather than operate on a preventive maintenance program many motorists put off preparing their cars for winter until the first cold snap. The other day, a service station manager told me that only about one-third of his customers had come in for their fall check-up. "The rest of them wait until the first snowstorm or sudden cold spell before having their cars serviced," he said. "Then they all come in at once demanding immediate attention, but we can't begin to handle the sudden rush of business."

In my garage days I dreaded every snowstorm, or when the mercury dropped to around zero. As I opened shop in the early morning the phones were ringing — and they were still ringing when, completely exhausted, I locked up in the evening.

It was impossible to cope with more than a quarter of the service calls, most of which were: "I'm in a hurry, my car can't start. Bring a booster-battery, right away." Many of the customers we did get started in the morning were back on the phone again in the evening demanding the same service.

An hour or so after opening shop, every booster-battery in the place was dead. While waiting for them to be recharged, my staff frequently would go out in their own cars and use their batteries to boost the non-starters. Spending the best part of the day on service calls disrupts the shop's routine and often after working in the cold and damp from morning until night I would wind up losing money. To add to all this misery, we were sometimes accused of overcharging for a service call.

It is an established fact that repair costs per mile are much less for motorists who stick rigidly to a preventive maintenance plan. Apart from the aggravation of mechanical failure — arriving late for work or important business appointments — a neglected car can lead to sudden loss of control.



Nothing is more frustrating than starting failure on a frigid morning, and while today's chassis are amazingly reliable they will not go on indefinitely without attention. You may get by with a "leave-well-enough-alone" attitude in warm weather, but in sub-zero temperatures an engine must be thoroughly tuned to minimize starting problems.

Despite this fact, countless motorists will waste thousands of dollars on service calls this winter before facing the inevitable and having their vehicles serviced.

Maintaining a vehicle is mighty expensive even under the best of conditions, but waiting until a component fails completely can double or treble repair costs.

A Tough Grind

Do your standard transmission gears grind on a cold winter morning? The likely cause is that your gear lubricant is too heavy for the temperature, especially when starting out. Have your favorite mechanic check the condition.

Charging for Winter

One of the most important parts in a car in winter and one of the most embarrassing and troublesome problems when it does not work, is the battery. Elmer Prest, at Eric Watkins Texaco, changes a battery for continued service through the winter.

Volvo's reputation for holding up wasn't earned by breaking down.

Stay Alert

Motorists are not the only ones who use the streets and highways. Pedestrians often jaywalk, children hidden by parked cars dart into the street, cyclists sometimes ride as if they were in an empty field, and animals give little heed to traffic.

All such irresponsible behavior is aggravated during bad weather, when people become more impatient.

Keep your eyes moving to spot these potential emergencies. Don't depend on others to know the safety rules.

brake linings and hydraulic wheel cylinders) just a week prior to this failure, the master cylinder was reported to be in good condition.

"My car is five years old and the out-of-town mechanic who replaced the faulty master cylinder told me he has seen them fail occasionally after two years of service, and fairly frequently after five years.

"He proved his point by dismantling the old master cylinder and showing me the worn parts. Never before have I been told of the need to replace an aging master cylinder. I thought that all was well, providing the reservoir was filled with brake fluid. Along with my three passengers I could have been killed learning this lesson.

"This slipshod method of repairing the brake system is deplorable. The new unit was worth only $24 — a small price to pay to save four people from death or injury. It should be mandatory that parts that can lead to sudden loss of control be serviced at necessary intervals." — Mr. T. T., Toronto.

Out hit-and-miss approach to maintaining the hydraulic brake system in Canada is nothing short of a national disgrace. Rather than give any thought to preventive maintenance, frequently the hydraulic system is allowed to slowly deteriorate until it suddenly fails before it is overhauled — if the vehicle and driver still exist.

An alarming number of fatalities or serious injuries recorded in my accident files were triggered by sudden brake failure. In most instances the accidents occurred as a result of neglected hydraulic brake systems.

The reason for this needless death and destruction is that few motorists are aware that the hydraulic brake system cannot go on indefinitely without maintenance work. And even less motorists haven't a clue as to what takes place when they press on the brake pedal.

Here is a brief outline about how the hydraulic brake system functions. By means of a pushrod the brake pedal is coupled to the master cylinder which, along with the rest of the hydraulic system, is filled with brake fluid. Applying the brakes moves a plunger type of mechanism inside the master cylinder.

This action builds up pressure and causes movement of brake fluid inside a network of steel and rubber brake lines. Each road wheel contains a smaller hydraulic cylinder, the wheel cylinder, to which a brake line is fastened. The pressure generated by applying the brakes causes other plunger-type devices inside the wheel cylinders to push hard against the brake shoes.

In turn, these half-moon shaped steel brake shoes, which are faced with asbestos linings, press against the brake drums to slow or stop the vehicle.

Electric System Is Fire Source

Most engine compartment fires are caused by short circuits in the electrical system. Should you experience such a fire, immediately pull the leak handle out of the trunk, wrap protective cloth around it and rip loose any burning wires. Then, if you have a fire extinguisher, smother the burning wires with a coat or similar heavy article of clothing. Never use water or attempt to grab the wires with your hands.

If the fire is beyond control, hurry as far away from the car as you can in case the gas tank explodes.

Care Avoids Trouble

Keeping all of your car's components in good working order is your best insurance against emergencies caused by equipment failure. But should critical equipment fail, due to neglect or unforeseen circumstances, it is vital to know how to react, says the National Safety Council.

Four situations that could confront a driver and prove disastrous are:

— Stuck gas pedal
— Brake failure
— Blowout
—Fire in engine compartment

If your gas pedal becomes stuck to the floor board, simply turn off the ignition, put the car in neutral and step. If your car has power steering and brakes, these components will work harder so be prepared for the occurrence.

Should you step on the brake and the pedal sinks to the floor, try pumping to build up pressure. If there is no pressure, coast in gear and use the hand brake. For quicker stops, shift into a lower forward gear.

If all of these precautions fail, look for something to sideswipe such as a guard rail, a snow bank or parked car. Use your horn and lights to warn other motorists or pedestrians that you are out of control.

If you experience a blowout, keep a firm grip on the steering wheel and avoid slamming on the brakes or you risk losing control of the car. A smooth pumping of the brakes is recommended. Then pull off the road at the nearest safe spot.

Anti-freeze Check

When the mercury drops to 20 to 30 below zero this winter, the motorist who owns this car will be safe from cracking his engine glock because Elliott Motors mechanic, John McMechan, checked his radiator.

Driver Is Still Crash Culprit

By RAY STAPLEY

There are four elements involved in our highway carnage — the car, the driver, the highway, and enforcement of regulations.

Progress is being made in car design. Improvements such as dual master cylinders, collapsible steering columns, padded interiors, four-way emergency signal flashers, and a safety harness for each car occupant, now are standard equipment on all new cars sold in Canada.

Though highway design still leaves much to be desired, improvements are gradually taking place, and when we adjust our driving to road and traffic conditions we are reasonably safe on our Canadian network of roadways.

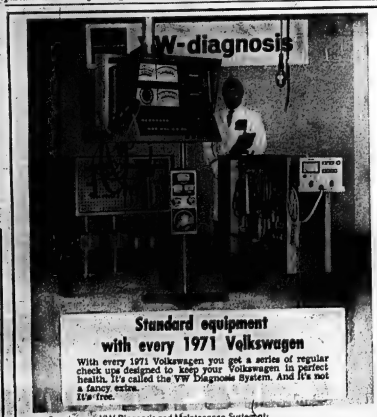
But the most important issue of all, the driver, continues to be practically ignored. Since it is an established fact that he is the prime culprit, why is the driver almost excluded in our way on highway safety?

The answer is all too obvious. The authorities should insist that beginners successfully pass a full-scale, comprehensive driver-training program before granting them driving privileges. Professional skid-control training should be compulsory. Psychiatrists and behavioral psychologists should be on hand to work with the belligerent driver and those who are too easily distracted, or take their emotional reactions out on their car.

To cope with new or revised traffic rules and changing driving conditions, there is a need for mandatory upgrading of driving skills every few years. As well, there must be far more stringent traffic laws.

As with practically everything else, safety is based on economics and it seems there is just not enough money to go around. With this in mind, perhaps it would be wiser to take half of the millions being pumped into the near-impossible task of producing a crash-proof vehicle and channel it into teaching people to drive defensively. Then legislate compulsory inspection of motor vehicles twice yearly and watch the fatalities diminish.

SLOWPOKE DANGEROUS



The slowpoke on the expressway is just as dangerous as the speeder. If traffic streams past you or you are leading a slow line-up in your lane, speed up or get off the expressway. You are a hazard when you block traffic.

Carburetor Adjustment Vital

Clarke White, a mechanic at Motorland Chrysler Plymouth Ltd., adjusts the carburetor of vehicle in Motorland's service department. Well-operating carburetor is essential in winter driving for quick starts and smooth running.

Dragging Brakes Costly Problem

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"I have a 1967 station wagon equipped with self - adjusting power brakes. Recently, after driving on the highway for some time I stopped to buy gas and then smelled rubber burning. I checked and found the front wheels were normally warm but the rears were too hot to touch. As the tire treads were worn, I assumed that they could be the source of excessive heat generation. New tires were installed, but the overheating continued after another 10 miles of driving.

"A mechanic diagnosed the problem as either sticking parking - brake cables, sluggish brakeshoe action, defective self-adjusting brake mechanism or worn rear-axle bearings. They were checked and repaired as necessary. The problem persisted and, in desperation, the mechanic removed the self-adjusting brake mechanism from the rear wheels, but still the overheating persists. Another mechanic said the problem had to be sticking pistons in the rear-wheel cylinders. Overhauling them showed no improvement.

"Finally, I took the vehicle to a Ford dealer who suggested there was insufficient free-pedal adjustment between the brake pedal and the master cylinder. They inspected the brake system, but the only fault found was weak brakeshoe return springs — which were replaced. Still no cure.

"To date I have spent $175 — for nothing. Have you any ideas about the basic cause of my problem." — Mr. R. F. T., Scarborough, Ont.

While plain tire treads can lead to dangerous tire failure, under normal driving conditions and with correct inflation they cannot be responsible for the overheating of the rear wheels.

It appears that you have inspected and repaired all the elements that could normally be the course of your problem. There are, however, a few other points that should not be overlooked when the usual trouble areas appear to be functioning properly.

Another reader contacted me recently and he had been plagued with much the same problem. It turned out that faulty internal components in one section of the dual master cylinder caused the rear brakes to drag, which in turn over-heated the rear wheels. A new master cylinder was the solution.

Another oft-beat cause of the rear brakes dragging is a bent or pinched steel brake line through which the brake fluid flows to the rear-wheel cylinders. The high pressure generated when the brakes are applied will sometimes force the brake fluid through a steel line that is almost completely blocked internally.

When the brake pedal is released, sufficient hydraulic pressure can remain on the rear brakeshoes causing them to drag against the drums, with the attendant overheating.

Years ago I had a car in my garage with intermittent, but persistent, rear-wheel overheating problems that baffled every mechanic in the shop. The brakes would function well for days and then, for no apparent reason, the rear wheels would get piping hot. We dismantled the brake system several times before locating the defect. A piece of rubber had broken away inside the flexible hose which acts as a connector between the rear steel brake-fluid lines. This piece of loose rubber was floating around and occasionally it would jam and act like a check valve.

If this happened when the brakes were applied, much of the hydraulic pressure remained on the rear brakes, causing them to drag and overheat. I can only recall this happening once in my garage, but it is something to keep in mind when everything else seems to be in perfect order.

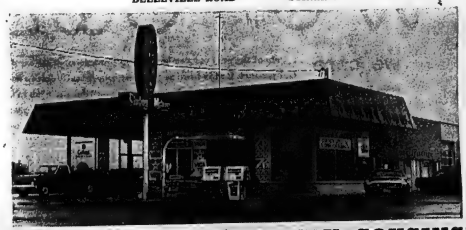
Your Car Everyone's Worry

The condition your car is in is everybody's business.

Car Care is no longer just a personal whim for your car's convenience but affects every other person in your community.

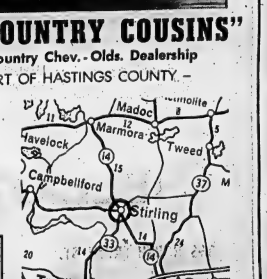
With every conscientious person in this country vitally concerned with the environment, why should the automobile not undergone close scrutiny. It has become fashionable to criticize the automobile maker, casting complete blame for air pollution on his shoulders.

Yet, car makers have already reduced pollution 65 to 80 percent since 1960. And in the next few years harmful pollutants will be reduced to nearly zero, according to top automotive officials like General Motors' Ed Cole.



But without conscientious maintenance on the part of the owner, no system can function properly. Studies show that an untuned engine, for example, spews as much as four times the rate of harmful emissions as a tuned one.

The motorist's responsibility is his fellow man extends even beyond this vital area.



Keeping safety components in good condition is a sign of responsibility to your fellow motorists as well as yourself and your family. That includes tires, brakes, visibility items and a number of related systems.

Maintaining your car so that there is a minimum risk of breakdown on a crowded expressway or street is another indication of concern. A sub-par engine that sputters to a stop on a crowded thoroughfare can cause inconvenience to thousands of other drivers.

Police Receive Kidnap Letter

MONTREAL (CP) — In police hands today is a three-page letter signed by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec which police say appears to be the first authentic word in 12 days from the kidnappers of James Cross and Pierre Laporte.

"It looks like it's authentic," a spokesman for Quebec Provincial Police said today. "We're still working on it."

Enclosed in a pink envelope with a page from the passport of one of the suspected kidnappers, the text was found in a trash can at a downtown intersection.

The passport page bearing the photograph of Paul Rose, 27-year-old teacher, and the letter outlining the FLQ's political aims was discovered by a CKAC radio reporter on the corner of MacTavish and Sherbrooke streets. An anonymous female caller had tipped off the station.

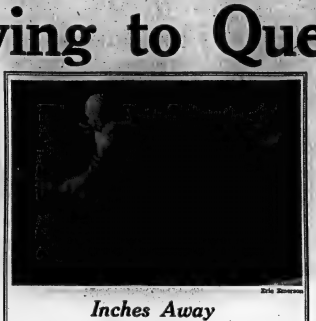
A spokesman for provincial police said the page bore a Sept. 2, 1970, expiry date. One of Rose's fingerprints appeared on the bottom on the third page of the text.

Last Oct. 18, police found the body of Mr. Laporte, Quebec labor minister, stuffed in the trunk of a car at St. Hubert, south of the city. He had been strangled.

They were led to the body by an FLQ note which said the minister, kidnapped a week earlier from his home, had been slain because the government refused to give in to the ransom demands of the Cross abductors.

No arrests were made during the day, although police continued searching for five men, including Rose, wanted in connection with the abductions.

The four others are Marc Carbonneau, 29-year-old taxi driver sought in both kidnappings along with Rose, and Jacques Rose, 23, brother of Paul. Francois Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19, sought for conspiracy to kidnap Mr. Laporte.



Since the War Measures Act was invoked in Ottawa two weeks ago, police have picked up a total of 375 suspected FLQ sympathizers.

Reward Fund Started

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Dominion Automobile Association announced Tuesday it will pay a $1,000 reward for information leading to the capture and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the kidnapping of British envoy James Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, who was later assassinated.

R. W. Trollope, president of the association, said he hopes other organizations and companies will also post rewards in an effort to track down the kidnappers.

He said he thought a reward fund totalling about $50,000 would be adequate inducement and that it would be an easy task to raise the money if 50 businesses contributed $1,000 each.

Trenton end Ted Williamson makes a futile dive for a pass in Tuesday's senior high school football playoff game at Moira. The Tigers capitalized on a pair of second-half miscues to win 12-0. The winners now will meet the Quinte Saints for the Bay of Quinte championship. (For story, see first page, third section.)

Satellite Switched Said Political Move: Grills

Lee Grills, MP Hastings, today stamped transfer of Northern Electric's satellite production unit from Belleville to Hull as a political move emanating in the federal government cabinet.

"We were led to believe the telecommunications satellite package would be produced in the Belleville plant of Northern Electric and we were quite happy when it (the satellite construction contract) was awarded to Hughes," said Mr. Grills.

(Hughes Aircraft of California, subcontracted a $5,000,000 work order to Northern Electric — part of its bid for the $30,000,000 contract to build ANIK, Canadians first communications satellite.)

"Now I'm of the opinion this was a cabinet political decision to move it into Quebec."

"It's very disappointing to learn of this action and we certainly intend to make further inquiries about it," he said.

Mr. Grills said the Hull project was another example of Quebec receiving the "lion's share" of federal assistance.

"The Hull plant will receive financial aid under a Quebec government industrial incentive program. Any federal involvement is not known."

Since last year, Quebec has received $27 million in federal regional development incentives — compared to 1.5 million for Ontario, said Mr. Grills.

Ecuador Declares Martial Law

QUITO (AP) — The dictatorship in Ecuador held two sons of the ousted leftist vice-president and a son of an exiled provincial chief today, but there was no word on the fate of the kidnapped air force commander.

Truckloads of soldiers patrolled Quito and other cities as the army and national police searched for Gen. Cesar Rohn Sandoval, 45, abducted by several persons from his car Tuesday morning.

President Jose Velasco Ibarra declared martial law. The army stopped publication of four large newspapers, and paratroops occupied broadcasting stations.

News Briefs

SANTIAGO (AP) — Roberto Viaux, a former general, was arrested today in connection with the assassination of the commander of the Chilean army, police reported. Viaux, leader of a short-lived army rebellion for higher pay last year, was arrested at the home of his lawyer, who called police and told them Viaux was waiting for them.

* * *

ANKARA (AP) — Turkish authorities questioned two Soviet students seeking asylum today after the second successful hijacking of a Soviet plane in two weeks. Nikolai Ginlov, 20, and Vitaly Pozdeyir, 25, "put a bag over the pilot's head, trussed him up and landed the plane at Sinop themselves" Tuesday, the Turkish news agency Anatolia reported.

LONDON (AP) — The Conservative government announced plans today to increase Britain's military contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and keep a small force in Southeast Asia. But it said it plans to reduce over-all defence spending. "The maintenance and improvement of our military contribution to NATO" will be the country's top defence priority, Prime Minister Edward Heath's government said in the first policy statement on defence since it took office in June.

Verdict Blow To City

By Harry Mulhall
Staff Reporter

Belleville's prestige contact with space-age communications development has been short-circuited.

And the blackout has surprised and disappointed civic leaders who recently were relentless boosters of the project.

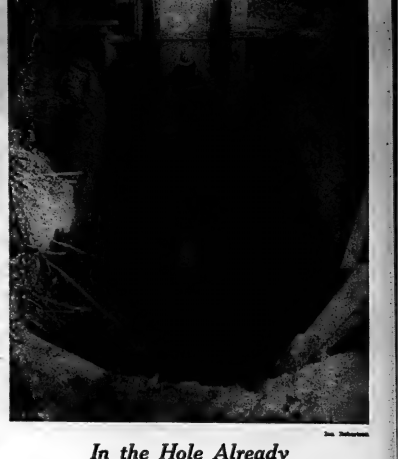
Cause of the rueful reaction is Northern Electric's announcement yesterday that it will launch a new plant at Hull, Que., on its recently-won contract for Canada's first communications satellite contract.

The initial operational phase of the Hull plant involves an investment of almost $12,000,000.

The move will close out Northern's Belleville satellite production unit which, until yesterday, was taken for granted as the scene of one of Canada's most sophisticated industrial developments.

No Belleville jobs, Northern assures, are at stake.

The move to Hull will integrate the Anik satellite program in one operation and place it close to Northern's development and research laboratories at Ottawa.



About a score of specialists will be transferred from Belleville to Hull next spring as production of the satellite's electronic package becomes the first manufacturing operation of the plant expected to employ 350 people in two years.

The swiftness and ultimacy of the announcement caught local community spokesmen unawares.

Unemployment So Severe Extra Welfare Aid Sought

TORONTO (CP) — The department of social and family services anticipates such heavy unemployment this winter that it will ask for an extra $22 million from the Ontario treasury, John Yaremko, the department minister, said Tuesday.

He told an Ontario legislature committee studying the department estimates he will need that much in addition to the $274 million already budgeted for 1970-71.

Earlier, he tabled a report that showed general assistance expenditures for some Ontario municipalities had risen by as much as 167.9 per cent during the year ended in May.

Glen Hodgson (PC—Victoria Haliburton) asked Mr. Yaremko how he planned to provide relief for the municipalities. The main burden of increased welfare costs falls on rural communities, he said.

Walter Pitman (NDP—Peterborough) said the province will have to give municipalities much larger welfare grants or take over all welfare costs itself.

Otherwise, he said, municipalities would "take it out of the hides of people on welfare."

Earlier in debate, Mr. Yaremko tabled figures on the costs of locating absentee husbands to collect support money from them.

He said in four years from 1967-68 to 1970-71, the province will have collected about $2 million from the husbands. In the present fiscal year it will collect an estimated $1.5 million. It would cost about $180,000 to collect that amount this fiscal year.

The province has an office in Toronto handling these cases and a test program in Belleville, St. Catharines and Sudbury in which the wife signs over court awards to the province and provincial officials undertake to collect from the husband.

THE TEMPERATURES

Synopsis: The eastern sections of the province remain under the control of a large high-pressure system. This weather system gave clear skies in most places during the night. Daytime temperatures will continue to be near seasonable values or slightly on the high side for places that are able to get a bit of sunshine.

Mafia Links Charged

TORONTO (CP) — A top-level, three-day meeting of United States and Canadian Mafia figures took place last April at Turkey Point, Ont., Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) told the Ontario legislature Tuesday night.

Speaking in budget debate, Dr. Shulman said the meeting April 10 to 12 at Ed Cronk's trout farm was attended by George Sebastian D'Palma, whom he described as an "active fence' in Hamilton" for many years; James Sandonato, a Niagara Falls, N.Y., "loan shark" financed by two Canadian brothers "named Passnall," Danny Ferguson, Ralph Agretto, part owner of Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, and three American politicians he did not identify but said one was from Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Decision Soon: Andras

Rochdale 'Disappointment... May Be Closed'

OTTAWA (CP) — Rochdale College, symbol to many young-age Torontonians of what is wrong with the younger generation, appears likely to be written off by the federal government as an experiment that went bad.

Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, left little doubt Tuesday that the high-rise Toronto residence, intended to combine living accommodation with unstructured education is in for a severe shake-up and perhaps closing.

Mr. Andras said outside the Commons he was not prepared to accept the rumors about what is going on inside the college without closer examination of the facts.

While the government has not yet decided on the fate of the college, he said, the result is heavily-weighted towards lowering the boom on the current administration.

Within the next two weeks the government would announce a decision on options it would take —ranging from breaking up the college's current power structure to foreclosing on its mortgage.

The minister said the government "may have come to the end of the road in restoring some financial order" at the college.

Its finances, he said, are a mess. It was six months—about $240,000—behind in mortgage payments on the first mortgage held by the government.

It was also behind on its other five mortgages, debentures, taxes, and a loan from a franchise family.

But he was more concerned about the social implications the government would have to consider when deciding whether to try to rehabilitate the project or abandon it.

The college had been "a great disappointment to everyone."

"I suppose there has to be a cleanup of the situation."

In the Commons, Mr. Andras assured a critical Toronto MP that a decision would be made soon.

The minister's assurance came in response to accusations against Rochdale voiced by Toronto MP Perry Ryan (PC—Spadina).

Mr. Ryan, who claimed to be repeating statements by Toronto alderman Anthony O'Donohue, described the three-year-old student housing project as a "vertical flophouse" and a "launching pad for revolutionaries."

He said residents have already caused $168,000 damage to the building and demanded to know whether the government intended to foreclose on the mortgage it holds for Rochdale.

In Toronto, Rochdale council president Peter Turner said the building is in arrears only on its CMHC mortgage and the loan from a fraternity.

Meeting At Four

In the schedule of public meetings to be held this week published in The Intelligencer on Monday, a committee of Adjustment meeting was listed as being slated for 2 p.m. on Thursday. The time given was in error. The correct time for the meeting is 4 p.m. at city hall.

Trenton Crusade Rally Tonight

TRENTON (Staff) — The Trenton and District Crusade will hold a preview crusade rally at St. George's Anglican Church, Bryon Street tonight at 8 o'clock.

Addressing the rally will be evangelist Marvey Patterson, evangelist for the local area and an ordained Anglican minister.

The purpose of the pre-rally meeting is to acquaint people with the nature of the 10-day crusade, scheduled for Nov. 20 to Nov. 29. The crusade, sponsored by local churches, will be held in Trenton High School.

Rev. Patterson has participated in similar inter-church crusades across Canada, as far north as Pangnirtung, in the Arctic and preached in Japan a year ago.

Move Fire Threat at Ameliasburg

What looks like a truck ran through a building is actually the way the general store and post office was transported to a new location in the village of Ameliasburg last weekend. The move — from the original site in front of Harry Bladee's home — was effected mainly as a fire precaution.

A number of homes were grouped together near the museum and township hall. Until the transition has been completed, store owner and postmaster Norman Sword will work from a temporary setup in the Anglican church hall.

It Is Good Business To Buy Back Bonds

Long term municipal financing arrangements usually see the municipality selling its debentures on the open market.

But this week the city of Belleville reversed the normal procedure and in a somewhat unusual move bought some of its own debentures — and is showing a profit on the transaction!

The basis of the somewhat involved transaction is the higher exchange rate of the Canadian dollar and the increased interest rate now commanded by American bonds.

For the past six or seven years the city has been selling the bulk of its debentures in the United States, to take advantage of the then lower interest rates south of the border.

The premium received in U.S. funds at the time of debenture sale, along with funds required for debenture retirement, have been put into a reserve fund which is now nearing the half - million dollar mark.

At the time the sale of debentures in the United States saved the city money in interest charges compared to what would have been paid in Canada.

But now bond interest in the United States tops that in Canada and it is a whole new ball game.

With a higher return now possible on American investments, United States financial houses are offering their Canadian municipal debentures on the market — and at a considerable discount.

And that is where Belleville comes back into the picture.

Many of the debentures sold by the city south of the border are now being offered at 82 cents on the dollar.

So the city has decided to buy some of its own debentures back, using money in the reserve fund set up for debenture retirement.

This week city council authorized the repurchase of debentures worth $87,000 at, according to Mayor J. Russell Scott, more such purchases will be made.

City manager J. R. Reynolds agreed that the repurchase of city bonds sold in the United States was good business.

"With the discount, we are making $18 on every $100," he said.

UCS Appeal Chairman Pleased with Response

Contributions to the Belleville United Appeal are running considerably ahead of last year, according to campaign chairman Alderman Ben Corke.

At city council Monday, Alderman Corke said contributions to the fund at the beginning of the week totalled $118,000 and were higher than at Nov. 26 last year.

This year's objective of the United Community Services is $128,200.

"Belleville citizens are to be congratulated on their response to the appeal" said Alderman Corke.

As chairman of this year's appeal he said it had been a rewarding experience to "help put the appeal back on the rails."

This Sunday Alderman Corke will leave on a three week Rotary-sponsored trip to Scotland.

The alderman told city council he had been planning the trip for several months and would be the only Bellevillian in a 30-member Party on the overseas trip.

Students Learn How 'Other Half' Lives

Pupils at Madoc Public School learned today the meaning of the phrase "half the world goes to bed hungry every night".

They found out the hard way — by sharing the same lunch, a bowl of rice, with children of the underdeveloped countries they are helping.

The luncheon climaxed a two - week study of the world and its people with emphasis on the underprivileged half that is the recipient of UNICEF aid.

The 570 pupils at the school gave up their usual lunches and substituted 125 pounds of rice — about the same ration their fellow students would be eating for lunch on the other side of the world.

The difference in the cost of a conventional Canadian school child's lunch and the bowl of rice will be donated by each pupil to UNICEF, now mounting its annual Hallowe'en campaign for funds.

Because the school lacked facilities for boiling 125 pounds of rice, principal John Murphy "farmed out" the cooking to interested people in the village. They brought the rice to the school at noon for the meagre meal.

To reinforce the seriousness of the project, school vending machines were sealed with tape for the day and rice and water was the only food pupils and staff ate between breakfast and supper.

"We hope to bring home to the children the meaning of the UN's children's fund and the plight of less fortunate youngsters," said Mr. Murphy.

Madoc Public School has gone all out for UNICEF this year. It formed the basis of a theme study of the world that saw air miles to distant points computed in mathematics, letters to far-away lands written in language classes, and the customs of other lands and people emphasized in other subjects.

Friday morning, instead of the usual Hallowe'en "trick or treat" excursions, pupils will fan out through the village to canvass for UNICEF. Friday night the grade 7 and 8 pupils will hold a dance with all proceeds going to the fund.

The UNICEF chief of publications and editorial services at United Nations in New York, Daniel Brooks will visit the school Thursday afternoon to talk to the pupils about the way their money is used around the world.

Support Denied Museum

Ontario Teachers' Federation has bowed out of any scheme to restore and preserve the old Newburgh Academy.

The 131-year-old school, one of two of its kind left in Ontario, now belongs to Lennox and Addington board of education. The board has an offer to purchase the building, closed as a school for some years.

A committee interested in restoring the school as a museum of early Ontario education had sought help from the OTF.

But William Jones, assistant secretary, and Norm Hodgins, secretary-treasurer, said not enough OTF members are in favor of restoring the academy, located about five miles north of Napanee, to get sufficient funds from the organization.

One objection, said Mrs. Norman Hutchison, a member of the academy committee, is the location of the building. Teachers apparently favored a more central location for an educational centre and museum.

The committee is still actively working to save the academy.

It is considering a suggestion to appeal to all Lennox and Addington teachers for donations to buy the building and turn it into an educational centre. Another suggestion is to turn part of the building into a hostel for transient youth during the summer.

Also proposed is turning the building into a training centre for McArthur College in Kingston, where student teachers could study architecture and geology in the area.

Phenomenon of Nature

Allan Weese, apple grower all his life on the Rednerville Road, takes a close look at phenomenon of nature on his fruit farm. New to the veteran orchard man, this young tree produced blossoms along with a crop of early-variety apples late in July. The second crop of apples the tree developed this year was noticed during the annual harvest now ending in Ameliasburg township.

Movie Fare

A letter on this page today complains about a movie viewed recently and suggests this newspaper should provide advance information on film fare locally.

The Intelligencer has no movie correspondent, nor does it have any special "tip" to what is showing locally. However, as movie fans from away back we do attend an occasional performance. Perhaps we have already read about it, or know its reputation; but in any event we make it of all the title and the performers, the still pictures outside the theatre and the information, if any, accompanying the newspaper advertisements.

Having done that we have a pretty good idea of what sort of film to expect. Movies definitely are more permissive these days — as we pointed out recently, even the censors are passing dialogue that once would have been considered taboo. Moreover, we lament the passing of a great many movie presentations, including musicals and comedies, which in their day represented entertainment for all the family.

Nowadays, "Adult Entertainment," or "Restricted," are familiar accompaniments to advertisements of contemporary film fare. Virtually nothing is being shown today that would appeal to both parents and children, even supposing the two groups do much together any more; nothing that depicts true cleanliness, femininity, wholesome adventure or whatever. In their place we have violence (admittedly, the movies have always had a penchant for that), sadism and deviation in all its forms. This is one of the reasons we have the kind of society in which "anything goes."

Fire Protection

Outlying areas of Prince Edward County continue to be at a serious loss because of lack of fire equipment. A Big Island home is the latest to have been destroyed and it gives added urgency to the coming plebiscite in Sophiasburg township concerning fire protection.

As it happened, a fire truck did go to the scene from the fire base at Belleville View, but it was unable to check the flames.

Meanwhile we have received a letter alleging that trucks from Ameliasburg were on their way to a fire (whether it was the Big Island blaze or not is not stated) when they were called back because it was outside their territory.

To this we can only say it is standard practice for fire trucks to serve only the area to which they belong, unless there is an arrangement with one or more neighboring townships or municipalities.

Apart from that, the letter is insufficiently identified (letters must bear both the signature and address of the sender) and does not give either the locale or date of the fire.

Even Fiction, it should be mentioned, has decided it is unable to enter into any fire protection agreement with Sophiasburg, because it lacks the equipment to cover such. The solution to the dilemma is clear — the township must work out its own salvation.

Another Upset

From a P.C. defeat in Nova Scotia to a Liberal upset in New Brunswick, Canadian provincial politics are taking an interesting turn.

Ontario, with an election likely not too far off either, must now be wondering if the winds of change will blow here too. As for New Brunswick, Richard Hatfield's success where former Conservative leader Charles Van Horne failed is evidence of the party's rising new power in the province.

It somehow will not be the same though without the forceful and ebullient personality of Louis Robichaud, the Acadian French New Brunswicker who has led the province for the past decade.

Cruel Ordeal

British trade commissioner, James Cross, first victim of the FLQ kidnappers, is still missing. Nothing has been heard from him for more than a week, and now, his wife has appealed for his release in a radio address.

For Mrs. Cross, as for the family of the late Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, these last few weeks have been cruel in the extreme. Canadians can only go on praying and hoping, as well as giving whatever practical help is possible to the authorities, to the end that the trade commissioner may be released unharmed, and his family's ordeal brought to an end.

Poverty Not A Factor Says Columnist

Society's Outcasts Members of FLQ—Psychiatrist

CAMERON SMITH in the Globe and Mail

Sadists, deviates, drug addicts and homosexuals, once vigorously barred from membership in the Front de Liberation du Quebec, now are operating within FLQ cells, according to Dr. Gustave Morf.

Dr. Morf, a Swiss psychiatrist who immigrated to Montreal 18 years ago, is the author of Le Terrorisme Quebecois, a psychiatric study of convicted terrorists, held in Quebec jails during the past four years. The book, published early this year, has received high acclaim and an English version is being rushed into print. Montreal bookstores are sold out of the French version.

It has been only during the past year that deviates have succeeded in breaking into the FLQ, Dr. Morf said in an interview.

"It's frightening that deviates and addicts are now committing actions in the name of the FLQ," he said.

The so - called revolutionary aims of the organization supply these people with justifications for their actions that they might not otherwise have had, and loosen the restraint that might have otherwise have held them back, he added.

Dr. Morf, who studied under Carl Jung, one of the founders of modern psychiatry and a colleague of Sigmund Freud, has added weight to reports that Labor Minister Pierre Laporte was brutally treated before he was killed.

Dr. Morf said that the entry of deviates into the FLQ was only one example of the deterioration of its organizational structure.

Interviews with FLQ suspects arrested after robberies last spring indicated that little or no planning had gone into the operations. The holdups were carried out from one evening they were conceived.

"The FLQ has 'creed more and more of a criminal crime and has become less and less idealistic," Dr. Morf said.

Until the past year deviates could be kept out of the FLQ because there were fewer cells and tighter control, he said. But, he said, there is no overall control. Members of an individual cell can kick out an undesirable, but separate cells have no authority over each other and no one has authority over all.

The cells containing deviates usually were established independently of existing cells.

In his book, Dr. Morf said that very few of the prisoners he interviewed were able to establish that they had been subjected to discrimination and had been exploited by employers.

Most, however, have cut themselves off from society and the majority of these, such as Pierre Vallieres and Charles Gagnon, quit school or university without finishing their studies. Once employed, they had not been able to stick with their jobs and had proved irresponsible.

They tended to come into confrontation with their parents, their schools and their employers. They made society their scapegoat, blaming it instead of themselves.

Dr. Morf, grey-haired and lean, quietly warned that there could be worse to come. "There is a curve about violence. You have to escalate it all the time because people become accustomed to small violence."

RICHARD NEEDHAM in the Globe and Mail

Have you heard about the terrorists in Newfoundland? About the violence in Prince Edward Island? About the kidnappings in Nova Scotia? No, you haven't, and I haven't, and David Lewis hasn't — and he isn't going to, either.

In the Commons the deputy House leader of the New Democratic Party trotted out the old scary old line that Quebec's FLQ lightness proceeds from unemployment and poverty. Not. Unemployment and poverty are as prevalent in the Atlantic provinces as they are in Quebec, more prevalent indeed. But crime and violence are little known by the seashore, law and order prevail to an extent that would surprise even Ontario. (For example, the police in Newfoundland do not, and have no need to, carry guns.)

Where we've gone wrong in our thinking about crime, about violence, about many forms of human restlessness is — I repeat — hope, was — in relating them to material poverty, to material need. We think — I hope, though — that general prosperity creates general virtue. As for those who don't share in the general prosperity, we believe — that if we give them handouts and training and jobs and subsidized housing and special services, they too will be transformed into angels.

Such was — I fear, still is — the doctrine of the so-called "liberals" and "progressives" — pause through pension, brotherhood through baby bonuses, morality through money, dignity enormous as a commodity that's for sale — the more you pay, the more of it you get. And the bankruptcy of this soft and stupid illusion becomes evident as martial law settles in upon the welfare state of Quebec.

And, in any case, it isn't the so-called disadvantaged, the so-called underprivileged, that the police are picking up all over Quebec. These suspected FLQ people are doctors, lawyers, teachers, professors, civil servants, business executives, union leaders, newspapermen, radio and TV personalities. As for public support of, and sympathy with, the FLQ, that's both coming from Parliament, union officials, and from the most pampered group in Quebec or any other Canadian province — the university students, with their special grants and loans.

Rail Service In Canada

Letter to The Globe and Mail

Very recently I had an opportunity to compare travel services on the CPR and the CNR in a trip to the West Coast, and I must honestly say that in my estimation the CP service and accomodation was superior to that of the CNR. The CPR run a well-organized train with a public address system, the porters know their jobs and the main stops each porter standing outside his car ready to assist passengers and give helpful information. The Canadian National porters seem indifferent about the passengers and were seldom seen outside their cars on the platforms and particularly at Jasper, Alta., where I was obliged to walk from one end of the train to the other on the platform looking for the car I had been assigned to. I was misdirected twice by the only porter in evidence.

In all fairness I must state I had no cause to complain about the food or dining room service on the CNR, but the CNR roadbed is so rough in certain areas that it is most difficult to enjoy your meal because of the severe rocking and jolting.

Despite the fact there is a premium on the CPR travel between the West Coast and Toronto and return, I would still prefer to use CP service.

Halifax Explosion
Quinte School Group Seeks First-Hand Information

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

We would like to know if there is anyone in the Belleville area who was in Halifax at the time of the explosion or knows anything about the Halifax explosion who would be willing to come and speak to us about it.

We are a group of students from Quinte secondary school, Belleville, who are studying the novel Barometer Rising, which is about the Halifax explosion. We thought if someone could come and speak to us about it we would understand the story much better.

Anyone interested should contact our teacher, Mrs. Dyment, at the school.

Thank you for making this request known.

Hallowe'en Precautions

Cornwall Standard
Freeholder

The night of the Great Pumpkin, which used to be Hallowe'en, is almost here. And like so many other things today, a few people are trying to spoil it all.

Each year there are a few cases cropping up of children being given fruit with glass or razor blades in it, or candy with dangerous or at least unpleasant materials added to it.

Parents are advised to concern this sort of thing by keeping some control over where their children go. They should be able to remember where they got various items and such identification can solve the problem.

Another type of problem is the hazard of dark, and perhaps damp and wet streets. Children bundled in old clothes cannot see where they are going. Sometimes motorists don't see them either, with tragic results.

Just warning the kids isn't nearly enough. The younger ones ought to be accompanied by people of more responsible age. Trick or treating should be kept within bounds.

Bright or white, clothing should be worn. But again, it isn't much good to warn the younger children and turn them loose in the neighborhood. The careree days of this sort of thing should be just about over. Parents or older brothers and sisters, if they are old enough, to be genuinely responsible, should accompany the youngest Hallowe'ners, at least.

Hallowe'en is an ancient, and on the whole, reasonably harmless way of expressing youthful energy and high spirits. It shouldn't be a time of harmful mischief, nor should it become a time of tragedy and unhappy memories. Hallowe'en should be a happy season.

Movie Upsets Citizens

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Recently my husband and I walked out of a local theatre after watching a recent obscene (in my opinion) movie for half an hour. This meant that we wasted $3.50 plus the cost of a babysitter to say nothing of the time.

While visiting in London, Ont. this past summer I noted that many of the theatres had signs posted outside reading: "The language in this film may be offensive to some people." I suggest that the local theatres follow suit.

Perhaps The Intelligencer could help us to avoid attending these offensive films by publishing a short summary of each film "now playing". I would also like to suggest a Movie Review Corner. This would help people who subscribe to The Intelligencer only, to be more knowledgeable about films.

The only other solution is to boycott all films.

Smokers in Doghouse

Hamilton Spectator

After Nov. 1, travellers on GO buses and trains are to be politely asked to refrain from smoking. A study has shown that 53 per cent of passengers do not smoke, and some of those have protested in writing against smoking.

There is absolutely no reason why passengers should smoke on commuter trains; the journeys are quite short.

Smoking should be strictly forbidden on all short-run public vehicles. The health of the majority over-rides the desire of a few to smoke. It would have been wiser to ban it outright rather than leave it to afflicted passengers to ask probably reluctant and even resentful people if they would "please refrain".

Possibility of Quebec Coup Not Reason for Action: Bourassa

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec leaders have thrown light on official anxieties that preceded strong counter-revolution action two weeks ago, including confirmation that a group of influential Quebecers stood ready to back it as an emergency provisional government.

The projected provisional government would have shown "an attitude of understanding" to the demands of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, kidnappers of British diplomat James (Jasper) Cross and Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister later strangled.

A statement issued by Premier Robert Bourassa Tuesday night said he had known of the possibility of a takeover. But he decided that the plan influenced the government's decision to call in federal troops Oct. 16 and ask for proclamation the following day of the War Measures Act.

Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal said in an interview that a group of well-meaning citizens had considered setting up a provisional government. The group believed that "instead of shocking and hostile reaction there should be rather an attitude of understanding."

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau declined Tuesday to deny or confirm that a provisional-government project was one reason for war measures action.

But last Friday, the prime minister told Parliament that one reason for invoking special powers against the FLQ and supporters was the federal government's assessment that "a state of confusion" existed in Quebec. He also cited the kidnappings, the threat of insurrection and earlier thefts of dynamite.

The day before troops started moving into Quebec City and Montreal, public doubts were expressed about the way the crisis was being handled.

A statement by 10 prominent Quebecers Oct. 14-that referred to the "irregular position" of the Bourassa government proposed that resolution of the crisis should be worked out in Quebec, not Ottawa, and suggested according to the FLQ demands for the release of 22 convicted or accused terrorists.

The statement was read by Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, and supported by nine others, including Claude Ryan, publisher of Montreal Le Devoir, Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, and Yves Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers Corporation.

Referring to "the obvious danger which society now faces," the group of 10 added that "the responsibility to find a solution and to apply it rests in Quebec and must stay in Quebec."

"Certain outside attitudes . . . and the rigid and almost military atmosphere now seen in Ottawa, seems to risk ridicule for Quebec and its government in its tragic impotence.

"Eventually, our support is for the negotiation of an exchange of the two hostages for the 'political'," the Oct. 14 statement said.

Other indications of divided feelings came the following night when a crowd of about 3,000 in an east-end Montreal arena gave a ringing endorsement to the political aims of the FLQ and denounced the use of federal troops.

But speakers Charles Gagnon and Pierre Vallieres, both FLQ members, and Michel Chartrand—all denied the following day—urged supporters to stay as calm as possible while pressing for the "social and political revolution."

The following morning, Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Drapeau asked Ottawa to invoke the War Measures Act.

Premier Bourassa's statement Tuesday night said:

"In the light of statements made by certain commentators regarding the alleged project of a parallel government, this administration had been informed of the project.

"But the government was in no way influenced in its decision by the legislature on social reforms.

In Ottawa Tuesday, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked in the Commons whether the War Measures Act had been proclaimed partly because "it is believed that a group of influential Quebecers had set out to see whether they might supplant the legitimately-elected government of the province of Quebec."

Mr. Trudeau said he had already set out the reasons for invocation of the act—an apparent reference to his statement of last Friday—and this was not among them.

Other comments by federal leaders contain what could be oblique references to an anxiety that failure to act firmly two weeks ago could have prolonged "the state of confusion" and a threat to the Quebec government.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said Tuesday that the FLQ is supported by "people a long way up the economic ladder."

Communications Minister Eric Kierans, a Montrealer, said in a speech last Thursday that action was taken to prevent a drift into revolutionary government.

He said Ottawa rejected "the proposition, advanced by some Quebec nationalists, that these acts of terror were essentially an internal matter to be settled by the forces of law and order in Quebec."

Mr. Trudeau had made a similar affirmation in his broadcast speech the night the war measures were invoked:

". . . no longer doubt exists about the good faith or the ability of any government, there are opposition parties ready and willing to be given an opportunity to govern. In short, there is available everywhere in Canada an effective mechanism to change governments by peaceful means."

Verdict A Blow

lebon of the move, their chagrin was compounded by the fact that only three months ago they voluntarily added the community's votes in support of Northern during bitter political infighting over the satellite contract.

Mayor Russell Scott recalled that the efforts of Belleville-area assisted Northern to obtain its share of the hotly-disputed contract.

"It looks like we won the battle and lost the war," said Ald. Gerald Joyce, chairman of the city's industrial commission.

Chamber of Commerce president, Frank Murray, also confessed surprise at the announcement.

The mayor and Ald. Joyce said they would impress on Northern the need to now give Belleville priority in any future company expansion.

All three spokesmen were involved in the commitment of Belleville public opinion on Northern's behalf during the fight for the satellite contract plum.

The issue was resolved July 31 when Hughes Aircraft of California triumphed over its rival, RCA Ltd., of Montreal with a $30,000,000 bid. A core issue in the victory was the Hughes subcontract to Northern for communications hardware valued at $5,530,000. Hughes also promised similar contracts to Northern for other satellite projects — a production bonanza estimated at another $85,000,000.

Northern's Belleville manager, W. A. Thompson, said the company appreciated the action of Belleville officials during the contract battle, although they would now be understandably disappointed by yesterday's announcement.

However, departure of the satellite unit from the Belleville plant opens the way for more standard production with more stabilized job opportunities, he said.

At its peak, the satellite program here would have employed about 90 people, a Northern spokesman said yesterday. The new plant at Hull will employ 350 people by 1972.

It was not known when the top-level decision was made on the Hull plant.

But as recently as Oct. 3, the Intelligencer ran a story on the Belleville satellite program. There was no indication from company officials at that time the project had been rescheduled.

These were the reactions to yesterday's announcement:

Mayor Scott said he believed removal of the satellite program would not prevent future growth of the Belleville plant.

Loss of the satellite project would be compensated by production providing "steadier or continuous" jobs, he hoped.

Northern's executives "must appreciate the fact that it was the efforts of our people that assisted them to get their share of the satellite program — and I'm sure they'll be taking this into consideration."

Mayor Scott said he would be talking on "the whole prospect" of Northern in Belleville with senior executives of the company.

Ald. Joyce responded in similar vein.

"It isn't just the 40 people now affected," he said, "but the many that could have been employed in the future. I was very optimistic that this could result in 200-300 new jobs being created during the life of the contract."

He called it the "loss of a real prestige industry" to the city, but was confident Northern would "do its best" to find alternative jobs in its Belleville plant for the workers involved.

However, Northern always had been a "good corporate citizen" of Belleville, and with the decision made he would now seek priority for the Belleville plant in any future new projects contemplated by the company.

"I'm going to call on Northern's management to consider that the Belleville works is a top priority plant when an increased facility is required for further expansion."

"We have an excellent labor pool here — particularly in electronics," said Ald. Joyce. "They just need the job opportunities."

Mr. Murray said the program typified the kind of industrial development ideal for Belleville.

Light, sophisticated industry, with its emphasis on technical skill and talent and lack of environmental problems, was the type of operation from which the community would derive most benefit, he believed.

This is how Belleville is linked to yesterday's announcement:

Last year, Northern installed a million dollar facility at its Belleville factory for work on a Hughes subcontract for Intelsat 4 — the communications satellite financed by an international consortium.

In all, 45 highly - skilled specialists worked in the installation — a dust-free environment known as the "clean room."

Though small, its sophistication imparted a sheen of space age glamor to the city's industrial settlement.

The Intelsat project should conclude in March or April. The delicately precise equipment goes to Hull — along with 15-20 employees — a nucleus of management, engineering and processing specialists.

The remainder 30 or so employees will be absorbed into the Belleville plant work force.

The "clean room" area remains — to be utilized for future products.

"The satellite work here has been a difficult technical and manufacturing challenge which has been met quite successfully," said Mr. Thompson. "From that point of view we are sorry to see it go. But on the positive side, it opens the door here for more standard telephone type product, with its inherent higher (employment) stability."

The return to more utilitarian work, however, follows recent trends in the Belleville plant. Since 1967, the factory has shift away from government contracts and "commercial type products," said Mr. Thompson.

Now, the vast majority of the work force is involved with telephone products.

Northern gave this outline of its Hull project:

The plant will be developed on a 136-acre site and receive financial assistance from the Quebec government's industrial incentives program.

A 150,000-square-foot building will eventually be increased four times in area.

First manufacturing operations will be electronic packages for ANIK. The plant will centralize production of ground satellite ground station subsystems for domestic and export markets. High-capacity cable carrier systems, radio and transmission equipment now being developed also will be eventually manufactured.

Army Halted Spread

Drapeau: The Revolution Had Started

MONTREAL (CP) — Mounting Quebec terrorism caused some citizens of "good faith" to consider setting up a "provisory" government that could have become a tool of revolutionaries says Mayor Jean Drapeau.

The mayor, who won a landslide victory in last Sunday's municipal election, outlined h's version of background events in a tape-recorded interview with Richard E. Meyer of Washington, a member of the newsfeatures staff of The Associated Press.

"No one really believed in the reality of the danger" when the Drapeau administration blew the whistle on revolutionary activity here, a year ago, the mayor said.

But, the situation became such that the federal and provincial governments eventu-"y recognized the "danger of an insurrection." Political kidnappings resulted in the army being called in and the War Measures Act being proclaimed.

Had the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec actually set up a committee ready to take over government?

"The FLQ doesn't mind much about legality or constitutionality," said Mr. Drapeau.

"Their credo is that power will never be taken in a democratic way. So they have to plead the revolution, armed revolution. They know it doesn't take many thousands of people. A rather small group of determined men and women can take over a government . . . And because people are scared, or people are indifferent, or people are afraid, they accept as a matter of fact a new government

"But most of the time the new revolutionary government cannot take over directly from the constitutional government. And it is, also well known that when a revolution is starting, there are people of good faith who do not think that the revolution is so close. So they suggest that as a way to prevent the worst, the government should resign and a new one be accepted, which then, not being a really constitutional one, but accepted by the people, becomes the provisory government."

Mr. Drapeau said the provisional government would not have been formed with the idea of turning over powers to revolutionaries "but in fact, as has happened elsewhere, it becomes such a government . . . a government which is used by the revolutionaries."

Was this about to happen?

"Oh, definitely so. I say definitely so.

Was it going to happen in Montreal, or in Quebec, or where?

"Well, the conversations were held not only in Montreal, but in other parts of the province," said Mr. Drapeau. "And there were people of good faith who thought that instead of showing a rigid reaction there should be rather an attitude of understanding."

These people reasoned that "even if we have to change those who are in power, we'd better accept that."

"But once a government like that takes over, then any other one can take over because the one just established is not at all constitutional.

"I know that some people will say I am the victim of a theatrical imagination, but you only have to read history and how things happen elsewhere."

Answering questions, Mr. Drapeau said he has evidence that all this was happening and it will be disclosed "in due time"

How imminent were developments?

"It all depended on how fast the army would come. Without the army here and without the War Measures Act proclaimed by the federal government, the revolution was started and would have proceeded."

Mr. Drapeau traced the escalation of terrorism and indicated that kidnappers who demanded release of so-called "political prisoners" in exchange for victims, could also demand the resignation of the government as ransom for still another victim.

Mr. Meyer said the mayor once mentioned a provisional committee set up by the FLQ to take over the government.

"No, I didn't say provisional committee sponsored or set up by the FLQ," Mr. Drapeau replied. "As it happened elsewhere it was happening here, that spontaneously the people of good faith had started to believe the time had come to find a solution. So the way I was reported is not absolutely the accurate words or the exact idea. I said there were people thinking of establishing a provisory offer a reward . . .

How many people?

"I will postpone this question also."

Mr. Drapeau commented at some length on the whole principle of reward, saying it is condemned by many as a means of inviting people to denounce friends. The nomenclature was unfortunate.

"The word is wrongly chosen," said Mr. Drapeau. St. "I think it should not be called a reward. It should be and it should take, as normally the reward takes, the form of means to protect those who help."

Mr. Drapeau took the hypothetical case of citizen or citizens who might offer information "leading, really, to "the FLQ," but feel it necessary then to depart for Paris, London, Los Angeles or Hong Kong.

"Well according to the worth of the information, I would say that the help would be granted. It would not then be a reward. It would be just a payment for, the value of the information."

Bottle Can Be Burned

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The Standard Oil Co. of Ohio said Tuesday it has developed a resin from which safely-burnable bottles can be made.

The firm said the resin can be burned without giving off, annoying or harmful gases. It said the resin is suitable for making beverage bottles and containers for foods and household and industrial chemicals.

The plastic bottles, which were market-tested in Las Vegas, are 20 - per - cent lighter than their glass counterparts, chill as quickly as glass, retain flavor and carbonation.

Common Market Accord Reached

LUXEMBOURG (Reuters) — Britain and the six European Common Market member nations have crossed a first hurdle in negotiations for British entry into the Market, with agreement on four points.

The four points:

—Agreement on possible problems raised for Britain by Market membership in the pork, milk and egg sectors.

—British acceptance of the Market's common commercial policy.

—Association with the community for Britain's dependent territories, except Hong Kong.

—A system of annual review of farm prices in an enlarged community.

Security Slows Exchange

Montreal Suffers Major Business Cutback

MONTREAL (CP) — The usually booming fall business for restaurants, art galleries, boutiques, theatres and department stores interviewed has dropped an average of 40 per cent since the beginning of the kidnapping crisis.

The hardest hit area appears to be in Old Montreal where police barriers have been set up to tighten security measures around prominent buildings which include city hall, police headquarters and justice department offices.

The strict security measures were set up after the assassination of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, abducted from his home five days after British diplomat James (Jasper) Cross.

"Our business has dropped by about 80 per cent," says Francoise Beaunoleil, owner of the Collection Mode Boutique.

"Usually October is a boom-ing month, but lately hardly anyone has been here at all.

"Most of the streets are still blocked off . . . so it's hard for people to come down."

"Things haven't been this way for years," says the owner of A La Cataloone restaurant, "and people coming down here are the fences and the troops then turn back.

"We've gone down about 30 per cent in the last two weeks, but it will change soon and the people will be back," says Andre Pinet.

At Les Trois Guisgnettes, owner Huguette Turcotte says "we've really slumped."

"Taxi drivers are nervous about bringing people down in this section because police search all the cars."

Most of the city's large department stores also report a pinch in sales but some maintain the crisis in recent weeks hasn't affected them at all.

Theatres and nightclubs along the city's busy St. Catherine St. say people are staying away and one theatre says attendance has dropped by 50 per cent.

At one nightclub, the Metropole which features belly dancers and go-go girls, management says business dropped about 30 per cent.

"However, there's only been a 40 per cent drop for go-go exhibitionists."

Hotels report some convention cancellations and slight drops in reservations, particularly from United States customers.

"Due to the impressions created by the news media, the Americans think we've got machine guns on every corner," says Marcel Provencher, sales manager of the Holiday Inn.

Victor Charland, general manager of the Chateau Champlain, says the government should reassure the people since the U.S. media have discouraged people from coming here.

"If the government would make a statement that things now are under control and people can walk the streets safely, then perhaps things would return to normal."

The Queen Elizabeth Hotel has had slightly more than the usual number of cancellations and a few conventions have been postponed in recent weeks "but things are just about normal."

John Brebner, vice-president of public relations for Hilton Hotels of Canada, said many Americans have been saying things are worse in the U.S., "so I guess that as far the situation is not too troublesome."

Robert St. Arnaud, whose swanky La Vieux Raffet is in an old building where his family lived for 28 years, says business has dropped about 20 per cent.

"Everything down here depends on politics," says Mr. St. Arnaud. "And if anything happens, we get it first.

"I suppose it will pass like everything else, but I wish it would pass soon."

Departments Said in Cold War

TORONTO (CP) — Two Ontario government departments are engaged in a cold war that has reached "incredible stage," Donald MacDonald (NDP—Toronto, York South) said Tuesday in the Ontario legislature.

Mr. MacDonald said there is no communication except on a "superficial level" between the departments of Labor Minister Dalton Bales and Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

As a result, he said during debate on labor department estimates, 17 alleged complaints of mistreatment by police of Indians in Northern Ontario have been inadequately handled by the Ontario Human Rights Commission. Work of the commission comes under Mr. Bales' department.

He was referring to a case of Indian mistreatment he brought before a house committee last spring which was documented with files of commission officers.

Mr. MacDonald said neither Mr. Bales nor commission officials have any influence over the OPP. "They (OPP) just tell you to go home."

He said only Mr. Wishart has the power to force the OPP to act, and Mr. Bales should be bringing complaints of Indian abuse to the attorney-general.

A Memorable Occasion!

The presentation of 25-year pins highlighted the 60th anniversary dinner of the Argyll Chapter IODE held at the Belleville Shrine Club, Tuesday evening. Regent Mrs. H. L. Kokesh congratulates Mrs. R. L. Liddle (at left) while Provincial President Mrs. J. Craik, who was guest speaker, offers congratulations to Mrs. O. M. Miller who has been a member for 39 years.

Argyll Chapter IODE Hosts Annual District Dinner Meeting

The Argyll Chapter IODE last night hosted the annual district dinner at the Shrine Club. Over 100 members from eight different Chapters from Peterborough, Stirling, Norwood, Campbellford, Kingston and Belleville were in attendance.

The guests were greeted at the door by the Regent Mrs. H. L. Kokesh and after registration, which was looked after by Mrs. R. Birkenshaw, Mrs. J. Sherry and Mrs. F. R. Allan, were introduced to Mrs. Julia Craik, the Provincial president.

Head table guests included Mrs. J. Cossins, Honorary Regent, Miss Rosa Mary Stirling, Provincial Councillor and representing the city Mrs. Jean Smith.

The highlight of the evening included the cutting of the anniversary cake by Mrs. Craik assisted by Mrs. Kokesh.

Mrs. Craik presented 25-year pins to two members, Mrs. G. M. Miller, who has been active with the chapter for 38 years, and Mrs. R. Liddle. Both have served on many committees. Mrs. Miller as a Regent. Both have greatly contributed to the Chapter.

Vocal arrangements were done by Mrs. Rita Hough Regent of Stirling Chapter and a trio from Campbellford who sang a light musical rendition. Mrs. Hough accompanied by Frank Martin sang a medley of songs reminiscent of both world wars. This was most appropriate as the Argyll Chapter is a military one and contributed in many ways to the forces during wartime.

Mrs. F. R. Allan introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Julia Craik, who congratulated the Chapter on their 60th Anniversary and said "We must look ahead and see beyond ourselves."

She stressed that the IODE became involved in community projects as well as helping people in other countries especially young people, senior citizens, new Canadians — not only in monetary ways, but to get them involved as well. Also to instill in the youth of Canada a sense of patriotism and loyalty. Patriotism in love of one's country and most important in today's troubled times. Listen and accept them as they are," she declared.

The Provincial President then spoke to the members concerning the building of a Community hall in Attawapiskap for the Cree Indians which is an IODE project whereby money and materials are provided and the Indians do their own building. The Government has established a school where the Indians can learn carpentry. In the past, community halls have been built by outsiders not taking into consideration the needs or desires of the people residing there. It is hoped that this hall will help tourism in the area as it is in the heart of the goose hunting country.

In her final remarks, Mrs. Craik commented on the controversy surrounding the name IODE and the desire of some members to update its name. "As old fashioned as it may seem the letters IODE sound firm, full of concerned people and give stability at a time when others are going off on tangents," she said. Her definition of IODE summed it up clearly — Imperial, commanding or leading; Order, group of people in common pursuit; Daughter, women concerned with their country, and Empire, a vast and extensive territory.

Mrs. B. Milroy thanked the speaker for her intersting talk and presented her with a selection of cheeses.

Following the dinner members viewed the display put on by the Chapter. Mrs. Kokesh thanked everyone who attended and all the members who had helped make the 60th anniversary celebrations such a memorable success.

Tempting Fish Kabob

Mary Moore watches while David Darker takes his first bite of a Fish Kabob — hot off the grill — at The Wharf, one of the University of Guelph's new specialty dining rooms.

Specialty Dining Rooms at Guelph University

By MARY MOORE

Der Keller is the German restaurant supervised by a German chef imported from Hamburg Paul Behrendt. The Wharf is a seafood restaurant where I ate a hot Fish Kabob consisting of shrimp, mushrooms, scallops and green pepper on a 6" stainless steel skewer. (That made me want to go back to college!) The 59-59 Club is for short orders and sizzling hot pizzas (which I tasted).

All of these new specialty dining rooms at the University of Guelph were re-designed to supplement four traditional university dining halls to make eating a varied and exciting experience for students. Specialty dining rooms are unusual at Canadian universities. The three at Guelph are an attempt, on a limited budget, to escape from the impersonality and institutional atmosphere of most university cafeterias, says Peter Clark, Director of Administrative Services for the University. I found that the new cafeterias gave a warmth and personality to the rather neutral surroundings of most traditional university cafeterias and I am sure students will appreciate their atmosphere.

Under a new imaginative food service program all students, at Guelph, whether living on or off campus can choose one of three methods of buying their meals: (a) a full board contract; (b) a partial board contract or (c) cash for each meal. Furthermore students contracting for full board or partial board contracts receive a discount on the cash value of it. Students can eat in any dining room they choose.

One of the board members told me that about 90 per cent of the students have the full three big advantages: they receive the discount; their parents can be comforted knowing they are paid for and their children are well fed; and they are welcome to bring their parents or friends as guests.

On my tour of the new specialty dining rooms we were accompanied by members of the student body who had been elected to serve on the students' behalf on the food advisory board. They made me feel proud again, but better still, proud of the students know-how and intense interest in this unique concept of feeding the 7,000.

After tasting pizza in the 59-59 Club and Fish Kabobs in The Wharf we ended up in Der Keller for a German dinner personally served by Paul Behrendt and a Spanish student waitress. This is the only dining room with waitress service and it was set up this way at the request of students as the boys would have a place to take their girl friends.

All of the following Daily Specials were 80 cents: Stuffed Rolled Beef Braised, with Butter Beans and Boiled Potatoes; Bratwurst Thuringer Style with Red Cabbage and Creamed Potatoes; Chopped Sirloin Steak with Cabbage Bavarian Style and French Fries; Smoked Pork Loin (Delicious!) with Sauerkraut and Potato Puree; Braised Beef with Cauliflower and Boiled Potatoes; Goulash with Cream Green Beans and Rice or Potatoes; Meat Dumplings Konigsberg Style with Mixed Braised Loin of Pork with Red Cabbage and Boiled Potatoes. Anyone for Der Keller?

Between four of us I think we tasted all including a sampling of each of five desserts: Apple Strudel, Mocha Tart, Vegetables and Potato Puree; Cheese Cake, Black Forest Cake and Kugelhupf.

So parents, when you visit your sons and daughters on the University of Guelph Campus you can take them out for a gourmet dinner and charge the meal to them under their food service contract.

READ CWL

READ — Michael Mahoney, researcher for the drug addiction clinic at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital gave an informative talk on the drug problem at the recent meeting of the Read Catholic Women's League.

At this time an open meeting was held. The guest speaker was introduced by Francis Coffey and following the address an interesting question period followed and Mrs. Howell also from the drug addiction clinic assisted Mr. Mahoney in answering questions dealing with drug abuse.

Both speakers urged members of the CWL to write their members of parliament and with a 100 per cent effort could do much to help in completely doing away with these harmful drugs.

Miss Anne Healey, president of the CYO thanked the speakers.

Coffee and doughnuts were served in the dining room after the meeting.

Speaker for the November meeting will be Mrs. Breen O'Connor, 1st. vice-president of the Diocesan CWL.

Ann Landers

Teenager Regrets High School Fling

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just finished reading the letter about the 13-year-old sex-bomb who teased the middle-age man next door.

ANN LANDERS

At 13, I, too, had some wild fantasies about married men. When I was 16 I got my wish. He was my high school English teacher. I teased him until finally he was mine. At first it was exciting. We met in the school storeroom and out-of-the-way motels. For two years, until I graduated, I believed he would marry me when he could honorably leave his wife. I was wrong.

I am 18 and there's a great big hole in my heart. Those wonderful high school years when I should have been dating boys my own age I was sneaking around with this married man. Now I have no confidence or self-respect. I'm ashamed of the way I allowed myself to be used.

If I could be Ann Landers for just a few minutes. I'd tell every girl in the world to stay away from married men. It's fun at first, but after the thrill is gone the pain is unbearable. — ST. LOUIS BLUES.

DEAR ST. L.: I couldn't have done better myself. — in fact, not as well. And now, I urge you to put the past behind you and concentrate on building a good life for yourself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: That letter from "Irate Sister" has given me courage to write this letter. My husband's first wife left him when their son was 17 months old. For years Vic had no idea where she was. When the boy was eight, Vic and I were married.

Guess who wrote to Vic 10 years later to say she'd like to come to town for their son's high school graduation? The Missing Link in person. She asked Vic to make hotel reservations for her. I insisted that she be a guest in our home.

When she arrived I knew I had done the right thing. She did herself in promptly by making such dumb remarks as, "I really never stopped loving my husband . . ." and "If I had not left him, those adorable little girls would have been mine." Vic and I kept our sense of humor and no harm was done.

The next year, the "Missing Link" returned for a few days and again we treated her as a guest. She was still making dumb remarks but we both managed to keep smiling. That was the last we heard of her. She saw our marriage was solid and there was no point in hanging around. If you think there's a lesson to be learned here, print my letter, Ann. Otherwise, toss it in the basket. — TRAVELLED THE ROAD.

DEAR TRAVELLED: Your letter is too good for the basket. Thanks for writing.

200 Attend L.O.L Dinner

A banquet and social evening sponsored by Central Hastings County L.O.L. was held in Springbrook Orange Hall when about 200 guests sat down to a bountiful meal featuring fried chicken which was prepared and served by the members of Springbrook U.C.W.

County Master Bro. Keith Clancy was chairman for the evening's program. After extending a welcome to the guests, he introduced a number of Grand Lodge officers and other distinguished visitors.

The guest speaker of the evening R. W. Bro. Lyn Jones, Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter of Western Ontario, was introduced by P.G.M. Bro. Lorne Hagerman.

Bro. Jones delivered an appropriate address stressing three things that are very important to the Order; namely: attitude, leadership, and participation. He also emphasized the need for members to update their organization.

Grand Auditor Bro. Clayton Burkitt expressed appreciation to Bro. Jones and presented him with a gift.

Entertainment was provided during the program by the Clancy Sisters and by Gordon Tocher. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Successful Living

Many Elderly People Have Emotional Problems on Retirement

By DORIS CLARK

"To die with one's boots on is the keynote of mental health in old age. Never to know that one is through, never to feel superfluous, never to lack significance, never to be without use, never to be without an outlet for creative urge, never to be without a word to the affairs of man." — Maxwell Gitelson, in The Emotional Problems of Elderly People.

When 65 was selected as an arbitrary retirement age, the average retirement expectation was approximately five years. Now it seems we are being allowed at least another five to ten years, and at the same time there is talk not of lifting but lowering the retirement age, to 60 or 55. Doesn't this argue the interpretation of having something useful to do after we have finished with that first career?

One of these days we are going to find out just how useful the retired person can be. All those years of schooling, experience and general living have consolidated into a uniquely capable personality.

It is up to community leaders and employment specialists to help each elderly person identify just what he has to give — and to find the circumstances in which he can give it effectively.

Dear Doris: While I was in hospital my husband had to drive a 20 - year - old girl who visited me back to town because her friend didn't come back to pick her up. My husband said she could come up to our apartment because her own keys were in the friend's car. He talked to her for a while and then went to bed and left her in the livingroom with a pillow and some quilts for her if she wanted to stay.

When he got up and went to the livingroom later she was gone. Really, if he had touched her I would know. He told me about her, and that he hadn't done anything. But just the same it hurt me very much.

I still bring that girl up and he still tells me to forget it because they didn't do anything. He really loves the baby and me, I have always been jealous but more so since married. I don't want to lose my husband. What can I do about this?

Since my dad ran around I judge my husband the same. —Jealous.

Dear Jealous: Now look here: this is going to take some discipline on your part. Jealousy is a horrible habit; the habit of a person who doesn't have enough confidence in herself.

It usually has very little to do with the person who is being accused.

Think about your husband; not about yourself. Think about giving him the love and trust that he deserves. Life is long and there just isn't time for soul - destroying negative emotions.

* * *

Dear Doris: Please help! I'm learning that poor posture in my younger years has resulted in an ugly dowager's hump and round shoulders.

Is it too late? I'll do anything; any kind of exercises, to straighten up! — Stoopid.

Dear Stoopid: Cheer up! Chin in! It's not too late to keep it from getting any worse, and a good regime of exercise can help, even now. Not only that, but bends and stretches can make you feel better.

The 10-cent leaflet "Don't Slump Into A Hump" was made for you, with its back-strengthening exercises. I'm sending you a copy.

Rehabilitation for Alcoholics Meets with Success

OTTAWA (CP) — Ann St. Louis's program to rehabilitate alcoholics has a 80-per-cent success rating.

Mrs. St. Louis, after 28 years in the public service, was recently awarded a cheque for $1,000 and a certificate of merit under the public service incentive award plan. She has also written a manual for supervisors in government departments on how to treat alcoholism and problem drinking among employees.

This manual is being adopted in other departments and will eventually be distributed throughout the public service in Canada.

Mrs St. Louis works for the customs and excise branch of the department of national revenue. She became concerned about the alcoholic employee in 1955 when she was appointed the branch's personnel counselor.

"I was in charge of the section dealing with promotions, transfers and retirements, and while I was processing retirements, I noticed people retired with hundreds of days of sick leave to their credit," she said.

"But there were some who had little or no sick leave left after working for 25 or 40 years I could understand this: if the employee had a chronic illness and was required to be absent frequently.

"I checked and investigated and I found that many cases involved the employee being absent on Fridays, Mondays, or the day after pay day. A pattern began to emerge."

Mrs. St. Louis persuaded the department to begin an alcoholic rehabilitation program.

She herself took a course at the University of Windsor, attended the International Congress on Alcoholism in Washington and went to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal.

"After all this research and study, I decided the key person to do something about alcoholism was the employee's immediate supervisor. That's the best person to observe on a day-to-day basis whether drinking habits affect the employee's attendance or work performance.

"Since the program was instituted, more and more alcoholics are coming to light." She estimated that approximately three to four per cent of the national work force are alcoholics.

"The percentage in federal employment is no greater than in the private sector."

Once a supervisor in customs and excise detects an employee with a drinking problem, he offers counsel. If there is no improvement, the employee is referred to Mrs. St. Louis who tells him about the methods and agencies in the community at his disposal.

Most are referred to the department of national health and welfare for a medical assessment, then to the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation for treatment.

Mrs. St. Louis said few alcoholic employees are women, but she gets plenty of calls from men in all job categories asking what approach they should take with wives who have drinking problems.

"There are lots of executives who can't see they have a problem at home. They come home with a briefcase full of work, retire to their studies and tell their wives to have dinner ready in two hours. What do they think their wives are doing during this time? They're having a drink or two or three, that's what."

Because of her expertise on the subject, she is invited to speak at many meetings. Recently she was guest speaker at the 25th annual conference held by Alcoholics Anonymous in Miami Beach, and is to appear before the American Management Association in New York City later this year.

Requests for her manual have come from Australia, India, Yugoslavia, Ireland, Costa Rica, Central America and France.

Points for Parents

Mother: "Come on, hurry up and get into your pajamas. It's already past your bedtime."

"... And another safety feature — we've developed a very, very weak engine."

China to Buy $160 Million of Canadian Wheat

OTTAWA (CP) — There was good news for market-shy prairie farmers Tuesday when the government announced that China will be taking up to 88 million bushels of Canadian wheat in the new crop year. It could mean $160 million.

This is the first major sale of the new crop year, and the biggest ever made in a single country over a one-year period. While the actual negotiated figure calls for 88 million bushels, China will accept up to 98 million bushels if Canada can ship it. To fulfill the contract, at least 88½ million bushels must be shipped.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board who announced the sale to a desk-thumping Commons, said the railways have assured him they will supply boxcars to move not only the wheat for this contract "but the record quantities of grain we expect to export this year."

Optimism about Canada's wheat exports this year has been running high in Ottawa recently, and Mr. Lang told reporters Tuesday officials are almost certain that 700 million bushels of grain will be sold. This would compare with 474 million bushels last year, and would be about 73 million bushels above the record set in 1963-64.

He was not, he explained, telling farmers to grow all the wheat they wanted to. He was advising them of prospects in advance so they could make their decisions.

The contract with China largely involves No. 2, 3, and 4 northern with smaller quantities of durum and Alberta Red Winter.

The bushel prices were not released. The payment plan is the same as last year, with 25 per cent cash on loading and the balance over 18 months. The interest rate was not disclosed.

Ireland Faces Possibility of Election

DUBLIN (CP) — Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch was confronted today with a party revolt which could force him into calling a general election.

The crisis blew up when it was disclosed that three unnamed members f his Fianna Fail party would support a vote of confidence in Lynch to be called during a new session of the Dail (Parliament) which starts today.

The government has a parliamentary majority of five. The opposition of three Fianna Fail members would mean defeat on any given issue.

On his return from the United Nations Monday, Lynch made it clear that if dissidents voted against him or deliberately abstained in the Dail he would have no option but to go to the country.

At a closed meeting late Tuesday night and early today, Lynch won a 73-to-3 vote of confidence from his parliamentary party. He did not identify the dissidents or say if they were the same deputies who said they would not support him in Parliament.

The six-hour meeting was attended by former finance minister Charles Haughey, cleared in court last week of allegations of plotting to smuggle arms into Northern Ireland for the use of minority Roman Catholic extremists. Lynch dismissed Haughey from his cabinet when the charges were made.

Haughey, a strong republican dedicated to ending British rule of the six northern counties, is widely believed to be a contender for the premiership if Lynch falters.

Demon Barber Shaves Britain's Welfare State

LONDON (CP) — The chancellor of the exchequer got a new, unofficial title today—the "demon barber" who dared to shave Britain's sacred welfare state.

"Ouch" cried The Sun and a number of other left-of-centre newspapers as the full scope of Anthony Barber's mini-budget hit the headlines.

Tory-supporting papers, however, gave the chancellor a pat on the back as he announced cuts in personal and corporation income taxes for the first time in 11 years.

But free school milk for most students above the age of seven will be stopped. Charges for national health medicine, dental care and spectacles will be increased. Changes will be made in food subsidies which will likely mean higher food prices.

And subsidies for a number of industrial developments, commuter transport and other operations will be halted.

The upshot, as Barber sees it, is to make more Britons stand on their own feet instead of depending on the public treasury.

"There is too much government interference," Barber told a television audience after presenting his budget surprises in the Commons Tuesday.

Britain's living standards had fallen behind those of other countries because of high income tax, he said. Britain at one time had been one of the world's richest countries. But because of the high tax—roughly 41 per cent for most middle-class payers—many Britons had concluded that there no longer was any point to seeking promotion or working overtime.

Starting next April, the rate of personal income tax will be dropped by about sixpence in the pound—roughly six cents on $2.56—or by several percentage points for the middle-class payers. Many Britons will be able to save between £20 and 140 a year on their taxes.

Corporation income tax will be reduced immediately to 4½ per cent from 45 per cent and depreciation allowances will be increased to provide more business incentive.

But while the taxpayer will be able to retain more of his earnings, he will have to dig deeper in his pocket for medical care and probably for food and rail transport.

The system of paying farmers a direct subsidy from the government treasury will be switched to one of pushing up import duties on selected food items thereby raising domestic prices and giving British farmers a higher price for their sales.

Canadian officials are concerned about this scheme—likely to come into operation in a matter of months—and are exploring with British officials how this will affect Canada's traditional market here for wheat and other items.

"At this rate," said the labor-supporting Daily "Mirror, "Mr. Barber will soon be known as Sweeney Todd, the demon barber of Westminser. The original Sweeney slit his customers' throats while shaving them."

Offensive Errors Give Tigers Winning Margin Over Moira

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Even the 96 solid fingers of the Moira Seniors' "Animal" defence weren't enough to plug the holes left by a sputtering offensive unit as Trenton took advantage of two Trojan miscues to come up with a 12-6 win and advance to the finals of the Bay of Quinte football championship.

For two and a half periods it appeared as though the game could end in a scoreless deadlock as Moira turned back every serious Trenton scoring threat, while the sturdy Tiger defence never allowed any serious penetration towards their own goalline.

The breaking point came midway through the third quarter when the relay to punter Dennis Gorcey went over his head giving Trenton possession of the ball on the Trojan one-yard line.

Fullback Dan Dow cracked over left tackle on the first offensive play to give the winners all the points they needed.

Trenton was able to move the ball well the first half, but stubborn defensive work by the "Animals" prevented the white-clad visitors from getting on the scoreboard.

The finest moment for the Moira defence came near the end of the first half, when they held Trenton from stroking after the Tigers had wrecked up a first - and - goal on the nine-yard line.

Dow carried twice to the Moira one-yard line, where a fired up defensive unit held the big fullback on a third-down line plunge.

Trenton had another chance to get on the board in the last minute of play but tackle Jim Stathers broke through to block a 20-yard field goal attempt by Gary Keech.

Steve Soul killed any offensive ideas that the Trojans may have fostered by intercepting a Rob Matthews pass with only seconds remaining in the half.

Both offences were almost completely crippled in the second half until the errant Moira snap produced the game's first score.

The Tigers put the game out of reach in the final quarter recovering a fumble on the Moira 20. Dow barged off right tackle on a twisting 15-yard run. The Trenton wheelhorse went over on the next play for his second major of the game.

Virtually all of the offensive yardage for the two teams came on Dow's off - tackle slants and end sweeps by Moira halfback Jim Lennox. The Tiger fullback was able to grind out 112 tough yards on 27 carries, while Lennox accounted for 73 yards rushing on 11 tries.

Turnovers, as well as excellent defence played a major role in stalling the offences as the winners lost one fumble and had one pass intercepted, while Moira fumbled twice, and had two interceptions in addition to the errant snap.

Both passing attacks were virtually non - existent. Trenton's only completion in six attempts came on an option throw from Dow to flanker Chris Long which covered 17 yards.

Mathews was good on only four of 11 passes and was buried several times by a strong Trenton pass rush led by tackle John Davy, who was constantly putting pressure on the Moira passer.

Defensively tackles Harold Brant and Jim Stathers along with linebacker Bob Baycroft and defensive back Tony Gonsalves were standouts for the Trojans, while Davy, Soul and Dow were the driving forces in a solid Trenton defence.

The Tigers go on to meet Quinte for the Bay of Quinte senior championship.

Trenton fullback Dan Dow cracks into the centre of the Moira Trojan defence in a senior high school play-off game yesterday. Dow counted two touchdowns as the Tigers recorded a 12-0 win to advance to the Bay of Quinte finals against Quinte Secondary School. In junior play, Moira stopped Quinte 52-0 to gain a spot in the championship game with Centennial.

Senior Saints Trounce Napanee Junior Trojans Face Centennial

The Quinte Seniors and Centennial Juniors moved into the Bay of Quinte High School Football finals yesterday as they both shut out their opponents.

The Senior Saints were led in their 53-0 rout of Napanee by Rick Graham and Mike Gorgan, who each chipped in two touchdowns.

Stan Brooks, Darwin Easton, Paul Hall, and Bill Kirkham each scored one major.

Brian Hennessey and Easton tallied two point conversions while Terry Meagher booted a single point after.

The Centennial Juniors moved to the finals against Moira as they pounded DCI by 28-0.

Bob Vanderwater was the big gun for the Chargers, scoring three times and picking up a pair of two point conversions.

Quarterback Rodger Mountford majored twice and added a two point conversion, while Jim Whelan tallied a single two point convert.

Moira Juniors smashed their way to the league finals with a 52-0 whitewashing of the Quinte Junior Saints.

Steve Kirby was the driving force in the Trojan attack with four touchdowns. Other major scores went to Peter Stadlowich, Dave Rutherford, Bob Lorimer and Dave Hilborne.

Rick Bombay and Rutherford added two - point conversions to the winners' point total.

Standout on the offensive line for Moira was Keith Stather, while Clifford Ralph led the defence to their shut-out performance.

Hamilton Moves Up In Junior A Loop With 8-3 Rout

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings rose from a fourth-place tie to third place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Tuesday with an 8-3 rout of Oshawa Generals, while St. Catharines Black Hawks strengthened their hold on second by beating Niagara Falls Flyers 6-4.

Hamilton was tied with Toronto Marlboroughs one point behind third-place Ottawa 67s. With both those teams idle, the Red Wings moved to third spot with 16 points with a 8-2 won-lost record.

Peterborough Petes, also idle Tuesday, are well in front with 17 points St. Catharines' victory Tuesday gives second-place Hawks 12 points.

The Wings, playing without defenceman Jim Schoenfeld and forwards Ed Gilbert and Pat Hickey, sidelined with injuries, used five Junior B players.

Tom Williams led the Hamilton scorers with three goals while two goals each went to Terry Ryan and Ron LeBlanc.

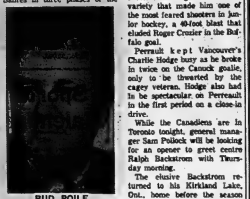
Rick Kehoe scored the other Hamilton goal.

Pete Sullivan, Doug Ferguson and Tom Simpson replied for Oshawa.

The teams were tied 1-1 after the first period but after 40 minutes Hamilton led 5-3.

Hamilton plays next in Montreal Sunday and the Generals travel to Ottawa Friday.

In Niagara Falls, the Hawks led during the entire 60 minutes.



Down Buffalo 7-2

Poile's Canucks Play in Tune

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bud Poile played second fiddle to Punch Imlach at last June's National Hockey League draft in Montreal.

By a stroke of luck, the Vancouver Canuck general manager found himself taking second choice to Imlach's Buffalo Sabres in three phases of the

Playing First Fiddle

NHL's system of player selection—the amateur draft, league draft and inter-league draft.

As the league's two new members, both clubs were starting from scratch and the players made available by the other 12 clubs were a motley group at best with few exceptions.

Tuesday night marked the first meeting of the season between the expansionists in the only league game scheduled. This time it was turnabout as Poile's Canucks turned in an impressive 7-3 win over the Sabres.

Vancouver's victory firmly entrenched the West Coast team in fourth place in the NHL's East Division with eight points, three behind the division leaders—Boston Bruins, New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens.

Buffalo remained in a fifth-place tie with Detroit Red Wings, each with five points and three points ahead of cellar-dwelling Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs entertain Montreal tonight while Detroit is at New York, Chicago Black Hawks are in Minneapolis against Minnesota North Stars, Los Angeles Kings are at Pittsburgh Penguins and St. Louis Blues are host to California Golden Seals.

The Canucks never left the game in doubt for 15,008 fans as they opened a 3-0 lead in the first period and took a 5-1 lead into the third.

Dale Tallon, No. 2 in the amateur draft behind Buffalo's Gil Perreault, held the edge in their matchup although both youngsters, fresh out of junior hockey ranks, electrified the crowd with several brilliant moves.

Tallon contributed a goal and assist to the Canuck win, the goal his first in NHL play, while Perreault was held off the score sheet. Tallon's goal was of the variety that made him one of the most feared shooters in junior hockey, a 40-foot blast that eluded Roger Crozier in the Buffalo goal.

Perreault kept Vancouver's Charlie Hodge busy as he broke in twice on the Canuck goalie, only to be thwarted by the cagey veteran. Hodge also had to be spectacular on Perreault in the first period on a close-in drive.

While the Canadiens are in Toronto tonight, general manager Sam Pollock will be looking for an opener to greet centre Ralph Backstrom with Thursday morning.

The elusive Backstrom returned to his Kirkland Lake, Ont., home before the season started to get in a little hunting and consider his future in hockey.

The 33-year-old veteran of 11 seasons in a Canadien uniform said in a telephone interview Tuesday night he would be meeting with Pollock Thursday. He would not confirm reports emanating from Montreal he was Vancouver-bound and tickeled for a return to the NHL with the Canucks.

Another former Canadien was in the news Tuesday night. Claude Provost, who retired from pro ranks earlier this year rather than become an assistant coach with Montreal's American League farmclub, Montreal Voyageurs, was named coach of Rosemount Nationals of the Quebec Junior Hockey League.

Provost replaced Leo Boivy, fired by the Nationals Monday.

Supreme Court, Bob Foster

Two Obstacles in Clay-Frazier Path

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court and Bob Foster stood today, as the two major blocks to a heavyweight title fight between Muhammad Ali and champion Joe Frazier, a fight that easily could be the richest in history and one of the best.

Figures like $10 million were being bantered about Tuesday, the day after Ali returned to the ring after a 3½-year exile and stopped Jerry Quarry in three rounds by splitting his left eyebrow.

Madison Square Garden in New York wants the Ali-Frazier fight for February and Boxing interests also are trying for it.

But first there is the appeal of Ali's conviction in 1967 of refusing induction into the Army. Should the Supreme Court refuse to hear the appeal, Ali faces a prison sentence of five years. There is no indication of when this litigation will end.

Then there's the lanky figure of light heavyweight champion Bob Foster, who will take his thunderous left hook into the ring in a bid for the latter's crown in Detroit Nov. 18.

There is also an outside chance that Ali might fight rugged Oscar Bonavena in December for Miami promoter Chris Dundee.

"I could box you and we'd sell out," Ali said to a reporter Tuesday as a means of underscoring his gate appeal which in the current social and political climate of the U.S. seems greater than ever.

It is certain that a Frazier-Ali fight would be one of the biggest draws in boxing history.

"There is no limit to what an Ali-Frazier title fight would gross," said Michael Malitz, president of Sports Action, Inc., which promoted the Ali-Quarry fight. "It could make $10 million-certainly more than any fight in history. We would run out of satellites."

MUHAMMAD ALI

Monday night's fight was shown on closed-circuit television to 306 locations, with 800,000 seats, in the United States and Canada. It also was beamed to South America, Europe, Australia, Asia and the Soviet Union.

No receipts are available but Ali's percentage was expected to be about $1 million and Quarry's about $300.

The closed-circuit television showings in Madison Square Garden drew a crowd of 17,000 and $306,000 at $15 top, we'd probably go to $2 million live for Ali-Frazier," said Garden matchmaker Teddy Brenner.

Ali, 28, now has a licence to fight in New York, a licence that was greeted after Atlanta cracked the ban against Ali by giving him a licence.

Ali was impressed by the warm reception he got from the packed throng of 5,100 in the old Atlanta Municipal Auditorium.

"It's nice feeling when they're for you," said the man who rose to the heavyweight title as Cassius Clay and who knows the feeling of people being against him.

As for his return to the fight game, Ali said: "This is my occupation. Don't you think the people at General Motors who are on strike would be glad to be back to work."

And of Frazier, Ali said, "It'll come. I don't have to talk about it. I'll be home and the phone will be ringing, and he'll be home the phone will be ringing. People want it."

There's already a line on such a fight. It was quoted as even by oddsmaker Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder after he watched Ali's impressive comeback.

Polo Enthusiasts Plan To Turn Back Sporting Clock

OJAI, Calif. (AP) — Think back to another era: Women wore petticoat-stuffed dresses that touched the floor, gentlemen with long handlebar mustaches played polo on weekends.

That 19th-century atmosphere—sans petticoats—is being promoted on a multi-million-dollar scale in tois shrubbery - enclosed mountain community 75 miles up the coast from Los Angeles. If the promoters have their way, "Valley-ho" may replace "charge" in the sports vernacular.

In Santa Barbara, polo has maintained an existence on a small field adjacent to U.S. 101, the scenic coast highway.

Now the Joe Fedele Co. of Encino, Calif., has plans to take the polokis down the coast and up the hill to 200 acres of plush country land, away from the rush of cars headed north and south.

The mustache: It's on the face of Michael Butler, the producer of the rock musical Hair; an avid polo player and founder of the Shangri-La Co., a firm which will develop the land for equestrian sports.

It's to be like nothing else in this country.

Fedele said only the International Sports Core in Oak Brook, Ill., near Chicago, has similar facilities but that "we hope to outdo Oak Brook right here."

He said the cost of laying the polo fields—there will be four in all—will be around $1 million. The first polo match is scheduled for January.

The polo fields near Santa Barbara never drew more than 500 spectators. But large bleacher-type seats are to flank the new fields. In addition, indoor and outdoor arenas will provide hunter's and jumper's courses and even a fox-hunt course.

Butler's love of the game prompted him to stage a series of matches last year. Encouraged by public response, Shangri-La Co. was formed to get folks here interested in polo. But apparently only the rich can play.

Ponies have been known to go for $50,000. But if Butler's plans to build the world's polo centre are to take shape, he'll have to beat out his father.

Paul Butler, one of the prime polo enthusiasts in this country, singlehandedly developed The Oak Brook Sports Core, one of the largest polo and equestrian areas in the world.

DETROIT (CP) — Guelph CMC's moved into first place over Chatham Maroons in the Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Tuesday night by clipping Detroit Junior Red Wings 8-7. Detroit slipped into third place with the loss. Its second in eight games. Don Kachivo and Peter Darcy led the Guelph scorers with three goals each. Bob Dobek scored two for Detroit while single goals went to Ian Howe, Bill Ciralle, Jean Assedorian, Doug Ross and Pat Donnelly. Detroit outshot Guelph 53-44. The game was to be played Monday night but was postponed to Tuesday. Guelph travels to Brantford Friday, and Detroit plays host to Welland Monday.

TORONTO (CP) — Sandy Hawley of Oshawa rode three winners at Greenwood race track Tuesday, one of them Porter Measure in the $4,100 featured seventh race. The wins gave Hawley a total of seven for the first two days of the fall meeting. Jockey Noel Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., claimed a foul against Hawley in the fifth but the stewards threw the claim out after a short deliberation. Fiona Flame in the first race and Celtic Glory in the second paid $85.10 for a daily double. Shoo-Owen and Joyce Creek combined for a $79.10 sameher in the fourth race. The seventh-race executor of Porter Measure and Miss Dancer paid $47.50.

Cournoyer Puts Punch Back in Hab Power Play

MONTREAL — Right winger Yvan Cournoyer has put the power back in Montreal Canadiens' power - play. The five - foot, seven - inch 165-pounder is the National Hockey League's leading goal scorer today and seven of his nine goals have been scored with the opposition short-handed.

YVAN COURNOYER

Cournoyer is tied with John McKenzie of Boston and Pit Martin of Chicago for second place in the individual scoring race, each with 11 points, two fewer than leader Phil Esposito of Boston. Esposito has six goals and seven assists in six game.

There is a three - way tie for fifth place with Wayne Cashman and Ken Hodge of Boston — the only undefeated team in the NHL — and Jean Beliveau of Canadiens each having 10 points, one more than Wayne Maki of Vancouver Canucks.

The last time Canadiens' power-play was outstanding was in 1956-57 and that season, Cournoyer contributed 20 of the team's 60 goals scored with an opposing player serving a penalty. Since then, Cournoyer scored a total 31 power - play goals, including 10 last season. Of his 161 NHL goals scored in regular-season play, 78 have been off the power-play.

Phil Esposito's leadership in the scoring race means that of the last 42 weeks of regular - season action, going back to the 12th week of the 1968-69 season, a Boston player has led the scoring for 37 weeks. Prior the third week on last season, defenceman Bobby Orr held the lead. For the last 13 weeks of the 1968-69 campaign, Esposito was the leader as he powered his way to a record 126 points. He was also the leader a week ago.

Orr, incidentally, is not only missing from among the top 15 names but also has lost his crown, at least temporarily, among defencemen to Gary Bergman of Detroit, who has two goals and five assists for seven points. Orr has two goals and three assists.

Pit Martin of Chicago is the leader in assists with nine, one more than Jean Beliveau of Montreal and John McKenzie of Boston.

Goaltender Ed Giacomin of New York, wearing a face mask for the first time in his career, has the best individual average among netminders who have played more than one game. He has had six goals against in five games, a 1.20 average. He also shares the lead in shutouts with Tony Esposito of Chicago. Each has two and Esposito's were consecutive during last weekend.

Reg Fleming of Buffalo Sabres leads in penalty minutes with 67 minutes.

Bucks Ground San Diego

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee Bucks, with Bob Dandridge scoring 30 points, defeated San Diego Rockets 125-113 in Milwaukee Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, New York Knicks had Willis Reed to help them to a 117-104 win over Seattle SuperSonics and Portland Trail Blazers defeated Buffalo Braves 119-108.

Dandridge scored 20 of his points in the first half, but Lew Alcindor of the Bucks picked up his fifth foul and San Diego cut a 22-point deficit to 82-75 before Milwaukee exploded into a 106-84 spread.

Alcindor finished with only 20 points—15 below his average—while Oscar Robertson had only 19. Elvin Hayes scored 34 for the Rockets.

The Knicks had a 48-44 halftime lead.

Portland converted 45 of 59 free throws in handing injured-riddled Buffalo its fourth consecutive setback. Stan McKenzie led the Trail Blazers with 27 points including 17 of 19 from the free-throw line. John Hummer topped the Braves with 23 points.

Don May suffered a sprained ankle in the first period and joined injured Buffalo teammates Dick Garrett and Bill Hosket on the sidelines. In addition, two Braves' players fouled out and Fred Crawford was ejected in the fourth quarter after drawing two technical fouls.

Portland overcame a 54-50 halftime deficit by outscoring Buffalo 30-23 in the third quarter to go ahead to stay 80-77.

Grey Cup Capacity Assured

TORONTO (CP) — Grey Cup tickets—22,000 of them, worth a record $446,597—have been distributed by the Canadian Football League and the CFL says it could sell twice as many if there was a stadium large enough to hold the crowd.

The 1970 game is set for Saturday, Nov. 28, at Canadian National Exhibition stadium in Toronto with a capacity of 33,133 for league games.

Secretary-treasurer Greg Fulton said Tuesday tickets are divided between Eastern and Western conferences, with the four teams in the host EFC div ision getting 70 per cent and the five teams in the WFC sharing 30 per cent.

"Each team in the EFC gets a basic allotment of 3,800 tick ets, all equal in quality. Toronto gets another 3,800 tickets as host club and an extra 2,000 go the EFC winner.

"Western clubs get a basic allotment of 3,400 with an extra 2,000 to the WFC titlist."

CNE stadium won't be at regular-season capacity for the Grey Cup game. Five hundred rail seats are removed for crowd control.

Of the remaining seats, not all are revenue-producing. Some go to VIPs, there are various allotments for amateur football across Canada and there is a section set aside to take the overflow from the press box.

Alouette Resurgence Costs Berger Bucks

MONTREAL (CP) — The cost of luring new life into Montreal Alouettes will leave the Eastern Football Conference club with a substantial deficit this year, says owner Sam Berger.

"It's to be expected," Berger said in an interview. "Operating a football team in the Canadian Football League is not a money-making proposition at the best of times.

"In fact, when I took over the club, the most I could hope for was that I wouldn't lose money."

Berger, an Ottawa businessman, officially took over the Als last Dec. 1 from Joe Atwell.

This year's version of the Alouettes is staffed with 32 new players, has a completely new management and a new coaching staff headed by Sam Etcheverry.

During the off-season, improvements were made to the Autostade, the Als home field, and services there were also improved.

Apart from the approximate $1.25 million that Berger paid for the club, the costs were too big a penalty to overcome.

"We just had too much to do," said Berger. "We had to put the accent of a good team together and in order to do this we had to pay bonuses for certain players.

"The stadium had to be improved, parking facilities had to be enlarged, concessions had to be increased and ushersies had to be hired and trained to take care of this year's increased attendance."

The Alouettes spent $30,000 improving the Autostade field. The club's lyden hill amounted to another $20,000, primarily because of the structure of the Autostade.

"Nevertheless, most of the money spent on the improvements this year represent non-recurring expenditures and next year we hope that the club will reach the break-even point."

To reach the break-even point, the Alouettes have to average 25,000 a game at the 32,000-seat Autostade. Berger says that operating a football team in Canada is not like running a hockey or baseball team.

"In those two sports the teams play a great many games and sooner or later can expect to make a profit.

"We only have seven, home games and play them in stadiums that are about half the size of those in the United States."

At an average ticket price of $3.79 per seat, the Als would take in $647,500 for seven games, with 25,000 people in attendance at each game. The remainder of the club's income to meet an estimated operating cost of $1 million comes from radio, television and the team's share of the concessions.

"We make money at all on the parking," said Berger. "We're happy to give the fans the service."

Perillat Aging Quickly

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Perillat, former member of France's national ski team, believes there is one thing wrong with professional ski racing: By the time a pro circuit is fully developed he will be too old to be competitive.

Perillat, now 30 and one of the top amateur ski racers of the last decade, is one of a number of top racers who are dabbling in various pro skiing endeavors.

He is in Montreal this week to attend a winter sports show. He owns a ski shop in La Clusaz, France, and lends his name to a wide range of ski products from gloves to glasses. His current visit is to endorse a French ski.

"I wish professional ski racing had been fully developed before I retired," Perillat said. "I would rather have been a fulltime pro than the kind of amateurs we were. But the pro circuit is still too young."

Grudge Match In West

REGINA (CP) — When Edmonton Eskimos meet Saskatchewan Roughriders at Taylor Field tonight, the game will be a prestige rubber match now that playoff positions have been decided in the Western Football Conference.

Saskatchewan beat visiting Edmonton 23-11 in their first game July 31 but the Eskimos came back to win 19-6 when the Roughriders visited Edmonton Sept. 12.

Tonight's game is the last of the regular season for the Eskimos, who are assured of second place with nine wins and six defeats. Saskatchewan, with a 12-3 record, has one more game—at Vancouver Sunday against British Columbia Lions.

Since the outcome of tonight's game will not affect playoff positions, reputation is the main thing at stake.

"There is quite a lot of pride riding on this game," said Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys. "We are getting a little tired of hearing about how the Eskimos are the hottest team in the Canadian Football League."

It was his squad that started the Eskimos' seven-game winning streak with that 19-6 loss last month. Their only other defeat was a bruising 30-0 loss at the hands of Calgary Stampeders, the third-place team with an 8-7 record, Aug. 17 in Regina.

"We'll see tonight whose win streak is broken," said Keys.

Edmonton's Ray Jauch, Canadian Football League Coach of the Year, plans nothing surprising in the face of the determined home team.

"I know what Roughriders will be out to do—kick the daylights out of us just in case we meet later. We'll go with our regular lineups at first because it would be nice to win this game and keep up momentum."

Jauch admitted he is worried about his inconsistent offence after a narrow 15-11 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers last weekend.

"We'd make the big play and then we wouldn't. It's been a pattern our last couple of games. I was hoping we'd come out of it."

'Canucks Go Home!'

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Canadian ownership of one of Maryland's three race tracks has been blamed for a threatened boycott by thoroughbred horse owners at Laurel Race Course Nov. 16—entry day for the Washington, D.C. International to be run the next day.

Fendall Clagett, president of the Horsemen's Benevolent and protective Association, said an impasse over eight association proposals has resulted mainly from "the unavailability of a spokesman for Bowie Race Course."

"I have the feeling that Laurel and Pimlico Racetrack are ready to go along with our plan after a few minor compromises," Clagett said Tuesday.

"But George Tucker, president of Bowie, is apparently too busy in Canada to get together with the horsemen and the other track heads.

Rising Health Costs Must Be Slowed: Wells

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Thomas Wells said Tuesday ways must be found to curtail the "sharply escalating costs of health services" in Ontario.

He told the Ontario Hospital Association that unless such curtailment is achieved, health costs in the next decade will rise "beyond the capacity of the economy."

"One thing that has become abundantly clear is that the day when each hospital can proceed on its own, in competition with its neighbors, must be at an end.

"It is no longer acceptable in this province to have complex and expensive hospital facilities duplicated in several locations in a community or area when not absolutely needed, with the result that they are not being utilized to a full degree."

Mr. Wells also called for more effective use of present hospital facilities, "with the goal of obtaining more service without further capital investment."

He said a recent report of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission showed that the average length of stay in Ontario hospitals declined in 1969.

"Hopefully, this trend has continued in 1970," he said.

A province-wide reduction of one day in the average stay would represent about 1.3 million patient-days a year—the annual capacity of about 4,000 beds, Mr. Wells explained.

Warrant Was Mistake

Sentencing of Indian Mothers Illegal

TORONTO (CP) — Sentencing of two Indian mothers to the Vanier Institute for Women was illegal, Allan Grossman, minister of correctional services, said Tuesday in the Ontario legislature.

Mr. Grossman said only females serving indefinite terms were assigned to the Brampton Institute and it appeared Judge J. V. Fregeau of Kenora, Ont., made a mistake in issuing warrants to admit Doris Henry, 23, and Agnes Land, 29, when they had been assessed definite sentences.

One woman was sentenced to 12 months definite and six months indeterminate for breaking and entering in Kenora. The other received nine months definite and six months indeterminate.

They were sentenced Aug. 10 and admitted to Vanier Aug. 27, Mr. Grossman said.

In an interview outside the house, Mr. Grossman defended his department's action in admitting the mothers.

"When we get a warrant of committal from a court, we are required to keep that person until one set a court refers to [illegible] otherwise," he said.

He said "it is apparent" the sentences imposed on the Indian women were illegal, and "it may be" that they are being held illegally at Vanier.

But the "practical effect" of the women's stay at Brampton is "not too serious" since they will be held as if the sentences imposed were for indefinite terms, he said.

"They could be paroled in a week."

Mr. Grossman's statement in the house brought a barrage of questions from opposition members, led by Stephen Lewis, NDP leader.

Mr. Grossman said that "judges, like anyone else, are bound to make mistakes like anyone else."

"Sentencing people to reformatory?" Mr. Lewis shouted. "That's quite a mistake."

Watching the sharp exchange from the visitors' gallery was a delegation from the Ontario Union of Indians which had met earlier in the day with Attorney-General Arthur Wishart to discuss the same case, and other claims of Indian abuse.

Speaking to Mr. Lewis, the attorney-general said he could not grant executive clemency to the Indian mothers because they had been sentenced under the Criminal Code, a federal law.

However, he said he is investigating the possibility of appeal, working with Indian spokesmen, but warned that he would want to "get all the facts" in the case before giving opinions or making any decisions.

"I am as anxious as anyone to see the law administered evenly for all citizens of the province," Mr. Wishart said to applause from all sides of the house.

Directors of the Ontario Union of Indians meet here this weekend. Fred Plain, leader of the union, said in an interview after the Indians' meeting with Mr. Wishart the group will prepare a brief of 17 cases of "injustice" to Indians in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Lewis called on the government Monday to provide the legislature with full details of all 17 cases.

Mr. Wishart said in an interview that he knows of no other cases in which persons were sentenced to Ontario institutions on definite terms, although it could have happened before.

The law does not permit persons to be sentenced to definite terms in provincial institutions. The sentences must be indefinite so that the prisoners can be released as soon as officials decide rehabilitation has been complete.

Definite terms imposed by a court must be served in a local jail, for sentences up to three months, or in a federal penitentiary.

Mr. Wishart said the women had been defended at Kenora by a young law student who might easily have been unaware of the law.

He said it is impossible for his office to review all sentences to ensure they comply with the law.

Mr. Grossman said it is not his responsibility either, although his officials hold frequent meetings with lawyers and judges to explain how the law applies to provincial institutions.

Doctors' Fight Not Over

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Medical Association plans to carry the fight of Quebec medical specialists into the federal arena.

A special message issued by the national association says the board of directors soon will be asked for further support of the 4,000 specialists who held a 10-day strike in Quebec earlier this month.

Once provisions of the War Measures Act are lifted, Quebec legislation requiring doctors to practise within the medical care insurance program may be challenged under the Canadian Bill of Rights.

The CMA also said the Quebec medical care plan may not fill one of the requirements in federal legislation on medical care. Provinces that meet the federal requirements may collect roughly half the costs of their medical care plans.

Sign of Times

Premier-elect Richard Hatfield's campaign slogan caught the fancy of New Brunswick voters Monday and they elected the Conservative leader and 31 of his party, upsetting the Liberal regime of Louis Robichaud.

Media Coverage Good: Davey

TORONTO (CP) — The media did an effective job of covering the current political crisis in Quebec, Senator Keith Davey told the Central Canada Broadcasters' Association Tuesday night.

Sen. Davey, chairman of the Senate committee on the mass media, said coverage of the killing of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte and the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross by the Front de Liberation du Quebec was "full, fair and factual."

The senator said the press and broadcasters frequently serve as a whipping boy for "those who are unable to sort out the challenge of our time from those who report it."

"Broadcasters can and should help to destroy the insensitive apathy that dominates the soggy centre of the political spectrum," he said.

Earlier, six panelists spent more than two hours of the final day of the CCBA convention urging broadcasters to take the lead in fighting Canada's social problems.

The broadcasters got their highest marks from James A. Ratflin, counsel to Pollution Probe, who gave the media a major share of credit for the success achieved by the University of Toronto group in making the public aware of environmental dangers.

The keynote was struck by Harry J. Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, who said television's potential had been captured by men whose main objective was to sell their products and urged that it becomes a means of two-way communication for the viewers.

The CCBA, representing privately-owned English-language radio and television stations in Quebec and Ontario, was told by Walter Currie, president of the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada, that native people are in urgent need of help from the broadcasting industry.

The CBC has produced programs in the interest of farmers, French Canadians and the poor, including Indians, Mr. Currie said. But programs about Indians have been done "on a fragmentary basis, from the point of view of outsiders looking in, acting as an emotional catharsis for the affluent and as a substitute for action."

Lloyd A. Dennis, director of education for the Leeds and Grenville county board of education and co-author of the Hall-Dennis report on education to the Ontario government, said schools should study the consequences of present-day life rather than work to preserve the status quo.

Rose Betcherman, director of the women's bureau of the Ontario labor department, said the present generation of women will probably be the last to have the option of staying at home or going to work.

War Veterans

Dube Promises 'Generous, Human' Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Tuesday was promised "generous and human" legislation for war veterans early in this session by Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube.

Mr. Dube, in a fresh approach for a cabinet minister involved in House debate, admitted such legislation had been too slow in coming.

"If the wheels of justice are slow," he said, "the wheels of Parliament are even slower."

The minister spoke during this session's first opposition day, when opposition parties are allotted the time usually devoted to government legislation to debate a subject of their own choice.

Tuesday was the Conservatives' day, and leadoff speaker Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe) moved that the Commons urge the government to implement soon the recommendations approved by the Commons committee on veterans affairs last spring.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), chipped in with an amendment urging pensions increases be made retroactive at least back until April 1 of this year.

Under the rules, no votes are taken on opposition days. The Commons sat an hour beyond its normal adjournment hour so all interested MPs could speak.

Mr. Marshall said that while "burned-out" veterans were receiving monthly allowances of $105 for single persons and $175 for married, the government was squandering $7 million on Information Canada—"the money-eating monster"—to produce political propaganda.

Lloyd Francis (L — Ottawa West), chairman of the veterans affairs committee, said Liberal members were "pleased with the motion that has been brought forward."

Mr. Francis said two of the committee's major recommendations had been establishment of a pensions appeal board and special pensions for veterans severely disabled.

Mr. Knowles said "almost the first legislation brought into the House by the government should have been the bill implementing these improvements in the veterans legislation."

It has been agreed by everyone, he said, that Hong Kong veterans with any disability should be treated as having a 48 per cent disability so his pension will automatically be 50 per cent and his widow will automatically be entitled to a pension.

Jack Cullen (L—Sarnia-Lambton) said:

"I realize that governments must establish priorities, but the veterans have every right to insist that their welfare rates are very close to the top of the list of priorities."

Snowmobiles: The Boom Even Reaches a Quinte Farmyard

This Is Snowmobiles' Big Year According to Quinte Dealers

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Don't fret at any unexpected, unseasonal explosion in the Quinte consumer market right now.

It's likely only the snowmobile boom — back again for another year, hotter than ever.

The first snows of winter have yet to fall on the Quinte landscape. But, already, say dealers, a few of the intrepid little sports machine are gearing to set new records.

The snowmobile — the most popular all-Canadian outdoors invention since maple syrup — first became a phenomenon last year when its sales even outdistanced production of licence plates for such vehicles.

But any estimates that the awesome 1969 boom was a one - season stand are somewhat out there, with the snows of yesteryear.

The market's just wild this year," says a Trenton dealer.

"We're having fantastic sales already," echoes a Belleville dealer. "This year it's going to be bigger than last.

His prediction is supported by other major sales agents throughout the Quinte district.

All are agreed that 1969 was not the peak year for the new everyman sport that has revolutionized the attitude of Canadians to their winter.

Not only are there plenty of new customers, many of last year's purchasers are turning to buy second vehicles — some even a third, as snowmobiling infects whole families. Trade-ins are not numerous and are quickly snapped up.

The boom is all the more shocking since it's happening during tight-money time in Canada.

Prices range approximately from $600 to $1,600. Add in necessary clothing for the family, equipment extras and such added appliances as tow-trailers, and a minimum total investment could range close to $1,000

Yet, customers have been on the prowl for months, increasing in numbers as winter draws near.

Already, the motor vehicle licence bureau in Belleville has registered 135 snowmobiles — and not a snowflake yet in sight.

The authorities are wiser after last year's experience — when licence plates gave out and the short supply caused a hectic scramble around the province.

This year, Belleville Kenora Issuer George Clark says he already has received 1,800 plates for sale.

From the trend of talk among dealers every plate may be needed.

"I've sold more machines right now than I did last winter," estimates Belleville dealer Jack Knight.

Dealers, he said, thought that maybe last year might have hit the record.

"But it's been really good this year. I've been selling them since before summer."

Up to last week, even tradeins were lasting "about two days".

C. M. Howard, Deseronto dealer, agrees he is "way up in sales" and that "an awful lot of people are getting snowmobiles that never had them before".

"This year so far we've sold well over half of what we did all last year," said a Trenton salesman. "It's just unbelievable."

While customers are buying additional machines to meet family demands there still are "an awful lot of new customers" he adds.

Farley Vermilyea, Tharlow township farmer, went into the business for the first time this year.

He says a half-dozen local dealers competed for the franchise he won from a major manufacturer.

Customers started arriving at his farm even before the machines arrived, he recalls.

Further north, Madoc sportsman and sport store operator Ray Burris canvassed dealers in his town and reported similar reactions.

Trends included second machines and growing demand for heavier, more powerful vehicles, said Mr. Burris. Belleville dealer Bill Vaughan confirms that sales are "way ahead" and competition "very very keen".

One result of heavy competition is a lower markup — a fact which some snowmobile agents admit.

But markups on accessories and equipment can be a compensation, says one dealer. Snowmobile suits can range up to $50 for an adult, boots from $15 to $20.

Competition is heated up by the fact there are so many manufacturers in the market at present, complains one salesman.

He estimated the snowmobile boom had created 108 different producers across Canada and the United States. Eventually, the market will settle down and be served by 10 or 15 major makers. In the interim, however, the big operators are being dogged by small concerns, with local agents selling only a handful of machines which someday will be mechanically extinct, he claims.

Purchasing power needed to prop the snowmobile has to be siphoned from some other consumer sector — but the area is not easily identified.

An obvious one could be automobiles, and one finance company official says he has no doubt that car sales are affected.

However, a spokesman for one of the largest Quinte car dealerships did not think snowmobile sales were reflected "that badly" at all, in automobile markets.

A bedding appliance dealer was not certain that appliance sales — notably of such luxuries as color television and hi-fis — might be affected.

People are becoming more mobile in their "recreation — a trend reflected in everything from travelling abroad to snowmobiling, he felt.

That trend always has been recognized in Hastings County and once again snowmobilers this year may travel hundreds of miles along well defined trails.

Responsible for such enterprise are the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association and the Central Hastings Winter Sports Association.

Association members have drafted trails over 350 miles of Crown land in the highlands of Hastings for venturesome snowmobilers.

The trail pattern once again is being published in maps by the tourist group.

Among its handy references is the listing of all local snowmobile dealers.

Any sportsman running into difficulties on the trail can easily locate the nearest dealer for his particular vehicle and call for help, says tourist association manager George Ellsworth.

Both groups now are seeking to obtain a grading machine to keep the trails maintained during winter months, says Mr. Ellsworth.

Meantime, back in the commercial centres the area is availed by salesmen for the extra impetus it may give to round off another good year.

"A lot of people will start thinking about it when the snow comes," says a Belleville dealer.

And even when the snow goes the boom may not be over.

Belleville sports store operator Bob Blaind says manufacturers are predicting that this coming winter and the winter of 1971-72 "will be the big years" for snowmobiles.

PE Resident Finds New Mills Not Objectionable

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward tourist resort operator Morland Pearsell has offered chamber of commerce members a first-hand report of conditions in a community located near a pulp mill.

Miss Pearsell travelled into the United States visiting pulp mills at Glen Falls and Thorndoroga in an effort to "tell it like it is" to county residents.

She returned with favorable observations of almost odorless mills, occasioning no pollution threats and employing hundreds of workers. Miss Pearsell suggested that her trip could have been more informative if other concerned persons had joined in similar excursions.

She earned a round of loud applause from chamber directors when she commented, "We in Prince Edward County make a great big blow about something about to locate and in about six weeks everyone falls asleep again."

She told the chamber that the Glen Falls mill was "a lovely plant" and no odor could be detected except when inside. Even close to operations she remarked that the smell was "like burning leaves" and not objectionable.

She questioned a plant official about foam at the water's edge and was told that it was visible for only three miles. When she queried its effect on fishing the official remarked that salmon and trout are found annually in the waters there.

At the Thorndoroga plant owned by CIP, Miss Pearsell said that an odor was detectable for approximately two miles but was not offensive. This plant will close within the next two months to be replaced by another mill four miles to its north. The new plant is partially in operation and Miss Pearsell asserted it was odorless.

Chamber member George Shipman observed that Miss Pearsell had not spoken with any residents of the communities, only pulp mill employees.

Ronald Scott, chamber president, observed, "The first thing we want to do is make them (CIP) feel welcome and I hope it isn't too late."

Price Promoted

Bruce T. Price, manager of the Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. plant in Picton, has been appointed vice-president of operations for the company.

The announcement was made by the company president, R. D. MacLean.

Trent Conservation Authority To Develop King's Mills Site

STIRLING (Staff) — A major conservation and recreation area will take shape on a mill stream five miles northwest of here, officials of the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority said last night.

The green light has been given to the project by Hon. George A. Kerr, Minister of Energy and Resources Management who this week approved the King's Mills property acquisition for development by the LTRCA.

Authority chairman C. G. MacDonald said in an interview yesterday that the scheme has been under consideration for the last 15 months and that the LTRCA already has the 63-acre King's Mills area optioned.

"It is a desirable site that lends itself to development," Mr. MacDonald said. The King property contains a two-storey stone mill and a dwelling nestled against a silaplidated dam on Squire Creek three miles west of Highway 14 on the fifth concession of Rawdon Township.

The conservation area will be set up below the dam, according to Bill Lawson, LTRCA secretary-treasurer.

"A submerged weir across the stream will provide a shallow pond for wading and when the dam is repaired, the pond created above will be excellent for canoeing, swimming and fishing," he added.

"Our first act will be to keep the dam from deteriorating," Mr. MacDonald said.

"The gates (of the dam) are gone and the stream is just flowing through."

The authority has already budgeted money for maintenance of King's Mills and this will be used primarily to repair the dam, he added. Area of the mill pond will be more than five acres.

Breaks in the dam have caused silt to back up and a thick growth of bushes has grown in it. This will all be cleaned away.

"As it is, it is a bare place, but a tree planting program will begin on the site next spring," the chairman explained.

In due course however, even the mill will be restored to its original role and will be used to demonstrate early milling methods."

Mr. MacDonald called development of King's Mills "a long and expensive project" and could not state how much time would be taken to fulfill the job.

He explained that the conservation authority is "concentrating on acquisition" of land because the best of it is being vigorously snapped up by private interests.

The authority is negotiating to purchase more land currently and arrangements for this may be completed before the end of the year, he said.

King's Mills is the second and largest conservation area to be purchased by the LTRCA. The other property managed by the authority in a strip of Trent River Frontage between Glen Miller and the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway.

Cost of developing the Mills will be borne by the 17 participating municipalities of the Lower Trent Conservation Authority and by the Province of Ontario, sharing the expense on a 50-50 basis.

Water Works Approval One Council Vote Away

Belleville city council this week gave first and second reading to a by-law authorizing expenditure of $1,150,000 for plant modifications and other work to improve city water service.

The work, hoped to be completed by early 1972, will boost the water filtration plant capacity by three million gallons to 12 million gallons per day.

Some of the work will be a storage reservoir to provide additional water requirements needed over the next five years until a new water supply line can be constructed from Lake Ontario.

Modifications to the existing plant, including improvements to existing microstrainers, will cost an estimated $200,000, and are hoped to be completed by March of next year.

But the biggest item of expenditure will be feeder main construction in the city's northeast area to cost an estimated $596,000 and a new 1.5-million gallon underground reservoir and booster station at an estimated $444,000.

Originally the public utilities had planned for a $1.7-million expenditure to boost plant capacity using water from the Bay of Quinte.

Then, in view of the need for water in the immediate city area, the Ontario Water Resources Commission urged the setting up of a water area with supplies to be brought from Lake Ontario.

Accordingly, Belleville was directed to modify its filtration plant extension and plans were revised by Consultants Gore and Storrie to provide the additional water requirements until Lake Ontario water could be piped in.

Currently, the water filtration plant has a capacity of 9 million gallons per day. Maximum pumpage during the past summer was 8,336,000 gallons.

The city has a reserve of one million gallons of treated water in underground storage at the plant and 750,000 gallons elevated storage.

In addition to water used in the city, an average of slightly more than 43,000 gallons daily is sold to customers in Sidney township — Loyalist College, Towers store and Hastings Manor.

Tharlow township has asked for an estimated 12,000 gallons per day to supply the Gulf Service Centre north of Highway 401, Black Diamond Cheese, and the Holiday Inn motel proposed for construction in the same general area.

Ontario Hydro PUC) manager, said the utility's first concern was to provide water for city consumers. He noted, however, that the 12,000 gallons requested by Tharlow is a small amount to satisfy Tharlow's immediate requirements and suggested it would be good business to sell the water.

Mr. Burnham noted that some of the 12,000 daily requirement requested by Tharlow was already being supplied by tank trucks.

Consultants Gore and Storrie have prepared plans for construction of the needed watermain to service the three commercial firms north of Highway 401.

But the necessary approvals from all government departments have still not been secured and there is little likelihood of the construction start before the spring.

There is also the matter of the cost of extending the feeder line to Thurlow from the Hillcrest area.

Estimated cost of the line to run across Highway 401 by way of the CPR underpass in Thurlow is estimated at $181,000 with debenture costs of about $21,600 annually.

Thurlow council has still not decided just how the $21,600 annual debenture cost is to be met.

Landscaping Job Is All in Family

TORONTO (Staff)—A Belleville firm which came under fire at Queen's Park Monday, quenched the flames of controversy surrounding it this morning.

Attention was brought to the firm, Quinte Nurseries, yesterday by Bernard Newman, Liberal member for Windsor, who was displeased that the Belleville Landscaping firm should be using public tax dollars for landscaping in a public housing project in Hughes City, near Windsor.

"It hardly seems like the most economical way to do he job," commented Mr. Newman.

"Surely we have local Windsor firms who could do the job more cheaply for the Ontario government."

Trade minister Stanley Randall, the man in charge of Ontario Housing, explained that in most cases he would agree but that this was a case of sub-contracting to the Quinte firm.

The minister promised an investigation into the matter.

Speaking this morning to Mrs. W. L. Johnson, wife of the owner of Quinte Nurseries, The Intelligencer was informed that Mr. Johnson "does a lot of landscaping for the Windsor firm."

The owner of the Windsor landscapers, E. R. Johnson Associates is Bill Johnson's brother.

It's all in the family.

Philatelists Give Historical Objects For Hall of Aviation History Fund

The Hall of Canadian Aviation History at Trenton will receive a financial hand from philatelists when a stock of special envelopes, known to collectors as covers, will be made available in a small auction.

The covers commemorate a variety of 50th anniversary air mail flights in Canada and have been made available by private and corporate sources with the express purpose of raising funds for the memorial.

One set, contributed by the Royal Trust Company of Canada, the sponsor of many of the special flights which recreated famous Canadian aviation first flights, describes the route, crew and dates of each flight. Some are autographed by the crew members on the various flights.

Another set has been donated by well known aviation historian and philatelist, Major Dick Malott of Ottawa. Major Malott's sets commemorate air events of 1919 and 1920. These recreation flights were made by the Royal Canadian Flying Club.

The auction will be operated by mail, equal bids will be decided in favor of the earliest dated envelope and winners will be advised immediately after the bidding deadline of Feb. 1, 1971.

Information regarding the covers and their estimated value can be obtained by writing to Memorial Fund Project Office, Room 1907 "C" Building, Canadian Forces Headquarters, Ottawa 4.

Proceeds will go toward the $3.4-million fund drive currently under way.

Hazelanne and Robert Reid

Local headliners for the "All-Canadian Star Variety Show" at the BCI auditorium on Nov. 14 will be soloists Hazelanne and Robert Reid of Belleville. Well-known performers throughout the Quinte district, the couple has performed for CBC radio and television, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Carnegie Hall, Stratford Shakespearean Festival and has toured various parts of Canada. Both studied under scholarship at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto. The variety show, sponsored by the Quinte Exhibition Parade Committee, will help finance this year's Quinte Santa Claus Parade.

Sewer Tenders Expected Soon

Calling of tenders for the construction of the proposed Moira River sanitary sewer to serve the city's northwest industrial park areas and parts of Thurlow township is expected in the near future.

Approval of the Ontario Municipal Board has been granted for the Belleville-Thurlow provincial sewage works program and the Ontario Water Resources Commission has informed council that tenders will be called subsequent to execution of the agreement between the two municipalities.

The sewer will be constructed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission with costs to be charged back to the municipalities on a use basis.

However, no rates will be charged to Thurlow township without further approval of the board.

In other words, Thurlow is not to be charged sewer rates until the municipality receives service.

The city originally intended to construct the sanitary sewer up the east side of the river as a municipal project. Hopes were that the sewer could be completed by the end of 1970.

Then, the Ontario Water Resources Commission urged construction of a larger sewer under an area sewer arrangement to provide for future service in Thurlow.

Several meetings were held for discussion of the sewer project and with the OWRC agreeing to pay a percentage of the cost for oversizing, both municipalities agreed to the proposal.

Red Cross Reports Activities

At the October meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross Society, Cecil Hunt reported that the blood clinic held earlier this month, had obtained 341 pints. Two special groups, Loyalist College and Centennial Secondary School, contributed a total of 204 pints between them.

The Society reported that from their 7,000 clinics across Canada, blood is donated by 400,000 patients.

Clinics are planned for other schools later in the year.

Mrs. F. M. Sprague stated that work on emergency clothing was progressing well. The Homemakers served in 113 homes during Sept., with 1,779 days of work, 100 children received the care the mothers were unable to provide.

Mrs. R. Morden's committee was active during the month, one activity being an outing provided for 20 senior citizens.

Disbursements for the month were reported to be $2,220.

Although international Red Cross associations have been involved with disasters in the Middle East and Peru, Mrs. H. McCabe reported that the disaster committee in Belleville had nothing along that line to be involved in.

Moira Students To Use 'Y Pool

Moira Secondary School students will use the pool at Belleville's Family Y this year at a cost of $1,250 to the Hastings county board of education.

One of the major reasons for use of the pool, said trustee Macdonald Smith, is lack of space for physical education classes in Moira's gymnasium.

Grade 9 students use the pool for 1½ hours a day two days a week during the school year. About 280 students are involved.

Senior Moira students are also involved in swimming classes for the pupils of the Retarded Children's School. Sixteen students assist with the swimming program every Monday and Friday morning from 9 to 10.30 a.m.

Jack Colden Kingston-bound

PICTON (Staff) — Jack Colden, prominent Picton business man in charge of the Canadian Tire store, is expected to leave this community soon to become manager of a large Canadian Tire centre in Kingston.

Mr. Colden, a former Belleville resident, arrived in Picton in 1958, taking over a small Canadian Tire store on Main Street. Eight years later he financed a new King Street store much larger than the first shop. Two additions have been made to the modern Canadian Tire centre in the past three years.

Mr. Colden became actively involved in community projects during his residence in Picton and is remembered as one of the founders of the Prince Edward Curling Club.

A past president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Colden assisted in reviving Picton's Santa Claus parade and in organizing Loyalist Days events. The popular businessman is also a past president of the Picton Rotary Club.

Mr. Colden, a franchised dealer for the Picton Canadian Tire Store, is its actual owner and plans to sell it to the corporation. A new manager will be announced at a later date.

459 Truants Investigated Last Year

Hastings County Family and Children's Services investigated 459 cases of hookey-playing pupils last year.

The officially appointed attendance officer for the county board (at a cost of $10,000 a year) provides the service formerly given by a truant officer.

Last year 257 "illegal absences" from elementary schools were investigated; 197 pupils were returned to school, three were suspended and reinstated and three were taken to court to be charged under the school act. Another 54 were disposed off in "other" ways.

Of the 208 secondary school students referred to the attendance officer, 135 were returned to school, 51 were disposed of in other ways, 19 were suspended and reinstated and six were taken to court.

Associate superintendent T. E. Morris told the board that a case is usually referred to the attendance counsellor on the third day of a pupil's absence without explanation.

Pupils are usually suspended from school only until "some new agreement can be reached with parents and child", education director Eric Runacres told the trustees.

"Only the board can expel," he added. There have been no expulsions since the county board was set up in 1969.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Many are concerned about approaching birthdays. By many the age of 40 is accepted as the dividing line between youthfulness and old age. For some, the magic number 40 is a depressing figure, while others find in it a relief that they have been able to live so long.

But I have learned that what bothers many persons is how their arteries will stand up against the calendar. Not only are they concerned about their coronaries, but about their brain arteries. Not necessarily about a stroke, but about whether the brain will lose its normal function. One of the fears is forgetfulness.

"I understand," they say, "that your brain arteries get so hard that you can't even remember what you had for breakfast." They should not worry because age does not inevitably cause brain decrepitude. Brain arteries do not lose function just because a person has become 40, 50, 60, 70, 80 — or 90. The following latter is an example:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am one of your 96 - year - old customers who writes every day, but I have developed a very peculiar sore that falls to heal. It is just outside of my ear. It is close to the top and is not sensitive unless agitated. Salves don't help. Can you? — Mr. R.

Comment: We aim to please. Let, me see, what do the big department stores have as a motto; the customer is always right. Although I'm extremely flattered to know that you're still a "customer" at the age of 96 — with arteries healthy enough in allow you to write every day — I must pass this judgment: you are wrong in treating an obstinate sore with salves.

Have a skin specialist check on it. Make certain it isn't cancerous. If it is, the chances are very much in your favor that it will be curable.

Meanwhile, best wishes for your good health. I'm looking forward to having a letter from you on your birthday four years from now. Although I was happy to receive your note today, it will be a greater thrill to hear from my first 100 - year - old "customer."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What is shingles? How long does it last? — Mrs. S.

Comment: Another name for it is herpes zoster. It is a viral infection of nerves, causing changes in the skin areas they supply: crusts, blisters, and intense burning and pain (usually one-sided). How long an attack lasts usually depends upon the patient's age. In youngsters its effect usually wears off within a few weeks. In patients over 60, it can be quite stubborn — lasting for many months.

It is treated scores of ways because we know of no specific treatment that will help. What's mainly important is to try to keep the patient as comfortable as possible. When the discomfort lasts a long time after the skin sores have healed and disappeared we call it the post - herpetic syndrome.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a severe case of acne extending to my shoulders and back. I've been told to give up all dairy products. This friend suggests that I compensate for the absence of egg and milk products by taking tablets fortified with vitamins A and D. I love milk and eggs. It is quite a sacrifice to give them up! What do you suggest? — Mr. S.

Comment: I know of no scientific proof that dairy products cause or aggravate acne. Therefore, I think it's your choice to include or exclude them from your diet.

Forgetfulness Not Automatic

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 23

Your birthday today: Dedication to spiritual growth is your highest course in your coming year. In material and social matters your progress is relatively good with normal effort. Emotional experience now deepens and blends with a growing sense of universal truths. The men among today's natives are quite definite in their opinions, and be aggressive, stair, birdy. The women usually prefer to stay out of public view, work from behind the scenes, but are just as resolute.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Although this is not a favorable time for starting new material ventures, much can be done in planning, looking over future trends. The evening is for home life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Bring assistants, collaborators close to you; press tactfully to get something done, but expect no great ambition drive in anybody. The any extra rest fully.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You have better opportunity to push uncompleted matters and also the temptation to scatter energy. Avoid beginning major new projects. Dispose of whatever has outlived its usefulness.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): It is much easier now to let go of an old habit, give up anything not rightfully yours. Tensions abate so that you must exert yourself just to stay on the job.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Straighten out old questions — bring delayed negotiations to settlement. Family affairs generate news, much discussion. Take extra pauses for reflection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Proceed vigorously with mental activity. Take regular intervals of rest. Many small chores done well now need no further attention. New projects should wait.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): If you make no spectacular move today, chances are you'll have no accounting to make later. Shape your plans with a degree of balance between your different selves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Now you can press forward with a project which might in other moments attract emotional resistance. Be considerate and calm but get busy early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You might use organized community institutions or learn something new about them. New problems seem unlikely; try, however, to resolve old issues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Give your enterprises a chance to demonstrate how well you've organized them. Gather friends for an evening of fun and lively talk. You'll learn something.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Withdraw a trifle now to get a broader perspective on your recent efforts, find a few weak spots or failures. Begin planning corrections for later use.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Uncompleted matters may seem beyond ready solution this morning but continued attention makes rather good progress by evening. Take time for contemplation.

Tight Security Irks Quebecers

Public Outcry Grows Louder

MONTREAL (CP) — Public complaints against stringent security measures in Quebec grew louder Wednesday while police sought leads to terrorists who kidnapped British diplomat James Jasper Cross 24 days ago.

Protests against the operation of regulations under the War Measures Act were voiced by lawyers, labor leaders, academics students and politicians in meetings and statements.

A procession of speakers protested against the regulations at a teach-in Wednesday night at the University of Montreal where a CBC reporter charged interference with the news.

The Quebec Bar Association condemned the refusal of authorities to permit persons detained under war-measures regulations—proclaimed Oct. 16—to consult lawyers immediately.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said the QFL's general council decided at a four-hour meeting to continue its campaign against the War Measures Act, despite criticism of the leadership's stand by some local branches.

A committee of 14 academics of the Quebec Civil Liberties Union insisted relatives of persons detained under the war-measures regulations to get in touch through the committee.

An official tally Wednesday gave the total of persons picked up by police since Oct. 16 as 397, with 138 still held. None had been charged with any crime by Wednesday.

Meantime, police were seeking clues to the whereabouts of Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists after studying an FLQ message.

It was the first such message known since Oct. 18, the day police found the corpse of Pierre Laporte, the Quebec labor minister who had been kidnapped eight days earlier. He had been strangled.

Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette forbade police to disclose contents of the three-page message, picked up Tuesday night in downtown Montreal and signed by three different FLQ cells

Mr. Choquette said police had given him "no positive or negative indications" about the survival of Mr. Cross, the trade commissioner snatched at gunpoint Oct. 5.

About 800 students at the University of Montreal heard CBC reporter Michel Bourdon, sociologist Guy Rocher and lawyers Serge Menard and Bernard Mergler criticize the war measures.

Mr. Bourdon said control of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language branch, had been so strict that "we are always half an hour later than all the other stations."

He said Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau, re-elected last Sunday, had been persuaded to preview a news film dealing with municipal politics before it was screened

Mr. Bourdon also said a piece was deleted from an interview with Paul Cliche, leader of the civic opposition Front d'Action Politique in which Mr. Cliche had denied public suggestions that FRAP was linked with the FLQ.

Mr. Rocher, who presided at the meeting organized by a body called the Quebec Committee for the Defence of Liberties, said the Ottawa, Quebec and Montreal governments all are right wing "because they place law and order above social problems."

At a press conference earlier, Marcel Cinq-Mars of the provincial bar association said some lawyers are complaining that they are being delayed unnecessarily by the police in seeing their detained clients.

He said the delays are taking place even though authorities said lawyers would be permitted to see clients. Mr. Cinq-Mars said court orders would be sought if further delays were encountered.

Labor leader Laberge, also at a press conference, said the QFL general council approved

Plot to Kill President Checked

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois state police issued an all-points bulletin early today for two men who officers said were wanted for questioning about an alleged assassination plot against President Nixon.

The president arrived at O'Hare International Airport Wednesday night and was staying in a motel not far from the airport in Northwest Chicago, before resuming his campaign for Republican candidates in next week's election.

State police said they received information on the two men from police in Arlington Heights, a northwestern suburb.

The FBI in Chicago said it had been informed and was investigating.

Arlington Heights police said an informant reported the two men were travelling in a late-model car and one was believed carrying an automatic rifle.

Union Joins Protest

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions threw its support Wednesday behind the parent organization's decision to oppose the War Measures Act invoked by the federal government to combat Quebec terrorists.

After hearing Marcel Pepin, president of the 225,000-member CNTU, denounce proclamation of the emergency measures as the action of a "repressionist" government, an estimated 125 Montreal central council members voted unanimously to support a program drawn up last week by the CNTU and the two other labor groups.

The CNTU, the 250,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor and the 70,000-member Quebec Teachers Corp. voted to demand withdrawal of the act but the Montreal central council became the first member union to back the joint stand.

Some affiliates of the labor organizations have expressed opposition to the demand made at a meeting in Quebec City Oct. 21.

Hull City Hall Badly Damaged

HULL, Que. (CP) — Hull city hall was badly damaged by fire early Thursday, causing no injuries but creating a possible postponement of city elections scheduled for next Sunday.

Firemen said the blaze started in the second floor of the three-storey stone building and quickly raged through the top floor.

Police said election papers, stored in second-floor offices, may have been destroyed.

Cause of the fire, which began shortly before 4 a.m., has not been determined.

The building was erected in 1901.

There were no occupants in the building at the outbreak of the two-alarm fire, police said.

The pre-dawn blaze, visible across the Ottawa River in Ottawa capital, drew all available firefighting equipment in the city.

Firemen and volunteers carted typewriters, files, books and large framed photographs from the building to a moving van as the structure was engulfed in flames.

Hoses were turned on the building from all sides of the square in which the city hall is located. Police barricaded several blocks around the fire against spectators.

The roof collapsed about an hour after the fire started.

One woman on the scene said she passed the building about 3 a.m. and smelled smoke.

But she dismissed it, thinking it to be the normal odor of the nearby E. B. Eddy Co. plant.

Body to Review Hydro Rates Is Considered

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is considering an agency which would bring Ontario Hydro rate increases before a public review, Premier John Roberts said Wednesday.

He also said Hydro would agree to such a review.

He was replying to Liberal Leader Robert Nixon who asked whether the province would consider asking the energy board to review a hydro rate increase of nine per cent for rural customers, effective Jan. 1.

Proposed New Court Is Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative critics of a government measure to create a federal court of Canada expressed fears in the Commons Wednesday that the court would be too expensive for "the little man" and would be a "faceless monster in the capital city."

Elden Woolliams (Calgary North) said he is not convinced Justice would be any more accessible to the ordinary person in the forum which would replace the Exchequer Court.

Debate on the report stage of the bill continues today.

The federal court would be "all-powerful for the state and too costly for the people," the Calgary lawyer and Conservative legal critic said.

The new court would have both a trial and appeal division. Citizens could appeal against "capricious or perverse" decisions by judicial or quasi-judicial federal tribunals such as the Canadian transport commission, the labor relations board and the national energy board. The bill to set up the court was approved by the Commons legal affairs committee last spring.

Most appeals against such government agencies now are directed to the federal cabinet.

The legislation also would require federal court judges to live in the Ottawa area though they will hear cases in different parts of the country.

Mr. Woolliams proposed that judges reside in major cities across Canada, but Justice Minister John Turner said the court should reside in one place so the law developed by the court would not be divided.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Greenwood) said the government requirement was too limiting.

In Vancouver, why should he live in Ottawa? They should stay close to the people.

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said that he does not want to see the court become a "faceless monster in the capital city."

The government should not necessarily bow to the opinion of judges, lawyers and university professors on this issue.

Perry Ryan (PC—Toronto Spadina) said the government is taking a narrow view of justice.

Earlier, opposition MPs pressed Prime Minister Trudeau during the daily question period for more information on the reasons for invoking the War Measures Act.

The prime minister replied that the House had been given all the information that led to the government decision.

In the Senate, Senator Paul Desruisseaux (L—Quebec) said he is confused and shocked by reports that French government-controlled news claims the Front de Liberation du Quebec is a "responsible political party, forced to the extreme of terror to support a just political cause."

These French newspaper, radio and television accounts were "absurd and damaging to unity within Canada."

If reports of such news stories in France are true, French authorities should apologize for this "unacceptable behaviour" by their government-controlled news media, Senator Desruisseaux said.

Eric Runacres Addresses Loyalist Teachers in New Lecture Theatre

No Learning If No Change

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Educators must be the managers of change, Loyalist College teachers were told yesterday by Hastings county's director of education, Eric Runacres.

"I tell my principals we had better do it ourselves, or the public will do it for us," he said in an address to the college's teachers' association.

"In managing change we must involve the people. I wonder if colleges are involving the public? Now, the public says 'we don't know what's going on up there'."

But leaders must consider change on the basis of the readiness level of the public and its ability to pay, the director warned.

If the cost of education continues to rise at its present rate, it will, by the year 2000, consume 100 per cent. of the gross national product, Mr. Runacres said.

"I'm worried that you will get more than your fair share," he told the Loyalist staff. "It costs $3,000 a pupil a year for post - secondary school education. I get $600 a pupil a year for the county system."

Mr. Runacres, originally invited to the teachers meeting to speak on the theme of motivation, ranged over the entire spectrum of education-al theory.

Educators in the past had implemented practices without any real knowledge of the theories of learning, he charged.

"To learn is to change," he said. "If there is no change there is no learning. Learning is an individual matter — the student must ultimately educate himself. The role of the teacher is to motivate the student to independent study."

Learning is largely an emotional experience, he added.

"We have divided the boat in not appealing to emotions. We must appeal to all the senses. If you see a classroom of pupils all sitting in rows, using only one sense, you see psychic dropouts."

A teacher's handling of information is as important as its content, Mr. Runacres said.

"Teach concepts, not content," he urged his listeners.

The director revealed one weakness in public education in Hastings county.

"Students are sadly lacking in this county," he said. "We don't do enough to transmit what I consider the very best of education — art, physical education, music, theatre and the rest."

Had the board charged for custodial services, the cost to the college would have amounted to $400 a year.

Trustee F. John Tolle of Bancroft urged the board to give free accommodation to the college "to get this going and encourage night school in the north".

"High school hasn't been able to operate for the past two years at North Hastings," he said. "Something is wrong because Loyalist has come in and made strides."

But Carl D. Brent of Tyendinaga had initial misgivings.

"This college seems to be able to get its hands on lots of money whenever it wants it," he said, in questioning the wisdom of another institution having free use of board buildings.

Director of education Eric Runacres said the free accommodation is offered only to institutions offering non-profit courses.

"It is financially to our advantage to let Loyalist run night school courses, instead of doing it ourselves," he said.

Luke Ontario Cement Limited Appointment

Bruce T. Price

Following a meeting of the Board of Directors, Mr. R. D. MacLeod, President of Lake Ontario Cement Limited, has announced the appointment of Mr. Bruce T. Price as Vice-President Operations. Mr. Price, who joined the Company in 1967 as Manager of its cement plant at Picton, Ontario, has had an extensive background of experience in the cement industry in Western Canada. Mr. Price will be located at the Company's offices in Picton.

Loyalist to Operate Bancroft Night School

Loyalist College will operate night school at North Hastings High School in Bancroft this winter at no cost to the college for accommodation and caretaking services.

The college now has four night school classes under way at the secondary school, and asked the Hastings county board of education for free accommodation.

Trustees decided that since Queen's University now uses Belleville schools free of charge for extension courses, a precedent has been established.

Bay Bridge Traffic Count Averages 300 Cars an Hour

Daily traffic counts, ranging to more than 7,500 vehicles on weekends on the Bay Bridge Road, will be offered by the city in its attempt to convince the Ontario department of highways of the need for a new high level bridge over the Bay of Quinte.

The traffic figures, taken at the city limits on the Bay Bridge Road early this month showed a peak volume on Friday with the count for Oct. 2 totalling 7,578 vehicles for the 24 hour period.

The figures for Saturday Oct. 3 were 7,322 and for Sunday October 3 4,980.

The traffic counts, submitted by City Engineer Wilbur Purcell, will be forwarded to the department of highways and also to neighboring municipalities which have been invited to attend a special request for a new bridge leading to Prince Edward county.

"The figures will be ammunition for our request," commented Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Both Thurlow and Ameliasburg townships have indicated they would support the request for a new bridge.

A letter from Norris Whitney, member in the Ontario Legislature, read at city council this week, indicated that for some years he had been in complete support of any action that could be taken to secure a new bay bridge.

Attempts are being made at the local level to arrange a meeting to be attended by area municipal officials at which time it is hoped the need for a new bridge can be impressed on the highways department.

Speed Limits May Rise On Dundas Street

Speed limits on the Dundas Street East dual highway route leading out of the city and on Dundas Street West from Holden Street to the city limits will be increased if city council goes along with a traffic and light committee recommendation.

The proposed new limit for the East Dundas Street area is 40 miles per hour and for West Dundas, 35 miles per hour.

The traffic committee moved for the higher limits yesterday on recommendations from Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie, and the Transportation Division of the Ontario Department of Transport which did a speed study on the two arteries.

The study showed that a large percentage of motorists were driving at speeds higher than the present 30 miles per hour limit.

Christmas Exchange Now Called Sharing Program

Remember those bulging Christmas baskets distributed around Christmas time by the Christmas Exchange Program?

Well they're almost a thing of the past now . . . as is the Christmas Exchange.

The exchange has a new name as of yesterday.

As chairman Mrs. Jane Hazlett puts it: "With new ideas behind the Christmas Sharing Program which replaces the Christmas - Exchange, the families requiring assistance will be able to make their own Christmas."

This will be made possible by an emphasis on cash and voucher donations.

Mrs. Hazlett explained that in the past, material and food distribution has proven to be unequally balanced in some cases.

She gave the reason for this being the number of groups and individuals separately distributing Christmas baskets.

Captain E. D. Gurney of the Salvation Army, one of the members of the Christmas Sharing Program, emphasized that through his past experience the "most successful way is to keep it (the distribution) under one roof, one central distribution . . . all united together."

It was following this suggestion that he explained suggested the use of vouchers or cheques instead of baskets and then announced that the Salvation Army would join with the CSP to pool money they raised with their Christmas kettle fund.

Previously there have been several church and welfare agencies distributing toys, clothing, food and money to families in need of assistance at Christmas time.

Mrs. Haslett announced that as of yesterday, most Christmas exchange groups were pooling together under one committe for joint distribution.

This doesn't mean that the volunteer agency is attempting to deter individuals or groups from distributing their own Christmas boxes. Instead, it is an attempt to give more even distribution.

For this end "no names of families requiring assistance will be given out," it was announced.

Mrs. Haslett was quick to explain that donations can be made generally or the committee would make every effort to comply with specific requests where possible.

If a donation is requested to go towards a family gift, a gift for an older couple, or a single person, this can be indicated at the time of the donation.

Inspector Paul Stephenson of the Belleville Fire Department, reported the firemen had collected the majority of money needed for the toy department of the sharing program.

He also announced that several businesses had donated quantities of toys to be included in the growing stockpile of toy donations.

The program is an agency of the Volunteer Bureau and is now able to follow the general theme of the United Community Services, of which the bureau is a member, with a pooling of money, material, and volunteers.

Other community organizations such as the Quinte Twirlers and the Minor Hockey Association, will be holding exhibitions of their skills, turning over toys and funds received for the Christmas Sharing Program.

"Charity" is a word specially emphasized by the committee.

Fourteen Events So Far

With 56 days until Christmas and colder days ahead, thoughts turn to winter activities.

With the coming of snow and the disappearance of green grass under winter's blanket, the Belleville Winter Carnival committee is allowing no moss to grow underits feet as they make plans for the 1971 carnival, scheduled to be held from Feb. 4-7

At last night's meeting of the carnival committee, a number of events were announced as confirmed.

They are:

- The Carnival Queen Contest, sponsored by the Kinsmen Club.
- Torchlight Parade sponsored by the Belleville Jaycees with Col. Angus Duffy acting as parade marshal.
- Senior A hockey exhibition game.
- Snow sculpture judging.
- Pancake breakfast sponsored by Club Alouette.
- Tug-of-war contests.
- Square dancing on skates with the Quinte Twirlers
- Victoria and Grey all-night curling bonspiel.
- Sky-diving by the Belleville Flying Club.
- Sleigh rides.
- Skating for all ages.
- Teen dance sponsored by local booking agency, Serenity.
- Klondike dance sponsored for the adults by the Belleville Veterans Council.
- Skating races.

Jack Tremblay, chairman of the committee, explained that many events were not yet confirmed. One such event, winter sled dog races, might well be one of the highlights of the carnival.

Definitely included in the events will be Quinte Snowmobile Club but their program has not yet been announced.

IN MEMORIAM

MASON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who left us suddenly five years ago, October 29, 1965.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
The pain no one but loved as well,
And while she weeps a peaceful home,
Her memory we shall always keep,
Her loving thoughts will never part
From those who love her dear heart.
Sleepless Nights and Lonely Days.
Today.

MASON — Treasured memories of a wonderful daughter, Valerie Lee Mason, who passed away suddenly October 29, 1968, age 18 years.
Two years have flown since you have passed,
Since your eyes were called away,
But the memory of that sad time,
Will never fade away.
Your place is vacant at our harvest,
Of some sad sacrifice it is,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day you left us for heaven,
You took a piece of happiness,
Loved, remembered and sadly missed by Mom.

Cobourg Firm Recommended to Prepare North-South Arterial Route Study

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The city traffic and light committee has recommended that the engineering firm of Totten, Sims and Hubicki of Cobourg be retained to do a study on north-south arterial routes leading into the city.

The firm would be asked to do a traffic survey and study, provide a conceptual design for proposed routes and also a functional design.

The committee recommended that the Cobourg firm or engineering consultants be given authorization to proceed immediately with the first stage (traffic survey and the study) at an estimated cost of $5,000.

The second and third stages (preparation of conceptual and functional design) would be commenced at the direction of the city.

Totten, Sims and Hubicki was chosen over two other engineering firms which had been invited to submit proposals to the city.

Under its terms of reference the engineering firm will be expected to study solutions to the city's north-south arterial traffic problem, including the investigation of alternate routes and to select the most feasible and economical solution for movement of present and future traffic.

The firm will also be expected to determine priorities and outline the staging of any construction.

In contrast to the other two firms, Totten, Sims and Hubicki in their proposal did not suggest any specific routes for alleviation of north-south traffic problems.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said that all three firms had been advised of the city's plan for north-south arterials to built the east and west ends of the city.

The importance of getting on with a solution to the city's north - south traffic problem was stressed by Mayor J. Russell Scott who said that some start should be made next year.

This was agreed by members Ald. E. A. Orr and Jack Ireland.

The mayor said the feeling was that Hamilton Road should be replaced or rebuilt as close to the present alignment as possible.

Also he said that the Upper Bridge - leading onto North Front Street was "totally inadequate" to handle rush hour traffic.

Various proposals have been offered to alleviate the traffic congestion between Highway 401 and the city's downtown district.

Most frequently mentioned is the reconstruction or replacement of Carnifton Road with an overpass or underpass at the CN double tracks.

Also suggested has been another bridge over the Marks to take the load off the present upper bridge.

Old Order Changes

Harder to Have 'Fun' on Hallowe'en

By BARRY GIBLIN
Staff Reporter

Hallowe'en is tradition, tradition almost as old as any major traditions still celebrated by modern man.

Beginning in the 19th century, Hallowe'en was initiated by Celtic tribes in England and since has spread to any country with Celtic or English origins.

And the tradition of Oct. 31 — some countries celebrate in early November — is unique. Initiated in praise of unnatural saints, it now bespeaks superstition, social activity, macabre events, mysterious, horrific cults, the creatures, of the underworld — vampires, werewolves and ghosts — the level of the October wind and the rustle of dead leaves.

Early Hallowe'en traditions included the lighting of huge bonfires to chase away evil spirits that drew life from the darkness.

The English romantic poet, John Keats, spoke in irony, in the tone of Hallowe'en, in his poem, Ode to a Nightingale, written in spiritual dejection. He was born on Oct. 31, 1795.

He said: "Here where men sit and hear each other groan, where palsey shakes a few, sad, last gray hairs, where youth grows pale and spectre thin and dies."

In more modern times, trick or treaters became the tradition of Hallowe'en in Canada, young people travelling from door to door in search of candy and other treats to serve as remittance for pranks and gags undone.

And the pranks were there as well — overturned outhouses, pepper on the stove and the placement of large articles on the roofs of buildings.

Tradition held that costumed trick or treaters were difficult to identify by friends who doled out candy.

But this year Hallowe'en tradition in Belleville will consist of soaping windows, caution tricks or treating, the Hallowe'en Howl and UNICEF collections.

There will be no more bonfires save for those that are vandalism.

Children are losing their tradition—especially with officials and organizations promoting the non - usage of masks.

Pranks have been subjugated, due to vandalism and increased police activity, to soaping windows, and even that's risky business.

The tradition of Hallowe'en is disappearing for the safety of youngsters and elders who are asked to duck speeding motorists by wearing reflectorized costumes and who wish to protect their property.

As modern man progresses, increasing regulations for the safety of young people and increasing regulations to protect them from drivers, Hallowe'en loses something.

It is simple to project safety suggestions of 10 or 20 years in the future pertaining to the present trend.

Organizations will probably suggest that trick or treaters phone in their orders to avoid Hallowe'en traffic. This precaution will also stop the danger of masks and costumes.

Licences could probably be issued to people giving treats, protecting children, via municipal inspections of treats, even booby-trapped loot.

Apple - bobbing will be forbidden because of the danger of drowning and jack-o-lanterns will be outlawed because of the inherent dangers of fire.

But if the tradition of Hallowe'en vanishes, the organizations that have helped to spell its death will not admit it. Their news releases will still end with a promising "have fun."

Pumpkin People

It's Hallowe'en bedlam when a crowd of Grade 1 and 2 students from St. Michael's Junior School go down to the market square to shop for pumpkins. The students were selecting a pumpkin suitable for a jack-o-lantern for their classroom.

Jaycees Give Suggestions For Safe Hallowe'en Fun

Hallowe'en is coming to Belleville Saturday night and safety suggestions have already been circulated, testifying to a new trend in Hallowe'en "fun."

The Belleville Jaycees and the Dominion Automobile Association have published suggestions to be kept in mind by trick or treaters safe and the public safe from them.

The Dominion Automobile Association, in a news release, has asked motorists on Hallowe'en night to drive with caution because of the possibility of "inclement weather" and "carefree kids corraling in the goodies."

The association has also recommended that costumes be light in color and preferably fitted with reflectorized material so that motorists can easily spot them.

Masks should not be worn because they hinder a child's ability to see cars.

It is also suggested that Hallowe'en costumes be short enough that youngsters do not trip and fall on doorsteps. In the same vein, homeowners are asked to leave outside lights on for the safety of children coming to their doors.

Many of the recommendations of the Belleville Jaycees are similar. The Jaycees suggest that makeup be worn on faces rather than masks for better vision.

It is also suggested that an adult or older person accompany young trick or treaters on their rounds.

Razor blades in apples, pins in candy and chocolate-covered mothballs are now the tradition of real Hallowe'en ghouls and the Jaycees recommend the inspection of candy and other gifts following house visitations.

If booby - trapped treats are found, children are asked to try and remember where they were obtained and inform the police.

Adults are also asked to keep children from committing vandalism which reportedly runs into thousands of dollars every Hallowe'en.

County 4-H Members Do Well at Ottawa Fair

Hastings county 4-H club members did well in junior competition at the Ottawa Winter Fair held last week.

Club members showed a total of 37 calves, and also took part in field crops and junior management competitions.

The 37 calves shown included 14 junior Holsteins, seven senior Holsteins, two junior and one senior Ayrshire, a junior and senior Jersey, one senior Guernsey, one Brown Swiss, five junior and two senior Hereford and two Charolais crossbreeds.

The Hastings group came up with five "A" calves, eight "B" calves and 24 "C" calves.

Placing in the "A" group were Terry Shannon of Marmora, Don Treverton of Derbyville, Carolyn Kiddle of Thomasburg, Neal Reavie of Flinton and Don Barrons of Madoc.

Carolyn Kiddle and Donald Treverton then went on to win division championships in their respective breeds with Don placing third in a strong grand championship class.

Lorne Gunning of Tweed placed first in the late potato class with an entry of Sebagoes. Other winners were Joan Johnston of Stace placing second and Jane Bailey of Madoc placing fourth.

Heidi Reavie, Wayne Wallbridge and Russell Hagerman competed in the junior management class.

It's Official

No, You Can't Burn Leaves

Where there's smoke there's a danger of pollution. When there's smoke there's the danger of fire.

Municipal bylaws and regulations by the air management branch of the department of energy and resources govern the burning of fires in the season when the temperature in burn leaves is prevalent.

Municipal bylaws state no one may start a fire in the open air where it is likely to cause damage. The fire, if it qualifies under the first section of the bylaw, may not be started without a competent person in attendance and a proper fire control equipment.

The bylaw also states that no one shall erect an incinerator without the approval of the fire chief who ensures proper spark arresting and other safeguards.

Fires, except barbecues grills and campfires, are prohibited after dark and prior to daylight.

If a citizen feels that a fire is causing too much smoke, although it is legitimately on the starter's property, he may complain through the air manage ment branch control officer, George Skalin.

Mr. Skalin told The Intelligencer that fires not contained in a proper incinerator could only be started with the permission of his department. He said that recreation fires were exempt except when polluting the air.

Ontario's Prospects

Belleville cannot win them all — nevertheless the Northern Electric decision to transfer the anticipated satellite program to Hull is a setback for local industry. It follows moreover the decision of Procter and Gamble to defer plans for a proposed toiletries plant in Sidney township.

Other developments in Belleville of late indicate however that the city more and more is being recognized as a strategic location for new industry. We could point in this context to a recent statement by Ontario Trade and Development Minister Stanley Randall, noting that by 1980 Ontario could be second only to Japan in its capacity for economic expansion and for improving living conditions. If present trends continue Belleville cannot help but share in this expansion.

Mr. Randall made a very good case for foreign investment in the province. He attacked "economic nationalists" who think that the national goal is a numbers game. "They think that all Canada's problems could be solved if some nebulous number, if some prescriptive percentage (like 51 per cent) of our firms were owned by Canadians."

Nationality alone, Mr. Randall told his Toronto audience, does not create jobs, and he added: "In my view, it is not who owns the stocks, it is how we use the facilities we have got. It is how we use them to create jobs and generate income." He called for a national policy on foreign investment, noting that he did not know one provincial premier, including Manitoba NDP Premier Schreyer, as well as Federal Finance Minister Benson, who was not actively seeking foreign capital.

Ontario is one of the most highly industrialized regions in the world, but it did not get this way without both foreign capital and manpower and creativity from overseas. As the minister pointed out, for the past 20 years, two-thirds of the growth of the provincial labor force has come from immigrants.

In the same period investment by overseas interests has been the lifeblood of regions like Northern Ireland, as well as the Irish republic. It is the same here. We need to preserve our sovereignty yes, but that is not to say we should go it alone in the sphere of economics — even if it were possible, which it is not.

On this point Mr. Randall noted: "The world is looking for a safe haven to invest funds in. Switzerland is no longer the acceptable repository of world monies, and while the investment is of great importance, political stability for foreign investors is far more important and ranks as a first priority. I found this out when I was in Germany and Austria with a Business Opportunity Mission."

Sound thinking and sound advice. Belleville is moving in a way it has not done for years, by just such a policy of encouraging industrialists to come and have a look at what we have to offer. It is the way to progress, expansion and prosperity. We have lost two enterprises in recent days, but there will be others.

On Film

That the camera never lies is an old saw in which we have all been led to believe. Yet as everyone knows photography can be manipulated, say for propaganda purposes. Be that as it may, there should be no doubting the authenticity of land developer William Teron's scheme for recording the development of Kingston's waterfront during the next five years.

The plan involves a camera mounted on the tower at the Royal Military College. It will turn on automatically each day at noon, and shoot ten minutes of film. Its impact will be both physical and sociological — other cameras for example will shoot episodes in a young girl's life, showing how she is affected by the waterfront's evolution.

We think Belleville might profit from a similar "Big Brother" watch being kept over its waterfront. We have heard any amount of talk about such development here — but a year hence, let alone five years, will things be very different along the city's shoreline?

This part of the city could be the prime asset which at present it is not. Few frequent the area, other than the citizens who live nearby; yet properly developed, it could be a park and playground area which would benefit the community at large.

Amid the Tension—A Ball at Government House

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Ever wonder what the Federal Political Set does when it goes social?

Not just the routine bo-bum socializing of the usual round of cocktail parties along Belleville Row or on Parliament Hill in the small but elegant Room Six-teen, the huge and starkly bare Railway Committee Room, or the even larger but lavishly appointed Confederation Foyer, with its enormous and dancing crystal chandeliers.

But when it goes formal in Black or White Tie style?

Then it is out to Rideau Hall to have a ball.

This time — and, as it infrequently happens, this edition of Ottawa Offbeat is for the ladies — the Parliamentary Ball with hosts the Governor General and Mrs. Michener.

There was the terror in the streets and separatist Dickoots of Montreal, and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp could not make it to the ball because he was too busy trying to help Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa with those "negotiations," as they were so diplomatically termed, with the criminal kidnap outlawa.

A ball at Government House in the crunch of such a crisis, what kind of timing is that, you ask?

Timing quite by vice-regal accident, and anyway, why not look at it from the angle that the political leaders can not continuously stay wound crisis-tight or they might snap.

And how more pleasantly relaxing to unwind than with a drink, some good food, friends and a little exercise on the dance floor.

So, on with the dance — though joy may not have been unconfined.

To end the suspense, let it be known right at the head of the receiving line that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, crowned by Ladies Home Journal as "the world's most elegant and eligible bachelor" came along.

He stepped three measures — one of them shoulder-shakers, hip-swivellers and eye-rollers with Miss Ruth Benjamin, daughter of Leslie Gordon Benjamin, NDP Member for Regina-Lake Centre, and a student at Ottawa's bilingual Champlain High School — a cha cha with Mrs. Terrence Murphy, wife of the Liberal MP for Sault Ste. Marie — and a sweeping harvest moon waltz with Mrs. Roland Michener.

His supper partner was Mina Andree, dazzling daughter of his old friend State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, and a Montreal fashion picture actress.

The only "hard" news, really, to come out of the ball was that the old pace-setter, Finance Minister Benson, appeared without his briar and reported he had never — not even in the hot disclose whether it was for health or anti-pollution reasons. He wore such a grimly determined look — or was it one of non-smoking resignation — as he steered his wife around the dance floor that the ladies from The Ottawa Journal's social department were moved to write he appeared to have just paid his taxes for perhaps was contemplating his next tax increase.)

Mrs. Benson was one of the few women to wear pants, or to put it more correctly fashionwise, a jumpsuit of deep purple under a white lace coat with scalloped sleeves.

With postal difficulties cleared up, reported the Journal's social staff, again getting a bit cagey, Communications Minister (and Postmaster General) Eric Kierans had received his invitation through the mail and was there, with his colleagues who were a floor - length album brocade gown.

Some of the other feminine finery?

Mrs. Michener, too, was in brocade, a lilac shade.

Mrs. Robert Stanfield wore plain, sophisticated black with crystal beading; Mrs. Jean Chrétien in cloth of gold gown of empire lines; Miss Adrienne Clarkson a deep V-loosened white lace.

The men did not make much fashion news. There was one white tuxite and a couple of dark blue dress shirts, one on Minister Without Portfolio for the Post Office, Jean-Pierre Coté.

With the rest, including trendsetter Pierre Elliott Trudeau, it was conformist black tie and no nonsense.

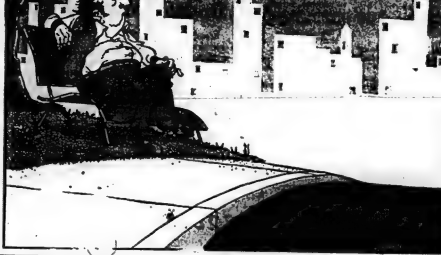
But now, to the buffet.

Lavish really is not the word for it, but it will have to do.

The feast was in the baronial splendor of Rideau Hall's uniquely beautiful State Room.

Draped in green and a white, the flags and banners of Canada and the 10 provinces and two territories, the "Fest Room" to see again in memory those gorgeous color-plates in the books of childhood, looked ready for King Arthur and his court.

And had they stepped out of some time machine? Surely they would have found everything to the King's taste.



Great standing ribs of roast beef, whole hams and turkey, sliced and diced by the slicing.

Whole salmon, both West Coast and East, and lobsters on beds of ice. Truffles and glazed and jellied salads, all works of culinary art.

Red and white wines and champagnes, pastries and cream puffs in shapes of swans, tiny cakes, and tea and coffee too.

Bowls of fresh roses and jardiniers of chrysanthemums from the greenhouses of Rideau Hall.

And outside on the green and rolling lawns, back of the tennis courts and the croquet lot, under the elms and oaks planted by kings and queens and presidents, among the statuary and mufti, a small army like the nervous Capital had never seen.

War Measures Act

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oct. 29, 1978 . . .

A federal election 45 years ago today—in 1925—resulted in a virtual stalemate, with Conservatives winning 116 seats and the Liberals 101 in the 245-seat House. But the Liberals formed a government with support from 24 Progressives.

1956—Israeli forces invaded Egypt and moved to within 20 miles of the Suez Canal.

1962—The International Joint Commission approved a joint Canada-U.S. application for permission to develop St. Lawrence River hydroelectric power.

1923—Turkey was proclaimed a republic.

An Earlier Vancouver

Vancouver Sun

We wouldn't want Philip Timms to think he's being used — the pioneer photographer still is very much around and indeed living in downtown Vancouver at the age of 96 — but we do have ulterior motives in extolling the show of his photographs at the Centennial Museum.

What fascinates most people about "The World of Philip Timms, 1900-1910" quite naturally is the depiction of a Vancouver that is no more: everything on English Bay (well, almost no more), windjammers, balloon flights, the city's first car, CPR land sales, horsecars, streetcars, bobble skirts, bowlers.

But what's this? Isn't there something as up-to-date as all got-out about these classic shots of the city street scene in the century's first decade?

Why, there sure is. Just look at those wooden utility poles, right you! Maybe he moved cities and the produce peddlers and the bustles and all the rest but, for history, his power poles they haven't changed a bit.

In a day of atomic power and communications signals bounced off the moon — and devilishly-clever digging and boring machines and cunningly-extruded plastic piping — the retention of poles and their flying harp of wires is too quaint by half.

Perhaps Philip Timms will just once more set his camera on a tripod, duck under the black cloth, and record our great public utility for his collection. For while its archaic poles may be indestructible, Hydro surely is a vanishing species.

Support for Ottawa's Policy

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am in full agreement with your editorial on the War Measures Act.

Looking into our daily newspapers, we find that public opinion is overwhelmingly supporting the Prime Minister. The lamentation by certain individuals that their civil liberty has been lost is nonsense. It is interesting to note that those who complain most are the ones who are the loudest to criticize and they do it freely, openly and publicly. In larger cities, as in Toronto, at the City Hall, certain agitators for recognition on hand were free enough to address the crowd — I would like to ask any full-minded person: In what communist country do you have this kind of freedom?

Some tell us that our regular criminal laws are sufficient to cope with the situation. I for one can not agree with this. We have seen in former years what even one well-trained agitator can do to get a destructive mob behind him, and the FLQ has an Armada of it. They have plenty of Cuban-trained saboteurs and agitators — "A handful of criminals" they say. But those of us who have seen a revolution from start to finish have different ideas.

We know that such polite a l disease unless stopped in time. will spread like cancer, or like wildfire, if you will.

The foresight of Mr. Trudeau and his courageous act has saved the nation from that large scale "bloodbath" that certain FLQ leaders have predicted.

B.C. City Opposes Pulp Mill in Area

The following is a copy of a letter to A. S. Matthewman, president of the Ratepayers Association of North Maryburg Township, from Mayor William Hallen of Veraon, British Columbia.

In answer to your letter of October 8, 1970, listing reasons why our City Council and the people of Vernon oppose the location of a Pulp Mill in the area, I must say that the pollution is total, sincere and loud from all sectors of our community for the obvious reason that it will only bring us an obnoxious stench in the air we breathe and deadly pollution of water we enjoy in this beautiful valley of recreation which is a tourist-oriented area. We have no high winds that could blow away the noxious clouds finding their way for miles and miles into virgin valleys.

Our experience with pulp mills where they exist in British Columbia is such that we do not wish to permit such industry at any price as it will only destroy and not up-grade the environment.

There are many areas which lend themselves to such industry; surely we should not be so selfish as to permit the dollar hungry establishment to despoil the very few spots we have left and leave nothing unpolluted for our children's existence.

United Appeal Chairman's Work for Community

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

No one knows better than the undersigned how much of himself Ben Corke has given to the chairmanship of this year's United Appeal, a position he stepped into late in July.

When the final results are in, they will reveal the most successful campaign in Belleville's history. To a major extent this is due to Ben Corke's dedication to any community cause he believes in.

Ben is leaving on Sunday for three weeks in Scotland with fellow Ontario Rotarians. We know that you will join in wishing him bon voyage and a rejuvenating holiday. He certainly deserves it!

Of one thing we can be certain. Upon his return, Ben Corke's great ability and energy will continue to be available toward making Belleville an even better place to live in.

At present the level of the Bay of Quinte at this point is lower than it has been for a long time. It would appear that low water is the rule over most of the district. Crowe Lake is low and Weslemkon has gone lower than it ever was. A lack of rains at this time, coupled with an abnormally warm spell in the early part of October would appear to be a good cause for the low level.

Soviets Want Hijackers Extradited

Copenhagen (NY) Journal

The hijacking of a Soviet airliner — the first successful attempt in Russia — puts a new perspective on the world-wide problems. Somehow we don't expect such crimes to occur in totalitarian states, where fear and extreme punishment seems to keep the populace toeing the mark.

The natural reaction, after the problems we have had with air hijackings, is to wonder what happen behind the Iron Curtain. The only tenable clue is to hope that Turkey will not surrender the two hijackers, who have asked political asylum.

However, unlike most of our hijackings, which have been remarkably free of violence, a stewardess was killed and the two pilo's on the Soviet plane were injured.

The Turkish government said it would not return the hijackers to Russia, if they claim a legitimate reason for their being granted asylum.

Such action by Turkey should be condemned, just as the failure of other countries — particularly Cuba — to return hijackers to their country of origin. In the circumstances of this instance, the hijackers apparently are guilty of murder and assault, in addition to hijacking.

Political asylum is deserved when the person seeking it has not committed a serious crime in seeking it. But to condone the action of the Soviet hijackers and grant them asylum would be to set the stage for increased hijack chances. We have had too much of that in recent hijackings without adding a new dimension now.

Cornwall Standard Freeholder

The case of the Russian father and son who took over a Soviet airliner after a battle aloft and landed in Turkey, seeking political asylum, brings into sharp focus the problems of and the necessity of an international skyjacking agreement.

Few in the West will not sympathize with the father and a son who took the most desperate of measures to flee from the Iron Curtain for whatever reason. Yet a Russian stewardess was killed in the aerial gun battle, and the pilot and co-pilot wounded; conceivably all aboard the flight might well have died had both pilots been incapacitated.

There can be little doubt, in the Turkish incident, that to return the Russians to their own country would be to sentence them to at best a living death. The firing squad would be a more likely fate. But murder is murder.

Whatever the Turks decide to do about the two refugees Russians — and because murder is involved here, it's quite possible that it will be handed back to the Soviet Union — it should now be apparent that Russians will line up on the side of an international skyjacking agreement when they may well have another skyjacking or international basis.

Communication Is the Key

Darwin Kealey (centre) Oritario Conservative youth organizer, listens to viewpoints from Quinte Young Progressive Conservative members at Kiwanis Centre last night. Broader communication of outspoken attitudes is now being stimulated in what Mr. Kealey calls "a switch" from political traditions.

Young Tories Are Urged: Tell Party What You Want

Quinte Young Progressive Conservatives last night approved a resolution opposing the Ontario government's attitude to lowering the voting age.

The move — in effect supporting the Liberal and New Democratic Party-call for extending the franchise to 18-year-olds — reflects a new trend potentially involving more — outspoken criticism from the party's young people of their power-wielding Conservative elders.

The trend is part of an attempt to broaden communication between Ontario's young people and the party hierarchy — one that will involve criticism where necessary, Indicates Darwin Kealey, newly-appointed youth organizer for the Conservatives.

Mr. Kealey, 26, who spoke at last night's meeting endorsing the voting - age resolution at the Kiwanis Centre, put it this way: "Our responsibility is not to Conservatives but to young people in general. If the position of the young is contrary to that of the party — so be it. Our responsibility is to communicate to the party the criticism or support of these people."

Its local effects will see more searching political stands from youth groups like the QYPC, its spokesmen said last night.

"We're now trying to make an effort in Belleville to ask (the government) why things are being done," said QYPC president Roger Porter.

"We're going to be asking a lot of questions (on) why our government is making moves on certain things."

Supporting that theme, the QYPC will write the party caucus and government from its resolution.

The resolution calls for lowering the voting age to 18 and states that the QYPC is "opposed in the provincial Conservative government's stand that the age limit be 19 years."

Seeking to step up local youth involvement with public affairs, the QYPC now is planning a more active program of events, to include discussions and addresses from public figures.

Such groups as the QYPC also will be encouraged to participate in community projects as part of the broadened involvement philosophy, Mr. Kealey said.

The new approach contrasts with the tradition where all party groups automatically supported party attitudes, he said.

Youth is being encouraged to "start telling the party what young people want."

"We want to take a more creative approach," said Mr. Kealey. "We're telling them: Don't wait for the party to tell you what to do. Tell the party what you want to do."

"It's a switch," he admits.

Totally oriented to the new communications technology of their age, he believes young people can effectively make their political points.

Television, videotape, radio, direct telephone hookups for linking widely - dispersed groups in simultaneous discussion with politicians are among the implements available for increasing dialogue between young people and political leaders, he said.

Public's Concern Produced Tax Reform Plan Changes

BATAWA (Staff) — When the federal government decides its tax reform program next spring, the public will know "that they have had a very real input" in its formulation, Patrick Mahoney (MP Calgary South) said here last night.

The 41-year-old former president of the Canadian Football Association, now parliamentary Secretary to Hon. E. J. Benson, Minister of Finance, was guest speaker at the annual dinner of the Prince Edward — Hastings Liberal Association's Club 100.

Mr Mahoney stressed that "the White Paper in conjunction with the Commons' report will be the basis of the decisions" and public opinion will be taken into full consideration.'

"There has been a massive public response to the government call to debate the tax reform" he said, explaining that House and Senate committees received 1,600 presentations and heard 800 witnesses including representatives from eight of the 10 provinces.

Government input will be known "when the Government brings down the budget next spring" Mr. Mahoney said. One thing is certain, he said, "lower income Canadians will be better off as a result of the tax reform but only at the expense of Canadians just a little better off."

Those from middle income groups will have an increased tax burden, he indicated, because "the poor cannot afford more and the rich are too free to make any great difference . . . Canada is not as rich as we like to think."

Canada's new tax structure will, "recognize the social needs of the country by a program acceptable to the provinces" the parliamentary secretary said, adding that consultations are going on now with the provinces so that the tax reform will have their sanction.

Mr. Mahoney said that the government will act in the broadest public interest "while assuring to the businessman the individual benefits of his enterprise".

Widespread dialogue on the tax reform, according to Mr. Mahoney, is a "classic example" of the kind of public involvement the government wants to foster.

In the past 100 years decision making has only involved the government party caucus, the civil service, interest groups and, indirectly the press, he said. But now, the public is becoming more involved and "the dividends of this public involvement are tremendous . . . the Government will know its decisions are based on the broadest foundation."

Mahoney Faces Queries

BATAWA (Staff) — In a fast moving session here last night at the Liberal Association's Club 100 banquet, Patrick Mahoney (MP — Calgary South) tackled many questions raised by those attending.

Allan Ralley, Reeve of Athol township, took the floor to object to the condition of Canada's Coast Guard, charging that it is no match for its American counterpart on the Great Lakes.

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, said that he was sympathetic and would bring the matter "up with appropriate authorities, although he was not familiar with Coast Guard service on Lake Ontario.

"We cannot force people to work." he later told Ebon James, a Trenton businessman, who questioned the local situation in the apple industry, whereby West Indians are being brought in to pick the seasonal crop while there are people in the area unemployed.

However, Mr. Mahoney said he will refer the matter to the labor department.

Mayor J. Russell Scott of Belleville posed several questions about the White Paper on taxation. He sought information about provisions in the new tax scheme for small businessmen.

In response to the mayor's request that small businessmen be defined, Mr. Mahoney said that it is "one who needs funds to grow."

Mayor Scott had contended that proposals for small businesses were ambiguous because the term lacked clarity.

Mayor Scott also drew the speaker's attention to the plight of the eastern Ontario farmer, saying that those in the west were accustomed to wintering in California and Florida.

The parliamentary secretary suggested that the wealth of western farmers is somewhat of a misconception but that he would see that Ottawa become aware of the mayor's contention.

Frank Follwell of Belleville registered a complaint that the Northern Electric satellite facility in the city would be moved to Hull and a mammoth new plant would be built there to intensify the operation.

He said that the mayor of Belleville deserved a full explanation, to which the guest speakers promised a later reply.

WEDDING

DUFF — FREEMANTLE

St. Mark's United Church, Canniton was the scene of the Oct. 24 wedding of Barbara Sonnee Freemantle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Freemantle of Canniton and of Lee Andrew Duff of Peterborough, son of Mr. J. Duff and Mrs. E. Duff of RR 8, Belleville. Rev. J. A. Morrison conducted the ceremony and Mrs. V. Mitchell played the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length dress with an empire bodice featuring a wedding band collar and trimmed in moss green, giving it a bolero effect. She also had full bishop sleeves and cuffs trimmed with a band of imported moss green Alencon lace to match the trim on the bodice. The winter white chiffon skirt was softly gathered at the waist. She carried a cascading bouquet of miniature white carnations and Woburn Abbey roses.

The maid of honor Miss Karen Crook was attired in a floor - length empire style gown of dark green velvet. The full bishop sleeves and the back of the waistline were trimmed with self - bows. A softly gathered skirt fell from the waistline in a gentle A - line. She carried a bouquet of autumn colored flowers.

The bridegroom was attended by Dean Freemantle the bride's brother as best man and the ushers were Barry Rupert and Terry Robinson.

Successful Living

A Child Has A Right to Good Vision

By DORIS CLARK

Something which constantly amazes me is the difficulty a parent has in spotting an unevenness in his child's eyes. The word is "squint". This means anything from the very slightest tendency to be cross-eyed to noticeably crossed eyes.

More than once an aunt or uncle has been slapped down by a doting mother who simply cannot see anything wrong. As far as she is concerned the eyes both look straight ahead.

When one eye is a little off centre, it does not join in the task of seeing. This means the other eye does all the work, and the less the off-centre eye is used, the faster and less capable it becomes. There are times when this can be remedied by glasses alone, if spotted early enough.

Try to imagine the feelings of a grown man (or woman) turned down for a job that would have been his big opportunity — just because he could only see well with one eye. It does happen; and what a resentment wells up in that person's heart, when he knows that his eyes could have been corrected when he was young!

Parents — it doesn't hurt to ask, does it? If anybody has given you the slightest hint about little Billy's suspected squint, do something. For a start, write in for my booklet, "A Child's Eyes — A Help or a Handicap?" enclosing 15 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope.

* * *

Dear Doris: In school I could never do enough to please my father. If I brought home a 73 percent average in my report card he would say, "Why couldn't it be 75 percent?" In his own way he was trying to get me to work harder but I felt I could never be good enough to please him.

Now I have an inferiority complex. When I have a situation to handle I feel I really can't do it, that I'm too stupid. Anything I do accomplish I put down to my own eyes.

I want to move out of my parents' home but I am afraid that I will be unable to save and still buy food. My Dad says, "Don't think that you can come running back." — Failure.

Dear Failure: Sort of a reverse psychology, isn't it? Some parents think they have to scold instead of encouraging their children. It hasn't occurred to them that loving and praising are what work miracles.

Yet in your long letter you report you are able to save money, you are able to help people, you are able to make friends. Stop listening to your Dad.

You can do anything you want to do. You can take doctor has a good look about all this, or will get one for you. I am sending you the names of two or three which you can find in your library.

Normally, the ban is only on the last six weeks of pregnancy. But each case needs its own special consideration. We don't want that second baby of yours to be injured in any way.

So — off to your doctor with you. Write down all the questions that are troubling you, have them in front of you as you talk to him and ask them.

(Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. When writing to give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BEYBON

June: "Do I have to go to the movies with the family on tonight? Jane wants me to go to the basketball game with her."

Mother: "You know Friday night is our family night. We planned to see this movie together three weeks ago."

Mother: "Now the children are getting older, I think we should plan our family outings to fit their schedules. They prefer to do things with their friends on weekend nights."

Father: "You're right. They won't think it's fun if it's an obligation."

Family companionship need not be destroyed because some of the customary routines are changed. Teen-agers are likely to return to and enjoy family customs if parents are flexible through the years when the young are trying to build social lives of their own.

Apples Add Flavor to Mincemeat Tarts

By MARY MOORE

These tarts are made with pastry that I have wanted to make for years. They were served at a funeral wake by my friend Ivy Faville. Quietly I invited her to come to my kitchen and show me the method.

She did and made twelve 3¾" and twelve 3" pies a 9" pie. She used one 28-oz. can of mincemeat to which she added three large apples which had been chopped and steamed a few minutes.

IVY'S MINCEMEAT TARTS (makes 24 covered tarts, and one 9" pie — will freeze)

PASTRY:

¼ lb. butter
¼ pound shortening
½ cup sugar
3½ cups (1 lb.) sifted but not sifted cake and pastry flour
2 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup milk

FILLING:

One 28-oz. can mincemeat
3 large apples, pared, chopped and steamed until tender.

To make Pastry cream together the butter, shortening and sugar. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and add to creamed mixture along with the milk, Ivy used her hands for this operation. Divide dough into three portions and roll out. Cut out rounds to fit bottoms of two sets of tart tins and one pie plate.

To make Filling add steamed apples to mincemeat and when cool fill all lined tart tins and pie plate evenly. Roll out remaining pastry and cut out to fit tops of tarts and pie and seal and crimp edges. Tops should be lightly gashed.

Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. Now ovens differ. Watch these carefully and do not overbake. The pastry should be pale and barely tinged with gold. It will burn easily because the pastry contains sugar.

When baked cool tarts on cake racks and sprinkle powdered sugar like snow over them.

I hope our tart bakers will treasure this recipe because it is a recipe I have wanted for 20 years.

NOTE: If to be frozen, bake and freezewrap and freeze. To serve thaw and warm in oven at 350 deg. Fahr. 15-20 min.

Medical Secretaries Attend Clinic Day in Scarborough

Clinic Day held Oct. 24 at the Scarborough General Hospital and hosted by the Toronto East MSA, was attended by medical secretaries from Sudbury, Orillia, Windsor, Barrie, Toronto, Pickering, Oshawa, Peterborough, Port Hope, Belleville and Picton.

The morning session began with Dr. R. G. Elgie, Neurosurgeon Scarbrough General Hospital who demonstrated techniques of removing an aneurysm using a clip prosthesis. Dr. Anne Keyl of the Women's College Hospital gave a most interesting and stimulating view of teenagers today and how drug overdoses and social diseases are very realistic problems. This age group is academically superior trained but emotionally immature and they lack the essentials of motivation in a specific direction. Young people today may be helped more often than not by just listening to them.

Coffee break provided by the Scarborough General Radiologists was followed by Dr. J. W. Aldis, executive director of OHSIP, who spoke of the implantation of a new system to be effective 1 July 1972 in which the designated agents will be gradually fad-ed out. The OHSIP number will become the social insurance number. The patient will benefit by having to carry only one identification card and his single premium will cover both inpatient and outpatient care.

Dr. Ralph E. Friedman, attending radiologist Scarborough General Hospital presented "Etchings in black and white" showing special procedures used in diagnostic radiology today. Chemical compounds and dyes are used for contrast projections of internal organs.

The radiologist is able to follow the course of the dye by means of movies or video tape. Normal and abnormal views were shown of degenerated discs and also the special techniques required to determine brain tumors. Modern day radiology equipment is very sophisticated hence the rising costs of diagnostic treatment.

The afternoon session consisted of a panel discussion with Dr. William Tumilson, general practitioner Ajax General Hospital; Dr. W. E. Orived, urologist, Toronto East General Hospital; Dr. T. E. Schofield, chief of psychiatry Toronto East General Hospital; and Dr. R. J. MacKay, chief of pathology, Scarborough General Hospital.

The next 'Clinic Day' will be held in Kingston on November 28.

Ann Landers
Wife Concerned Over Hubby's Obesity

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The problem is my husband's weight. I know neither you nor I can do anything about it but I'm hoping Ed sees this letter in the paper and is motivated to do something himself. Everything else has failed.

When we were married Ed was a beautiful 180 pounds, wore a size 40 suit. Now, 17 years later, he squeezes himself into a size 48 and refuses to say how much he weighs. It can't be an ounce under 265.

Ed has been to two doctors. They both ruled out thyroid trouble. One doctor said, in my presence, "The over-worked gland is his mouth."

I plan Ed's meals carefully, no fats, no starches, low-cal desserts, sugar-free canned goods. When I find candy-bar wrappers and empty peanut sacks in his car I get so mad I nearly explode. He drinks beer like it was free. The only muscles that get any exercise are his eyeballs — great TV watcher.

The two big loves in Ed's life are food and sex. Unfortunately, the love for food is destroying his ability to have sex. It is also destroying my desire for him. It's not easy to get sexually aroused by a man who has eaten himself out of shape. I've tried my darndest to fake it but I'm a poor actress and he can tell. This makes him unhappy and sometimes he is impotent.

Ed is a good man, devoted and kind and I do love him. But I worry that he is shortening his life, ruining his health and hurting our marriage. Is there anything you can think of to help him? — WORRIED IN SEATTLE.

DEAR WORRIED: Please reread the first eleven words in the second sentence of your letter to me. Truer words were never spoken. Every overweight person must accept responsibility for himself — and this means responsibility for every ounce of fat he has added to his frame. Until he decides to do something about it, nothing will happen.

I have considerable faith in: (1) Professional counseling. Sometimes when fat people learn why they are stuffing themselves, they quit. (2) Weight Watchers. This organization has produced extraordinary results for overweight people who have tried everything else without result. Seattle has several chapters and meeting places. (Look in the phonebook.) Do not urge Ed to follow either of these suggestions. Hand him this column and if he wants to act on it he will.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a middle-aged family man who has never been in any trouble whatsoever. Driving home from work tonight I picked up a rather forlorn looking girl who was hitchhiking. She appeared to be about 15. After she got in the car she looked older. When we came to a light she saw a policeman on the curb. In a pleasant, conversational tone she said, "Give me $5 or I'll scream that you tried to rape me." I was so stunned I couldn't say a word. My first thought was the publicity. It can ruin a man whether he's innocent or guilty. Without hesitation I gave her $5. She smiled and said, "Thanks, sucker," then she jumped out of the car and ran off.

I told my wife about it the minute I arrived home. She said the same thing had happened to her male hairdresser last week. So please, Ann, warn people against picking up hitchhikers. It can be very dangerous. — BURNED.

DEAR BURNED: I've warned people about hitchhikers repeatedly. And now I'd like to say a word about shakedowns. When you gave that little twerp $5 you encouraged her to shake down the next guy. You should have turned her over to the cop right then and there.

Hospitals Should Treat 'Emergencies'

TORONTO (CP) — The head of Detroit hospitals and a Toronto drug workers supported a common goal at the Ontario Hospital Association convention Wednesday — a more willing acceptance of patients in hospital emergency wards.

Speaking at the final session of the three-day convention, Herman Glass, commissioner of hospitals in Detroit, said no patient, even though he seems to be suffering from only a common cold, should be turned away.

"If the patient feels he has an emergency, then he should be regarded as having one."

He said nurses and doctors often reason that a person can wait and see his family doctor. However, he added, emergency centres should be more patient-oriented.

Brian Chapman, a worker with a Toronto youth project told a panel discussion on drugs that hospitals were using a hands-off approach to the treatment of drug users.

The long-haired social worker told of being turned away from different hospitals when he sought to have a drug user on a "bad trip" admitted for treatment.

Administrators in the panel discussion agreed with his criticism but said hospitals' attitudes are changing.

One delegate suggested special treatment centres should be established for drug users.

Mr. Chapman said one of the hardest jobs his organization had was to convince young people not to be afraid of going to the hospitals, but this job was becoming even more difficult with discrimination shown by hospital staffs.

Also participating in the panel were Dr. William Keil of Victoria Hospital, London, Sister Audrey Mantle, administrator of Hotel Dieu hospital, St. Catharines, and Gerald Le Dain, chairman of the federal royal commission on non-medical use of drugs.

Another topic discussed at the convention was the introduction of a joint bargaining committee for hospital employees, such as nurses.

James Wilson, chairman of the association's master committee on joint bargaining for nurses, said 17 hospitals have agreed so far to the idea but the plan cannot be implemented until next year.

Under the plan, a negotiating committee would bargain with all nurses in a certain area.

At present, nurses bargain with the management of the individual hospital hiring them.

"I don't see why any guy would want to be polygamous . . . I can't even afford to be monogamous."

Convict Released To Harvest Crop

TORONTO (CP) — Shortly after being convicted of manslaughter, Alexander Norman Kovachis, 30, of Toronto, was released Wednesday on $22,000 bail to enable him to harvest his crop at a farm near Holland Landing, about 30 miles north of here.

He was charged originally with non-capital murder in the death of John Redmond, 29, who was shot in the stomach last April 8.

Kovachis' release was authorized by Mr. Justice C. D. Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court who said:

"It is highly unlikely he (Kovachis) would jeopardize his position in the circumstances by committing any act of violence until at least he is released from the place to which I propose to send him."

Kovachis was remanded to Nov. 30 for sentence.

Many Cottages Potential Polluters

TORONTO (CP) — Nineteen per cent of 4,000 summer properties checked in a survey of Ontario recreation regions are possible polluters of lake waters, the legislature was told Wednesday.

A preliminary report on a survey which began in June showed that another 15 per cent of the properties have unsatisfactory sewage disposal systems. About 66 per cent have satisfactory systems.

The survey, part of a program conducted by the departments of health and energy and resources management, is designed to protect recreational waters.

The 4,500 properties examined are mostly in the Kawarthas, Lakes examined to date include Clear, Cameron, Lovesick, Buckhorn Upper, Buckhorn Lower, Burnt River, Sparrow, Smoke, South Tea, Tepee, Joe, Little Joe, Canoe, Beulia, Thousand Islands and Chemong.

The greatest number of potential polluters—276—were among the 1,062 properties on Stony Lake. The same lake had another 277 properties which were found to have unsatisfactory sewage systems.

George Kerr, minister of energy and resources management, told the legislature that 95 per cent of the inshore bathing areas on the lakes were safe at the time of sampling.

The properties surveyed are a sampling of the 200,000 summer properties in Ontario.

Benson's Tax Plan Target Set

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Wednesday night he will introduce definite legislation next spring to implement proposed tax law reforms, and will continue discussions with provincial treasurers on his plans.

He said modifications will be made in the proposals originally outlined in a white paper issued nearly one year ago, but the government hopes to have legislation implementing the revised proposals passed by midsummer, to take effect on Jan. 1, 1972.

Speaking to the Toronto chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants, Mr. Benson said:

"The long and involved process of reforming our income tax system is drawing to a close. No tax system will ever be perfect and amendments will continue to be a necessary yearly occurrence. However, I can assure you that the tax reform bill that we will introduce next spring will be a much better system on which to build."

Following receipt of reports on the white paper proposals by the Senate and Commons finance committees, the government now is determining the the measures it will propose next spring. Mr. Benson said that since this will be part of his next budget, he must preserve budget secrecy on the proposals.

Text of his speech was released to the press before 2 p.m. EST.

Wheat Cut To Continue

WINNIPEG (CP) — Otto Lang, the minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, said Wednesday the federal government's wheat acreage reduction program will not be continued next year.

Mr. Lang made the comment at a news conference following a day of talks with farm organization leaders and agriculture ministers from the three prairie provinces

He said, however, that there may still be some "special precautions" introduced by the federal government for the 1971 growing season to ensure against buildup of a large wheat surplus.

Under the acreage reduction program introduced this year, farmers were paid $5 an acre to leave land in summer fallow, and $10 an acre to plant forage crops in land that formerly grew wheat.

'The Green Machine' Cools Out Eskimos with 34-10 Win

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders snapped Edmonton Eskimos' six-game winning streak at seven games Wednesday night with a 34-10 Western Football Conference win. And Rahkov coach Ray Jauch remodeled reporters: "I told you they were going to come at us."

And come at them Roughriders did, scoring 21 unanswered points in the first half and then cruising through the second with backup Gary Lane spelling off starting quarterback Ron Lancaster.

Roughriders, tie in front of the WFC with 13 wins and two losses, used a balanced attack to confuse Edmonton's pass-minded game.

"It's like a kid, a spanking sometimes does you good," said Jauch, Canadian Football League Coach of the year whose second-place club ended the season with nine wins and seven losses.

Eskimos face third-place Calgary Stampeders in a sudden-death semi-final Nov. 8 in Edmonton, with the winner opening a best-of-three final series here Nov. 14.

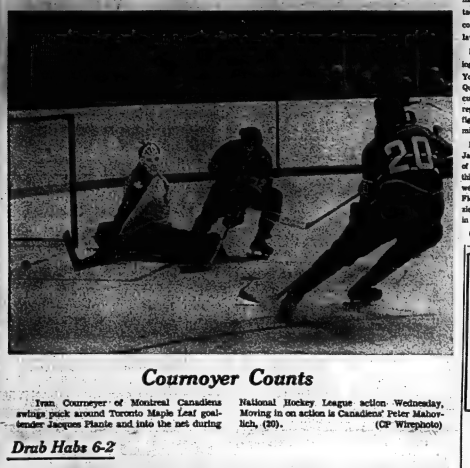
Fullback B. C. Gamble, cut by Edmonton, played his first game in a Saskatchewan uniform and scored two touchdowns, romping 41 times for 96 yards gained while Roughriders' ace ball-carrier, George Reed, watched from the sidelines. Reed was nursing a leg injury and is expected to be ready for playoff action.

Halfback Dan McKinnis scored the other two Saskatchewan touchdowns, cut on a 30-yard toss from Lancaster and the other on a short run. Jack Abendschan strengthened his hold on first place in the WFC scoring race with two field goals, three converts and a single.

Dave Cutler, in second place in individual scoring with 102 points, seven fewer than Abendschan, booted a 35-yard field goal, a record in professional football.

The best previous CFL boot was a 33-yard three-pointer kicked by Bill Mitchell for Edmonton Aug. 17, 1964 against Calgary. The longest in the National Football League was 56 yards by Bert Rechichar of Baltimore Sept. 27, 1953.

Cutler's kick was aided by a downfield wind that gusted to about 25 miles an hour. He also hoisted a convert to the only Edmonton touchdown, a fourth-quarter run for seven yards by Rusty Cline, who took over as quarterback from Don Trull half way through the game.



Saskatchewan had 147 yards gained passing and 187 rushing, compared with Edmonton's 230 and 30. Lancaster Wayne Shaw made two interceptions for Saskatchewan and Ted Dushkewich got another. Jerry Griffin made the only Edmonton interception. Eskimos fumbled three times and lost them all while Roughriders did not fumble.

The victory, before 18,000 fans who sat through a light drizzle with temperatures in the mid-30s, left head coach Eagle Keys smiling.

He came to Saskatchewan six years ago after being dropped by Edmonton and had vowed revenge after Roughriders unwillingly launched Eskimos on their winning streak by losing 39 to 6 in Edmonton Sept. 12. Roughriders close their regular season Nov. 1 in Vancouver.

Leafs Explode in Last Period

By IAN MacLAUGH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"You saw it, I don't have to tell you guys what to write," was the terse reply coach Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens gave to a writer who asked if he thought his goaltending looked weak.

Ruel's expression of frustration after his team's 6-2 drubbing in Toronto was attributed to four third-period goals by the Maple Leafs.

The Canadiens, after playing an even terms with the Leafs in the first period despite a 2-1 Toronto lead, took the play away in the second period but were thwarted continually by Jacques Plante in the Toronto goal.

Then, as the third period started, Montreal's momentum ended abruptly and Toronto cashed in on their advantage to humiliate the Canadiens in front of more than 16,000 frenzied fans.

"You can't take the stupid penalties we did out there then allow guys like (Dave) Keon and (Mike) Walton to skate all night. Something's got to happen."

And it did. Canadiens' Mickie Redmond was tagged with an unnecessary penalty early in the third period, crashing into Keon on the end boards to the right of the Montreal goal while play was moving into Toronto territory.

While he was off, Ron Ellis' first goal of the season gave Toronto a 3-3 lead. Guy Trottier made it 4-2 19 seconds later. Keon and Norm Ullman scored 15 seconds apart later in the period on goalie Rogatien Vachon to complete the rout.

The home team took advantage of familiar ice in all five NHL games Wednesday. In addition to the Toronto victory, Minnesota North Stars edged Chicago Black Hawks 2-1, New York Rangers downed Detroit Red Wings 4-1, St. Louis Blues trimmed California's winless Golden Seals 3-2 and Pittsburgh Penguins poured in four first-period goals in a 5-3 win over Los Angeles Kings.

Rookies sparkled in the Minnesota win. Buster Harvey, the North Stars' No. 1 pick in the amateur draft last June from Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, notched his first NHL goal, the winner.

Jude Drouin tallied the earlier Minnesota goal while Gilles Gilbert continued his super training-camp effort in goal stopping the Black Hawks' big shooters.

After the game in New York, Ranger's Vic Hadfield was waiting at the dressing room door for the game's statistics to arrive. He wasn't so much interested in the two goals he scored but in the shots-on-goal column and the big zero beside his assignment for the night. Red Wings' Gordie Howe.

"See, you guys laugh about me checking No. 9," Hadfield shouted to his team-mates. "See that, no shots."

"Vic's a good checker," laughed centre Walt Tkaczuk, who also contributed a goal. "Just ask him, he'll tell you."

Hadfield opened the season on the Rangers' checking line with Syl Apps and Bob Nevin but has since been shifted back to his old wing position on New York's highest-scoring line with centre Jean Ratelle and Rod Gilbert.

But with the Wings in town and Howe back on the forward line after a stint on defence, Ranger coach Emile Francis gave Hadfield the job watching the all-star right winger.

CFL Scoring

Western Conference

Place-kicker Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan Roughriders picked up 18 points in his team's 34-10 win over Edmonton Eskimos Wednesday night to strengthen his hold on the Western Football Conference individual scoring leadership.

Abendschan's 18 points, on two field goals, a single and three converts, gave him a total of 113 for the season. His closest competitor, Edmonton's Dave Cutler, picked up four points in a losing cause, including a record-breaking 59-yard field goal but it left him with 102 points for the season as Eskimos have completed their regular schedule.

Quarry Finds Purse Attached

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The five-gate share earned by boxer Jerry Quarry in his losing fight Monday night against Mohammad Ali in Atlanta has been attached on behalf of Quarry's co-manager Johnny Flores, a lawyer said Wednesday night.

Ben Adachi also said proceedings were under way in New York to tie up the amount Quarry is to get from closed-circuit television. The gate sum is reportedly $41,000 and the TV figure is about a quarter of a million dollars.

Flores and Jerry's father Jack Quarry were co-managers of the heavyweight fighter early this year when two contracts were signed—one of them by Flores—for fights with Joe Frazier, one in New York and one in Los Angeles.

Quarry and his father claimed Flores had no right to sign a contract for that fight and subsequently, Quarry filed to dissolve his seven-year contract with Flores.

There is still a year and a half to go on that contract and Nov. 9 has been set for an arbitration hearing in the matter.

Canuck Boxers Look Ahead

MONTREAL (CP) — Young Dennis Padiano of Montreal and George Chuvalo of Toronto are at opposite ends of the fistic rainbow, but both are looking to the future.

Padiano, 21, and already Canadian welterweight champion with 21 straight wins as a professional, along with Chuvalo, 31, reigning Canadian heavyweight champ, are looking to separate bouts here Nov. 5 to further their careers.

The pair are part of a five-bout card—all 10-round non-title affairs—that co-promoters Regis Levesque and Marcel Salaval have booked into the 18,000-seat Montreal Forum.

Padiano ranked No. 3 in world ratings by Ring Magazine and No. 5 by the World Boxing Association, will tackle Don Ross, 33, of Toronto.

Chuvalo will meet Tony Ventura, a journeyman heavyweight from Buffalo.

Sports On All Fronts

OTTAWA (CP) — Doug Harvie, former National Hockey League star, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of carrying a concealed weapon without a permit. He was given a suspended sentence. Harvey, 45, for many years a Montreal Canadiens defenceman, was arrested at Uplands Airport about 4:30 a.m. Wednesday when an RCMP constable found a loaded revolver in his briefcase. Police said examination of the briefcase was routine in light of security precautions prompted by the terrorist movement in Quebec. Harvey gave no indication why he was carrying a revolver, police said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Short, owner of Washington Senators, said Wednesday he had not yet signed outfielder Curt Flood but baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said "there is a possibility something definitely may develop shortly." The Washington Post earlier reported that Flood, still engaged in an anti-trust lawsuit involving baseball's controversial reserve clause, had agreed to salary terms at a price in excess of $80,000-a-year. But Short denied that and Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, which is backing Flood's suit, labelled the story "flatly untrue." All, however, acknowledged that Short, who recently acquired had-luck pitcher Denny McLain for his Senators, had met with Flood in New York to discuss the situation involving his playing in Washington despite the lawsuit. "I have not signed Mr. Flood," Short told a Washington radio station, "but I have always indicated I would — and I will."

Burlington Fights Overconfidence

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — With a 13-0 season record, you wouldn't think a football team needed a warning.

But hanging over Burlington Braves' clubhouse is a sign reading: "Confidence breeds a winner, overconfidence breeds a loser—remember 1968."

And the Braves will probably think of that warning up to and during Saturday's Eastern Canada junior football championship game against Montreal NDG Maple Leafs.

The clubhouse sign referred to 1968 when everyone here thought Braves were on their way to their second successive national title game appearance.

But Brantford Bisons ousted the Braves in the Ontario championship game.

Braves and Bisons met for the provincial title again this year and the Braves, still smarting from 1968, wiped out Brantford 32-13 for their 13th consecutive win.

The game raised Braves' points against total to 67, an average of less than 3½ a game. They have scored 347, or about 41 a game.

The Braves are coached by Bernie Custis, former Hamilton Tiger-Cat and Syracuse University star. He played for the Grey Cup champion Tiger-Cats of 1953 and in the same season was named an Eastern Conference all-star at both halfback and quarterback.

"Some people think a team has to do a lot in one day just because it's a big game," he said. "But you don't."

Cutler Kicks 59-Yarder

REGINA (CP) — Dave Cutler, Edmonton Eskimo placekicker, set a Canadian Football League record Wednesday night with a 59-yard field goal —the only bright spot in the Eskimos 34-10 thrashing by Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Cutler, a 23-year-old graduate of Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, B.C., set the record with the aid of a brisk wind.

He eclipsed the previous record of 58 yards set by former Eskimo Bill Mitchell in an Edmonton-Calgary Stampeder game Aug. 17, 1964.

Cutler has kicked 22 field goals in 41 attempts this season.

The field goal is believed to be the longest in professional football. The longest in the National Football League was 56 yards by Bert Rechichar of Baltimore Colts on Sept. 27, 1953.

Hope to Sign Flood

Senators Deal with Renegade

NEW YORK (AP) — Washington Senators owner Bob Short resumed contract negotiations today with renegade outfielder Curt Flood while speculation arose that baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn might announce a signing at a news conference.

"I'm sure we'll get this thing ironed out," Short said Wednesday night, referring to his attempts to add the controversial star to the roster of his American League club.

Flood is still engaged in a suit to overturn baseball's reserve clause, which binds a player to one club for life unless he is sold, traded or released.

He instituted the antitrust suit —backed by the Major League Players Association—when St. Louis traded him to Philadelphia. A federal judge ruled against Flood in the suit's first phase and an appeal is pending.

Short acquired the right to deal with Flood by trading a player to the Phils and agreeing to send them another if he can sign.

CURT FLOOD

Zuger Out Of Action

HAMILTON (CP) — As Hamilton Tiger-Cats head into Montreal and a do-or-die struggle with the Alouettes this weekend for first place in the Eastern Football Conference, quarterback Joe Zuger finds himself out of action for at least another 15 days on the injury reserve list.

Zuger, who broke his wrist in mid-season, was returned to the injury reserve list by coach Ron Restic who explained: "Zuger still can't throw the ball with any authority or for any great distance."

Zuger's loss until at least the EFC final means that Wally Gabler, obtained from Winnipeg Blue Bombers to fill in during Zuger's absence, will continue to quarterback the team he has led to three straight victories. His backup will be John Ekman.

Restic said that after 15 days, Zuger's status will be re-assessed. If the injury has not healed satisfactorily Zuger will go back on the injury-reserve list for another 15 days.

This he refused to join the Phillies and sat out the 1970 season. A federal judge ruled against Flood in the suit's first phase and an appeal is pending.

Short acquired the right to deal with Flood by trading a player to the Phils and agreeing to send them another if he can sign.

Kuhn's news conference was called to announce the details of the dividing up of World Series money—but rumors circulated that the commissioner would use the occasion to announce Flood's signing.

But a spokesman at Kuhn's office said he would be "very, very surprised if the commissioner makes any sort of announcement," stating that task would be up to Short.

He added that any contract, which Short and Kuhn have insisted would have nothing to do with Flood's suit and would not influence the case against baseball, would have to be approved by Kuhn.

Flood has contended he will not sign a contract unless the reserve clause is expunged—but Short, asked whether a contract offered Flood would contain the clause, replied: "I don't know what the contract will contain."

And the spokesman at the commissioner's office said Kuhn "definitely would not approve" a Flood pact without the clause.

Short, Kuhn's office and the players association all denied reports Wednesday that Flood had agreed to salary terms exceeding $80,000 a year.

But Short, noting that Philadelphia offered Flood more than $100,000," added: "My offer would be in that area."

McKinnis Makes Gamble Pay

CALGARY (CP) — Fullback Hugh McKinnis, a gamble for Calgary Stampeders at the start of the season, is a model rookie.

He likes to practise, saying "it's easy," and the leading rusher in the Western Football Conference was no exception right now to play in the National Football League.

When the 1970 campaign began, the Stampeders were in desperate need of the fullback with the retirement of veteran Ted Woods.

The scouting brains went to Arizona State University and found their man, but it wasn't McKinnis. It was team-mate Art Malone, a highly-touted running back quickly nabbed by Atlanta Falcons of the NFL.

McKinnis, known only as Malone's room-mate on Arizona's road games, was also a backup fullback for two years "and was lucky if I put in four full games during that time."

After losing Malone, the Stampeders continued their search for a fullback elsewhere. That's when an Arizona State coach called to remind the Stampeders they had passed up McKinnis.

"We were told McKinnis had potential to warrant a trial," said Calgary coach Jim Duncan. "After considering the time we spent trying to get Malone, we were willing to try anybody we thought had a chance."

McKinnis has undoubtedly been Calgary's brightest afterthought of the season.

With one full season of pro football, the 22-year-old has some distinguished credentials that point toward all-star status in the CFL:

—He leads the WFC and CFL in rushing with 1,111 yards on 197 carries. 196 yards ahead of runner-up Jim Evenson of British Columbia Lions.

—In 15 regular-season games, McKinnis has scored nine touchdowns, tops among rushers in the CFL.

If this isn't enough, coach Duncan has a few points to raise.

"He's got all the equipment —speed and size—to be a real superstar. You get the impression that he's going to pop out of the pack on just about every carry."

As a substitute replacement for Woods, McKinnis was not expected to become an overnight sensation.

"When you start out with a rookie you don't expect him to reach his peak for two or three years," Duncan said. "But McKinnis is certainly a pleasant surprise."

McKinnis, a native of Sharon, Pa., dropped out of college last year because he couldn't meet a requirement on his scholarship program. He becomes eligible for the NFL draft this summer.

Before his college career, he played as a tackle, halfback, linebacker and fullback in his midget and high school teams in Pittsburgh and Farrell, Pa., his hometown.

"I think I made the right decision by coming to Canada," said the six-foot, 214-pounder. "It's a great league . . . maybe someday I would like to play in the NFL but right now I'm satisfied."

McKinnis agrees with his wife Frieda that the CFL "is just as exciting as the NFL."

"Most of the quarterbacks in our league are just as good or better than they are in the NFL," McKinnis said. "I just wish that the league or somebody would publish more statistics about the CFL."

He keeps a scrapbook of his football accomplishments for posterity "so I can say I played a little ball."

Quinte halfback Ralph Lepore carries the ball as Trenton defenders Jeff Howard and Jack Wilton close in. The Saints won the regular season contest 25-5 and are hoping to repeat their success in tomorrow's Bay of Quinte championship. The defending COSSA champion Moira Trojans will face a stiff test from the unbeaten Centennial Chargers in the junior championship game at Moira.

Top High School Teams End Football Season with A Bang

The best in the Bay of Quinte area bang heads tomorrow afternoon in the final games of the high school football playoffs to decide the league champions.

The new playoff system instituted this year appears to have panned out well with the top teams in each division meeting for the championship. Senior play is slated to get under way at 2.30 p.m. at Quinte Secondary School where the Saints meet Trenton for the Bay of Quinte title.

Quinte finished their schedule unbeaten to give them a string of 14 consecutive wins in league play, and 38 wins in their last 40 Bay of Quinte contests.

"Everybody's healthy for this one," announced Quinte offensive coach Jack Sisson. "If we lose then we'll have nobody to blame but ourselves."

Trenton's only loss came at the hands of Quinte as they dropped a 28-5 decision to the Saints during the regular season. The Tigers topped a tough Moira defence 12-0 in their Tuesday playoff match, while Quinte was coasting to a runaway 53-0 rout of Napanee.

Trenton is far from having everyone healthy for the contest. Speedy flanker Duncan Armstrong missed the Moira game due to an injured wrist incurred playing hockey and it is not yet known whether or not he'll dress for the game. The Tigers suffered another major loss Tuesday, when safety Jeff Howard was injured in the third quarter of the game against Moira. "If Jeff isn't ready to play it's really going to hurt us, because he fills in at four different positions," winces coach Tom Nigro.

Both clubs boast fine running fullbacks, and should be relying heavily on their inside running.

Quinte heavyweight Paul Hall blasted enemy defences for 19 touchdowns this year and will undoubtedly come in for special attention from the Trenton defence.

One back sure to get plenty of attention from the tough Saint defensive squad will be Dan Dew, who picked up over 100 yards rushing the last time the teams met.

Where the Saints hold a definite advantage is in their passing attack. Rick Meagher, the small quarterback with the big throwing arm will provide a stiff test for the Trenton secondary.

Despite the 23 - point edge in the first meeting, Trenton are far from out of it. The Tigers held Quinte to only five points in the first half and the statistics were much closer than the score would indicate.

The junior contest shapes up as a real battle between two undefeated teams. Both the defending COSSA champion Trojans and Centennial's junior Chargers won their semi - final games by convincing margins.

Moira thumped the Quinte Juniors 52-0, while Centennial recorded a 32-0 blank ing BCI, who had played them to a 14-14 tie during the regular season.

Stocky halfback Bob Vandenwater provides most of the punch in Centennial's attack, while Peter Stallkovich and Dave Rutherford make the Trojan offence move.

Game time for the junior contest will be 2.30 p.m. at Moira.

Spokesman Says Religion, Labor Do Not Mix

TORONTO (CP) — Religion should be kept in the church and not permitted to enter into labor-management relations, a legislative committee studying proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act was told Wednesday.

Henry Kobryn of the Ontario Building and Trades Construction Trades Council was discussing an amendment that would permit a person who objects for religious reasons to joining a union as paying dues to pay an equal amount to a charity. The exemption would apply only to persons employed at the time of signing a collective agreement.

Mr. Kobryn said workers come into an industry knowing its union requirements. If some persons are exempt it would cause discontent among workers.

But Gerald Vandezande, president of the Christian Labor Association of Canada, said in a brief the clause does not go far enough.

He said workers who object to unions on religious grounds are not "free riders" or cheapskates but object to the struggle between socialism and capitalism.

He said about 10 workers at St. Joseph's Hospital in Chatham are being fired because they refuse to join a union.

In another brief, the Ontario council of the National House Builders' Association asked for flexible legislation that would provide for training construction workers skilled in a number of crafts.

The council said such training would help overcome construction labor supply shortages by enabling men to perform different jobs in sequence.

The council represents more than 700 builders and developers.

Cliff Pilkey (NDP—Oshawa) said Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures show the average wage for construction workers in Ontario last March was $145.

But a council member said DBS June figures place it at $178, including both union and non-union workers.

The house builders said they object to a clause in Bill 167 that would allow the Labor Relations Board to determine the appropriate geographic area for a bargaining unit.

Their brief said most high rise apartment construction in Metropolitan Toronto now is untouched but projects at places such as Burlington and Bowmanville remain basically non-union.

War Measures Alternative Concerns A-G

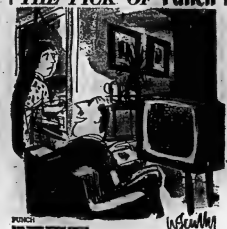
TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Wednesday he is concerned about proposed federal legislation that would supplant the War Measures Act for dealing with civil insurrection.

"I have very serious concern about the new measure, and I have expressed so to the minister of justice (at Ottawa)," Mr. Wishart told the Ontario legislature.

He did not elaborate, except to assure the house that he is prepared to "make comments" about his feelings to the legislature after the federal bill is introduced to Parliament.

Mr. Wishart, replying to New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis and James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia), said he has received a copy of the draft legislation which Ottawa intends to present to Parliament.

"I have seen it. I have examined it. I have given some opinion with regard to it."



He said the proposed legislation was sent to him last week from the office of the federal justice minister "on a confidential basis for examination, and the confidential area extends to this time and beyond."

Mr. Bullbrook asked for assurance that any substitute federal legislation would not infringe on the constitutional rights of the provinces.

Mr. Wishart said Parliament "may pass legislation without consultation of this house or any member, to whatever extent they see fit."

However, if any federal legislation proves to be unconstitutional "our recourse would be to test it in the courts."

Ads Propaganda Is Nixon Claim

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Wednesday accused the government of spending $400,000 in public money on "clever and professionally-produced propaganda" for political purposes under the guise of attracting industry to the province.

He said the advertising, using all media and billboards with the theme "Ontario! Is there any place you'd rather be!" is the work of Trade and Development Minister Stanley Randall and is "designed to make the Tory minister a little more acceptable to the people of Ontario when election time rolls around."

He told the Peterborough Liberal Association the commercials were "paid for by the citizens of Ontario on behalf of the ruling Conservative party."

He said Mr. Randall is an earlier campaign had spent $158,319 in a defence of the regional government system introduced by the provincial government "for which the municipal affairs minister has been roundly criticized in most areas of the province."

Mr. Nixon said other advertising campaigns designed to defend government policies which have come under attack were run by the health department and the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Text of his address was released to the press before delivery.

Seal-Liver Pills Recalled in U.S.—

WASHINGTON (AP) —The U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced today the first recall in the United States of a product contaminated with poisonous mercury—25,000 pills made from seal livers.

The FDA requested the recall in nine states after inspectors found mercury levels in the pills 60 times the safe level established in the U.S. for food: 0.5 parts a million. A half-part a million is comparable proportionately to a jigger of vermouth and a railway tank car full of gin.

The seal-liver pills were manufactured by Randal Nutritional Products, Sant Rosa, Calif., and are sold in health food stores as a blood builder and mild laxative.

The recall affects outlets in California, Washington, Oregon, Florida, Illinois, Oklahoma, Colorado, Michigan and New York.

An FDA scientist described the contaminated pills as a "possible, moderate health hazard."

The pills were fashioned from the livers of seals killed on the Pribilof Islands southeast of Alaska in 1964.

Randal freeze-dried the livers for storage and used them during the last six years to make 1,250,000 pills, the FDA said.

"Seal liver attracted my attention because it came from an animal most free of contamination," said Downing Randal, president of the company. "You can just figure from this that there isn't any place in the whole earth that isn't contaminated."

Dr. George Harry, director of the government's marine mammal biology laboratory in Seattle, said it is still not known how the seals became contaminated.

The seals, he said, migrate up and down the Pacific coast and possibly could have picked up mercury from industrial discharges.

"The seal contamination was the first finding of significant quantities of mercury in ocean fish and mammals, said Harry, "and it was startling."

Elevated amounts of mercury have been found in water, fish and game birds both in Canada and the U.S. Commercial fishing has been curtailed by th U.S. in some states because of mercury pollution, and by Canada in some sections of the Great Lakes and in several provinces.

Harry said the government is checking other ocean fish and mammals following the seal finding. Some instances of mercury contamination—he would not say how many—have been found in other species.

Mercury attacks the brain and central nervous system causing blindness, paralysis and insanity. It also damages such vital internal organs as the kidneys and liver.

Liberals Begin Nova Scotia Rule

HALIFAX (CP) — Pledged to social reform and greater industrial development the Liberal government of Premier Gerald A. Regan today begins plotting a new course for Nova Scotia.

The first Liberal administration in 14 years was sworn into office in a traditional ceremony at Government House Wednesday night and immediately vowed to "proceed with our program of a well-measured progressive reform. . . ."

The change of government came two weeks after the election in which the Liberals took 23 seats in the 46 seat house, the Progressive Conservatives 21 and the New Democratic Party two.

Former premier G. I. Smith said after the election he would wait until after the official count of votes before resigning. The official tabulations confirmed election night figures although five recounts remain to be completed.

Mr. Regan will assume chairmanship of the Nova Scotia Power Commission, a position also held by the premier in the former government.

Other members of cabinet include:

—Peter Nicholson, 51, a lawyer, minister of finance and economics and of education, has been a member of the legislature for Annapolis West since 1956. He was the opposition financial critic and served on most of the major house committees.

—Leonard Pace, 52, attorney-general and minister of labor, is a newcomer to politics. A senior partner in a Halifax law firm, he has served as chairman of the Nova Scotia Barrister's Society's legal aid committee.

—Garnet Brown, 39, minister of highways, was first elected to the Nova Scotia legislature in a byselection in 1960. He is president of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association.

—Dr. J. William Gillis, 33, minister of agriculture and municipal affairs and minister in charge of the Liquor Control Act. It is his first election to political office after serving as assistant professor of geology at St. Francis Xavier university in Antigonish, N.S.

—Allan E. Sullivan, 38, minister of welfare and mines, has practised law in Sydney, N.S., since 1956.

—Benoit Comeau, 54, minister of lands and forests and fisheries, is a mink rancher from Clare, N.S., first elected to the Nova Scotia legislature in 1967.

—Ralph Fiske, 29, minister of trade and industry and provincial secretary, is a motel operator in the New Glasgow area.

—D. Scott MacNeil, 32, minister of health and responsible for housing and human rights, was welfare director for Dartmouth, N.S.

The cabinet is one of the smallest in Nova Scotia history and has five fewer members than the Conservative administration.

Railwaymen Charge CP Disregards The Public

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Railway Labor Association charged CP Rail Wednesday with "deliberate, unsophisticated disregard for the public interest" in trying to reduce transcontinental passenger service.

Maurice Wright of Ottawa, counsel for the CRLA, told the Canadian transport commission that CP Rail will get out of passenger service altogether within five years if it is allowed to reduce service now.

Mr. Wright made his comments at the close of public hearings dealing with a CP Rail application to reduce service on its transcontinental train. The Canadian, increase fares and decrease the number of cars in each train.

"Not only do they ask to run the service into the ground but they tell you you'll have to pay them more to do it," Mr. Wright said.

CP Rail was ordered by the commission last June to produce a plan by which its current deficit on operation of the Montreal-Vancouver train could be reduced. The commission also refused an earlier application by CP Rail to discontinue The Canadian entirely.

The company responded with a proposal to cut the present daily transcontinental service to three times a week in fall, winter and spring.

In addition, the railway—part of the largest non-government corporation in Canada—applied to raise coach fares by 10 per cent and all-inclusive fares by 25 per cent.

CP Rail witnesses told the commission that the publicly-owned CNR had indicated it would raise its rates by a similar amount.

But J. F. Roberts, a CNR vice-president, told the commission Wednesday that while the 10-per-cent increase seemed reasonable for coach fares, CNR would not increase its all-inclusive fares by 25 per cent.

CP Rail will present its final arguments to the commission later in written form. The same procedure will be followed by the Ontario government, which also opposes the proposal.

Science Council of Canada Wants Resource Users to Pay

By KEN KELLY
Canadian Press Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Governments should insist that exploiters look before they leap into resource developments that may injure the environment, the Science Council of Canada says.

At least part of the cost of looking—studies to assess possible environmental effects of exploitation—should be paid by the exploiters.

A report to the federal government made public today by the council adds:

"Because this principle would be a departure from past government-entrepreneur relationships, it would require substantial study before implementation."

Nevertheless, says the council, governments could take an important immediate step by requiring that assessment of ecological consequences and proposals to limit harmful effects precede projects involving major environmental change.

The report, on fisheries and wildlife research, and a companion volume on forest resources research, was delivered to Prime Minister Trudeau Oct. 8.

The government appears to have acted on at least one recommendation by announcing plans for a department of the environment and renewable resources, under Fisheries Minister Jack Davis.

The council says resource scientists, sociologists and economists must be employed by such a department in a unified and rational approach to management of renewable resources.

It also gives high priority to creation of an environmental council of Canada to give immediate tangible evidence that governments recognize growing public concern.

The proposed body would enable an early start on assessing environmental problems "before they become a major national backache."

Mr. Davis and other federal ministers also have advocated establishment of such an agency in recent weeks.

The council calls on the government to set as a national goal "a stable and healthy environment at high ecological quality, maintained over the long term."

In the two reports, the council recommends:

—The federal government should start now to write a Canadian wildlife act and to negotiate changes to the British North America Act to remove barriers to the effective resource management.

—Research in government, universities and industry should be accelerated to solve coming forestry problems. A lead by Canada in research on forest harvesting and forest products uses would give a competitive advantage and a partial solution to anticipated raw wood shortages.

—With the present onset of international fisheries problems, an immediate policy stocktaking and analysis of scientific needs will pay off in protection and development of Canadian fisheries in the next 20 years.

—Studies are imperative on chemicals or other killers and the dynamics of life systems, if necessary at the expense of biological research, where research is as urgent as the pace of Arctic development.

The Last Duck Has Flown South

The last duck south from Belleville can leave any time now.

This morning, Kelly, the Labrador retriever owned by George Woodhouse fetched up a mallard from the estuary, carefully passing it to the Belleville - area conservationist.

Mr. Woodhouse clipped a metal band around the bird's leg and freed it — for Florida or thereabouts.

The band — identifying the bird's origin for conservationists — was all a little ticket for sommier winter climes.

It was also the end of the season's southbound migrants to be banded at the Woodhouse conservation pond at Elmwood Drive.

This year, Mr. Woodhouse estimates he has tagged close to 500 birds who dropped in at the sanctuary while heading away from Canada's approaching cold spell.

It's a project he's been conducting for nearly a decade, a one - man contribution to wildlife conservation in North America. The metal tags carried by southbound birds enables official agencies to keep track of migrants' totals and flight patterns.

Locally, the date is officially processed by the lands and forests department.

But, says Mr. Woodhouse, though the years he has received personal mail from people curious to learn about a man involved in such a project. Inquiries have come from such scattered points as Georgia, Louisiana and Quebec.

The mallard banded this morning may leave any day now, he says.

Not that its departure will leave the Woodhouse sanctuary empty of animal life.

Mr. Woodhouse also ministers to injured birds brought him by game wardens.

Several geese will stay the winter recuperating from injuries.

Then there's Kelly. The Labrador, of championship stock, recently added more than was expected to the score.

Mr. Woodhouse is still seeking purchasers for her eight pups.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: According to what you write in your column, and what I've seen on TV and elsewhere, it is important to "get early treatment for arthritis." Yet, when I spend all day in bed after all he says is: "Take aspirin. Just take aspirin. There's nothing else to be done."

I'd like to know what kind of arthritis I have. My fingers and hands have swollen; I have pains in my shoulder and in my back. Isn't there treatment to prevent further deterioration? When I ask my doctor to tell me what kind of arthritis I have, all I get is a dead-fish look. Where does one go? — Mrs. Y.

Comment: If all I ever got was a "dead-fish look" in response to a civil question about what was causing me any pain or discomfort I'd unhesitatingly ask for consultation.

Too many cooks may spoil the broth, but in medicine that's counterbalanced by another "cliche": Two heads are better than one.

I am sure your doctor will agree to getting another opinion. It is still true that early treatment of arthritis is important. First, it saves the patient unnecessary discomfort. Second, it may prevent complications, such as stiff joints and bent spine.

What you need to discover, Mrs. Y., is what kind of arthritis you have. The treatment for osteoarthritis may only require aspirin. Your doctor may be giving you all the treatment you need. But the question in your mind still remains: what kind of arthritis is it?

If it's gout, aspirin won't help. If it's rheumatoid arthritis, aspirin may not be sufficient treatment. If it's osteoporosis, you'll need more than aspirin. Early support with braces, for example, may prevent deformity.

There are scores of varieties of arthritis. Some are associated with certain skin diseases, others with systemic infections and disorders. Doesn't it seem sensible to discover the cause early? It's easy to stock up on aspirin and swallow it day after day, hoping the trouble will go away.

Therefore, in reply to your question, Mrs. Y., I suggest that you ask for consultation with an internist who is especially interested in treating arthritic diseases. He will help resolve your anxieties about what the real trouble is. Either your own doctor or the local hospitals will offer you the names of competent physicians who specialize in rheumatic diseases.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a condition in my hand which the doctor has diagnosed as carpal tunnel syndrome. This has affected my thumb and the two middle fingers. This came on suddenly after bowling. When I pick up something with weight to it, I get pain in the thumb. I have been to an orthopedist who verifies the diagnosis. Both agree that operation is necessary. Have you heard of this condition? — Mr. M.

Comment: Yes, "Carpal tunnel syndrome" is a distinct entity. Until lately, it has often been overlooked as a cause of symptoms such as yours. Operation often relieves unnatural pressure on the nerves and blood vessels in the wrist.

Your birthday today: A year begins of unflagging effort with surprisingly good results from normal use of your skills. You do many things that you are not accustomed to doing, although you are not likely to change professions now. Romantic experience comes in brief, poignant episodes rather than a steady relationship that could be taken for granted. Today's natives are candid in their statements, tireless in their work once they have decided on a goal.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Now is the time to get agreement on joint or marital financial matters. Take full advantage of a chance for better earnings. Let the evening be sociable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Today the keyword is co-operation — give and receive both on the tougher problems. Sharing of resources can reduce expenses. Mull over your progress this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): If you start early and concentrate on one line of action, you can obtain amazingly good advice and a fresh opportunity. Gather friends for a lighthearted evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your own affairs and the needs of children crowd out a lot of work routines. Creative enterprises promise good developments. Romantic interests blooms suddenly.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Look at your decisions; discover ways of improving matters. You find your ideas are guidelines for several other people. Compare notes, organize group projects.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Good news is on the way. People arriving today for the first time turn out to be rather important in your future. Do your share to enhance your community.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Don't allow optimism and a happy coincidence tempt you into unusual risks. The conservative, fact-checking approach brings about very useful agreements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Move early to get what is most important, with no time out for games. Plenty of co-operation is available, but you may have to make serious deals to get very far.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Make an effort to square differences with organized groups. Try to find fresh opportunity for your talents. Begin new diet regimes, better health habits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): In the conflict between pleasure and work, a special reward is gained by filling your commitments. Some secret hope is nearer reality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): As long as you think and act on the facts, your work is quite productive. Present requests, applications for better conditions. Exert yourself efficiently; get results now.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): The actions of outsiders inadvertently show you new approaches to obnoxious nuisances. Seek expert advice. Concentrate on personal projects wherever your work permits.

CYC Director Resigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Vidal, the brusque Montrealer who once said Parliament did not know what it was doing when it created the Company of Young Canadians, is resigning as executive director of the CYC.

The resignation, announced Wednesday by Slats Secretary Gerard Pelletier, may herald a new era for the battered 1966 creation of Lester Pearson.

Mr. Vidal's successor is Dal Brodhead, 29, one of the CYC's first field volunteers. He has survived four years of association with the CYC unsullied by its frequent troubles.

Mr. Vidal is leaving at the expiry of a two - year contract marked by explosive quarrels, suspicion, accusations, a parliamentary inquiry, trusteeship, reorganization, and in recent months, quiet.

The company, which Mr. Pearson predicted in 1966 would soon have 2,000 volunteers on the road, never had more than 300 and currently has 85.

A spokesman said Wednesday another 100 may be in the field by next March and a number of new projects, especially in the Maritimes, are planned.

Mr. Vidal was appointed director by Mr. Pelletier in late 1968. Because of the CYC's legal structure, he ran into trouble with both the governing council and the volunteers.

When he tried to implement financial controls, he was either ignored or called a bureaucrat. One critic said he was trying to turn the CYC into a "defanged paper tiger."

A year ago, Montreal authorities said the CYC was being used as a front for subversive activities and urged a royal commission inquiry.

A parliamentary inquiry found the CYC had been used in Montreal "as a base for acts of subversion, violence and illegality."

It recommended a complete reorganization to give the executive director more control and to make the company financially responsible to Parliament.

The CYC was put into trusteeship for three months while new legislation was drafted. Meanwhile, many of its projects were ended and volunteers dropped.

Mr. Brodhead, member of the highly-praised Alert Bay, B.C., Indian project in 1966, became chairman of the new council last April.

His credentials include a political science degree from McGill University and employment as a community development consultant with the Ontario education department. Mr. Pelletier said he is eminently qualified to steer the CYC in its new direction.

Mr. Vidal, meanwhile, is retiring to the language bureau of the public service commission.

Bonnie on Way To Scrapyard

HALIFAX (CP) — The aircraft carrier Bonaventure is on her way to an Oriental scrapyard, but her last skipper hopes Canada will have another flattop some day.

Cmdr. H. W. Vondette was one of those who watched Wednesday as Canada's only carrier was towed from Halifax harbor.

He said he agreed with the government's decision to let the ship go when defence cuts had to be cut, but he hoped Canada would obtain another carrier in the future.

"The aircraft carrier is not a thing of the past."

The Bonaventure was the nucleus of Canada's anti-submarine force after she joined the fleet more than 13 years ago. As she was towed away for the last time, she was watched by a quiet gathering that included many of the men who served in her.

"My feelings were predominantly sad ones," said Cmdr. Vondette. The ship "meant so much to so many people in the navy."

HMC Dockyard here, historic Citadel Hill overlooking the harbor and other vantage points in both Halifax and Dartmouth were lined with residents who turned out to watch the 20,000-ton carrier.

The Japanese tug Fuji Maru headed for the Mitsui scrap yards in Formosa. The voyage around the Cape of Good Hope is expected to take a little more than 90 days.

Delays in tenders and a long wait for the tug prolonged the Bonnie's stay here. She was decommissioned last spring.

The Bonaventure's keel was laid in November, 1943, at Harland and Wolff shipyards in Belfast, Northern Ireland. She was marked for service in the Royal Navy, but when the Second World War ended in 1945, soon after her launching, the Royal Navy ordered that work on her stop.

In 1952, the Royal Canadian Navy purchased the Bonaventure's hull and machinery and ordered construction work resumed. The ship was commissioned in the Canadian navy in 1957.

The ship was called a light fleet class carrier when she was commissioned, but later she was classified as an anti-submarine warfare carrier. She carried about 1,000 officers and men.

The ship carried Banshee jets and propeller-driven Tracker anti-submarine aircraft during her first years in the navy, but in 1962 the Banshees were taken out of service and the Boncie carried Trackers and anti-submarine aircraft.

The closest the carrier came to action was in 1964 when she carried 95 Canadian soldiers and their equipment to join a United Nations peacekeeping force on war-torn Cyprus.

Although lacking action, she was no stranger to controversy. In March, 1969, members of the Commons public accounts committee visited Halifax to investigate the reasons for the high cost of her "mid-life" refit.

The refit cost $13 million and members of the committee described as "shocking" the cost estimates provided by the federal defence production department.

Her last operational duty was exercise Maplespring in the Bahamas last winter where she served as a support vessel. She returned to Halifax, was decommissioned, stripped of all serviceable supplies and left to wait for a buyer.

The government sold the Bonnie to Vancouver businessman N. W. Kennedy for slightly more than $750,000. She was destined for the scrap yards.

As the tow left the harbor Wednesday, another era was in its birth. The hydrofoil Bras d'Or was conducting foil tests. The 200-ton vessel has reached a speed of 60 knots in test runs navy vessel in the world.

RC School Supporters Confront Their Board

Superintendent Suspension Causes Rift

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A group of separate school ratepayers last night accused Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board of plotting the ouster of suspended superintendent, F. B. Allore.

At an emotion-charged meeting of the board in St. Michael's Academy auditorium, witnessed by more than 100 spectators, spokesman James Tobin presented a brief on what is becoming known as "the Allore situation."

The brief claimed that the board chose "inefficiency" as its reason for the superintendent's suspension, and gave six reasons it alleges the board cited for the suspension.

After hearing the 12-page presentation, board chairman E. J. Buckley said Mr. Tobin's brief gave "a lucid pattern of what happened".

The brief outlined the events at a board meeting May 7, "called in order that Mr. Allore might hear the charges against him", which resulted in the suspension.

Mr. Tobin invited interested persons to ask to see the minutes of the meeting.

But Mrs. Douglas Boyle, another spokesman for the group calling for Mr. Allore's reinstatement, told reporters later that there are no minutes of the meeting and trustees refuse to let ratepayers listen to a tape recording of the session.

According to the brief, Mr. Allore when asked to tender his resignation asked trustees to call in a management consultant firm to investigate his handling of school board affairs.

"If the results of such a study indicate my developing managerial skills to be inadequate, and that charges presented here tonight have any validity, then I shall consider alternatives," Mr. Allore is reported to have said according to his supporters.

The reasons attributed to the board for Mr. Allore's suspension as presented in the brief are:

—A continuing lack of academic supervision.

—Financial implications in the pupil-teacher ratio into which the board found itself.

—Inadequate department of education reports.

—Underemployment of facilities at Georges Vanier School.

—Constant disregard of employment and personnel practices.

—Constant and growing disability on Mr. Allore's part to get along with the second line staff.

The board chairman clung to his previously expressed position that details of the suspension must be held in confidence "until such time as a mutual release of the information was agreed upon"

He read a brief prepared in answer to questions polled by a delegation at meetings Sept. 23 and Oct. 7.

Pending a decision by the minister of education, he said, the board will continue to remain silent on the matter, unless authorized in writing by Mr. Allore to release the information to the public.

The matter has been in the hands of the department of education in Toronto since Oct 7, which must ratify or overrule the board's suspension decision before the "Allore situation" is settled.

"We had hoped to have an answer from a rulint from the department of education to bring to you tonight." Mr. Buckley told the group.

But Mrs. Boyle interjected to say the department might not give a ruling and the matter might be taken to court "a t great extra cost tothe ratepayers".

Krozse, Paul Wall and chairman Buckley formed a peace group to visit trustees in their home to organize the suspension of the superintendent.

The brief presented by Mr. Tobin said that "we know three members of this board have constituted a pressure group and conceivably others have fallen into a regrettable line of action".

This was denied by Mr. Buckley, and several spectators rose to apply the term "pressure group" to the delegation of ratepayers presenting the brief.

"This board has been subjected to pressure the like of which I have never seen before," said Mr. Buckley. "this board must weigh facts, not emotions. To change decision there must be new facts."

During the "town hall type meeting", trustee Paul Mercier walked out after a confrontation with Mr. Tobin but later returned: former trustee Neil Robertson of Trenton rose from the audience to say that as far as he was concerned Mr. Allore "was not a good administrator, he couldn't cut the mustard", and Rev. H. J. Maloney of Bancroft said Mr. Allore should be approached to allow release of details of the suspension because "it is wrong that the people should remain puzzled about the "cloud over his (Mr. Allore's) head".

SEPARATE SCHOOL

Allore Statement

Suspended separate school superintendent F. B. Allore this morning denied that he had made a commitment with the school board to hold in confidence the details surrounding his suspension.

In a statement to The Intelligencer, he said, "I have made no agreements with the Hastings-Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board to withhold any information about the methods used and the reasons for the suspension of May 8, 1970.

"It is my conviction that all these facts must be made known and that any innuendoes must be supported with valid evidence.

"There is an obligation that this board issue to me, as well as to the public, the original charges with supporting evidence.

"To date this has not been done.

"It is a Christian and proper management responsibility that should be fulfilled."

Treason, Sedition

May Charge Detainees

MONTREAL (CP) — Authorities are considering formal charges on offences as serious as treason against persons detained under anti-terrorist laws while police pursue more suspected members and supporters of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

"Sedition and treason exist," Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said in an interview Thursday night. "Those are the articles that could be used, but I don't have each name (of those to be charged) in my head."

He was commenting on an Ottawa report that some of those detained in roundups during the last weeks would be charged with treason and sedition, others with sedition alone. Informed sources there said "the wheat is being separated from the chaff."

Both are charges under the Criminal Code, treason carrying a maximum penalty of death or life in prison and sedition up to 14 years in prison.

Figures released by police show eight more released, leaving 132 in custody. In all, 465 persons have been picked up and 275 freed since Ottawa proclaimed emergency search-and-arrest powers under the War Measures Act, Oct. 16.

Any persons held since the first sweep that Friday morning must be charged or released by Nov. 6 under orders prodgated by Mr. Choquette, responsible for administering the special federal powers in Quebec.

The powers of search and arrest without warrants were proclaimed after FLQ terrorists kidnapped British Trade Commissioner James Richard Cross Oct. 5 and Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister, five days later. Mr. Laporte's body was found Oct. 18, two days after proclamation of the special powers. He had been strangled.

Premier Robert Bourassa said Thursday night that police were still trying to verify the authenticity of a purported FLQ message found in Montreal two nights earlier. If genuine, it would be the first such message known since a note from Mr. Cross and his captors Oct. 18.

Mr. Bourassa said the government's two-week-old offer of safe conduct to Cuba for the kidnappers in return for Mr. Cross still stands. The FLQ had sought the release of imprisoned colleagues for Mr. Cross.

The premier also outlined at a news conference the developments he said had prompted him to ask Ottawa to proclaim special measures to deal with a threat of insurrection.

"Several hundreds persons" might have become active terrorists had the government yielded to the FLQ demands or failed to act by requesting federal troops and special powers, he said.

Police also had information that FLQ cells were well organized and well equipped. Mr. Bourassa also cited new thefts of dynamite and the existence of a four-step terrorist program of demonstrations, bombings, kidnappings and finally "selective assassinations."

The premier said authorities had received information that the FLQ planned "an assassination every 48 hours," although the authenticity of the information was regarded as highly doubtful.

Mr. Bourassa said he could not go into more detail of his reasons for asking for federal help because he did not want to interfere with police work.

The premier denied reports that there were disagreements within his cabinet or his Liberal

Missing Bags Full of Danger

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Belleville City Police have launched a concentrated search for 83 one-pound bags of explosive taken in a break-in from a shed behind Lecithin Products Ltd. at 48 Dundas Street West.

The break-in was discovered today and could have happened at any time since Tuesday.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning that the one-pound bags contained benzoyl peroxide, a powdery chemical.

Police are searching for any information that might lead to the recovery of the explosives because of their dangerous properties.

So far, two bags of the unstable chemical have been recovered and in both cases, schools and young people were involved, increasing police concerns.

Chief Crosbie said the bags look like coffee bags and are white in color with the texture of the containers a little heavier than their coffee counterparts.

"Veepo Dry" is written across the packages with statements that the chemical compound is a dangerous explosive.

Simple friction can explode the chemical compound, police said, after checking on the properties of the powder with a chemist.

Heat or shock or any other contact with the compound can cause it to explode. It cannot be ground or it may cause it to blow up. It cannot be contained with readily - oxidized materials for the same reason.

Lecithin plant manager, Glenn Hill, said that if someone dropped it, the shock might set it off."

Mr. Hill said that the explosives had been kept in 50-pound boxes, with the one-pound bags inside.

The chemist also told the police that the only safe thing that can be done with the chemical is to bury it or return it to the manufacturer.

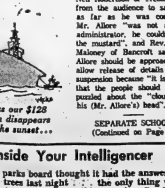
The chemist explained that the chemical is used as curing agent in cement in very small quantities.

Concern has been increased because the two bags found so far have been found near schools, the second bag located in the Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public Schoolyard.

Police became aware of the chemical's presence in the city when two juveniles were checked yesterday by police and found in possession of one of the bags at Queen Mary Public School.

The youths were checked before police actually became aware of the theft of the 85 pounds of the explosive.

The two youths took police to an old shack near Sir Mackenzie Bowell School and Centennial Secondary School where the second bag of the chemical was discovered.



Police Safety Officer, Robert Hall, is at present visiting Belleville's schools to warn children and young people of the dangers of the chemical.

"We're not concerned so much as to who stole them," Chief Crosbie said, "we're more concerned about getting them back".

Radio Station CJBQ has been broadcasting warnings about the explosive since this morning. So far public response has been minimal.

Company officials explained that the shed had been broken into once before, but no explosive was taken. A circle of oil drums was situated in front of the damaged shed to prevent entry.

This morning the remaining material in the shed was removed to an enclosed storage room.

Ratepayers Refute Six Charges They Say Leveled Against Allore

Charges reported to be made by the separate school board in support of its suppression of superintendent F. B. Allore were outlined and answered last night in a brief presented to the board by James Tobin, spokesman for a ratepayer's group.

A summary of the charges and the replies in the brief follow.

Item: there was continuing lack of academic supervision.

Answer: The administration is aware of the need of supervision, wanted to hire a qualified assistant, and when one became available the board rejected him. If the superintendent had had a trained and experienced business administration staff, he would have been able to pursue academic supervision.

Item: Financial implications in the pupil - teacher ratio into which we've allowed to drift.

Answer: Pupil - teacher ratios can range from 15 to 29 to 1. In a school near Ottawa comparable to St. Michael's, the ratio is 15 to 1: St. Michael's is 26 to 40 to 1.

With what established provincial norms did the board compare the pupil-teacher ratio and was the board so pre-occupied with financial aspects that it neglected the children as well as reasonable and desirable goals?

Item: There were inadequate department of education files on reports.

Answer: If there were inadequacy in this area, the department itself would make the complaint. (The brief called for code name and number of inadequately completed forms and asked if mistakes could have been made by a member of the administration other than Mr. Allore.)

Item: There was underemployment of facilities at Georges Vanier School.

Answer: The school had been in operation little more than seven months when the complaint was lodged, visitors and other educators were agreeably pleased with what they saw. Some board members may not fully understand the nature of special education, nor the need to provide for future requirements.

Item: There was a constant disregard of employment and personal practices.

Answer: Six months passed between the superintendent's development of a policy booklet and the date it was adopted by the board. It is the practice of other boards to allow the chief executive officer discretionary powers in this area in the absence of a complete register of policy.

Item: There was a constant and growing disability on Mr. Allore's part to get along with second line staff.

Answer: When the conduct of certain members of the administrative staff appeared to be contributing to disorder, Mr. Allore held conferences with these members. The chairman privately and individually and without the superintendent's knowledge, contacted these people, adding further to their sense of answering to no other than the chairman. The brief queried the reason for the chairman's not insisting that these two employees follow a legitimate grievance procedure.

Separate School Board Conflict

Mrs. Boyle told the meeting that two board members supported the superintendent during the suspension discussions and asked trustee Robert Lacy and Msgr. J. P. Sullivan to speak.

Mr. Lacy called himself "the lone dissenter" to the board's decision and outlined his reason, adding that Mr. Allore's "academic background did not provide the man with business administration background".

"This situation is not one of the board or superintendent's making; it is prevalent across the province," he said. "It's what was built in dependence on the quantities of Mr. Allore in setting up the new district board. Many trustees entered the system with an attitude of change. To further complicate the situation, we ran into teacher negotiation troubles, financial complications, the release of the business administrator and emotions. The list could run on. Mr. Allore's dismissal. I personally felt he did his utmost under extenuating circumstances. I stood alone and supported him."

Msgr. Sullivan was called to speak by Mrs. Boyle, and responded by withdrawing his notice of motion of a month ago calling for reinstatement of the superintendent.

Msgr. Sullivan said he had made the reinstatement move in light of the department of education's expressed reluctance to take action, because of the interest of the people and the disadvantage the educational system was in because of lack of a superintendent.

"The positions of this board are polarized," he said. "To prevent the motion at this time would further polarize the situation and jeopardize the department's decision when rendered."

In response to repeated statements by Mrs. Boyle that she "believed Mr. Allore has always wanted this made public," a ratepayer asked for proof of Mr. Buckley's contention that the issue was to remain confidential.

Mr. Buckley read pertinent sections from a paper he said he outlined the conditions under which Mr. Allore would agree to resign — and the facts of negotiations between him and the board that continued all summer.

The sections read by Mr. Buckley called for "expunging" all records pertaining to the suspension of F. B. Allore from the records, except for one specific report, and for a joint press release when negotiations concluded. All tape recordings were to be destroyed.

Mr. Buckley asked the ratepayers to forward a copy of their brief to the department of education in Toronto, because the entire issue is now in the hands of the minister. "He is the referee."

Mr. Buckley said Mr. Allore, the ratepayers and the trustees had all met with department officials.

A woman in the audience asked Mrs. Boyle the identity of the ratepayers who visited four officials of the department of education in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Boyle replied, "No comment", and referred further inquiries of the same nature from ratepayers and the press with the statement that she wished to keep "confidential" the identities of the members of the delegation and the officials they met. She gave no reason for refusing comment.

Conversation Works Both Ways

Linda Robbins steers group conversation in sign language at Ontario School for the Deaf last night. Since conversation is a two-way flow students must not only learn how to make signs but how to read them.

Citizens Learning Sign Language

Personal communication can be a social problem in the most normal circumstances.

For the deaf, it's a difficulty with an added, built-in handicap.

Now, a project aimed at easing the situation is under way in Belleville — and it involves people with normal hearing.

It's a weekly class in sign language organized by Colin Robbins, teacher at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

The sessions opened 1 a.t night at the OSD and will run into next June — by which time, hopefully, it will have produced some more persons at large who can easily and efficiently communicate with the deaf.

Such a proficiency is a widespread need — particularly in the Belleville area as the size of the OSD, Mr. Robbins says. The more persons so skilled, the easier the social contact for the deaf.

"If more people were interested (in learning sign language) then it doesn't make the deaf an isolated group," said Mr. Robbins, "it means there are hearing people interested in their social activities and needs."

Opening night registration at the class reflected, if not general public interest, at least concern from a wide range of community sources.

The group included a clergyman, teachers and people with relatives who are deaf.

The idea was first launched last year by OSD teacher Rerner Rawlings, who now has left Belleville. Mr. Robbins decided to carry on the project.

Its appeal was marked by the fact that among last night's students were some from the first course — returned to take more advanced lessons.

Among them was Rev. Sid Bates, a United Church clergyman from Norwood, who now officiates at a weekly interdenominational church for the deaf in Peterborough—the only one of its kind in Ontario outside Toronto.

Mr. Bates also indicates the social needs of the deaf do not receive sufficient attention.

His church, which draws an attendance of about 30 deaf people, "is more or less overlooked."

Learning the deaf alphabet and sign language is merely a matter of concentration Mr. Robbins says. The problem for student conversationalists is not so much learning how to make sign language, but how to read the signs correctly.

council after the Cross kidnapping.

He challenged reporters to find "one statement, one word from a minister" indicating dissension.

While the premier insisted that he had to ask for troops and special powers from Ottawa in the face of "important, serious dangers," public criticism of his action and the war-measures act regulations continued Thursday.

The separatist Parti Quebecois defeated 500,000 copies of a party newspaper in which leader Rene Levesque calls for an end to the war-measures regulations and Jacques Parizeau, president of the party's executive council, writes that "now can see the continuation of a fight to death which the federal government has decided in recent times to wage against Quebec."

For the second night running Thursday, a university teach-in heard a succession of speakers denounce the war measures act.

But Frank Scott, McGill university law professor and civil rights campaigner, said in an interview that Ottawa must retain the powers of the War Measures Act in reserve while mobilizing the security of Oct. 16 regulations.

Claude Ryan, publisher of Montreal Le Devoir, denied in an editorial reports published elsewhere that he had worked toward or suggested a provisional government for Quebec at the height of the crisis.

He said he had discussed the possibility of a provisional government in a professional sense in "a free examination" of possible implications of the kidnapping, including what might develop should the Bourassa government be unable to cope.

Parks Board Suggests It Opt Out of Fairground Management

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Technically the parks board is the owner of the Belleville fairgrounds and as such acts in the role of "landlord", but would be prepared to opt out from any participation in Exhibition Park management.

This was the feeling expressed yesterday at a joint meeting of the city parks board and recreation and arena committee when the two bodies considered a request to submit proposals on the composition of a proposed single board of management for the fairgrounds.

Currently, while the exhibition park grounds are owned by the parks board, several other organizations, including the Belleville Agricultural Society, the Quinte Driving and Riding Club, the Belleville Curling Club and the Lawn Bowling Club have vested interests in grounds facilities.

The result has been that something less than harmonious feelings have crept up between the various organizations and an exhibition park planning committee has recommended the formation of one body for overall management.

Each of the organizations with interests in the grounds has been asked to submit proposals for the composition of a single board of management and to make recommendations for the future use of the grounds.

During the past summer the parks board had an investigative report done of the exhibition park and its background and formation of a single board of management was one of the recommendations.

But last night parks chairman Alderman Paul Russell and member Donald Templeman wondered whether the parks board should not be completely out of the fairgrounds.

They pointed out that the so-called exhibition park played but little actual role in the city's park system.

Parks superintendent Lloyd Syer said the people or board which could run the exhibition park in the best interests of the city should be the ones to do it.

"If it means a separate board, let's have it," he said. "If it doesn't work it could be washed out."

Such a board however would have to be responsible to the city, he said.

Recreation committee chairman Ald. Donald Soutter, and recreation director Lorne Williams foresaw no insurmountable difficulty in protecting recreation committee interests at the fairgrounds.

And Mr. Templeman suggested there would be no problem in protecting the board's interest if the parks board pulled out of fairgrounds operation.

Under the present arrangement the parks board as "land lord" looks after some maintenance at the grounds but provides no actual parks function.

The parks board, agricultural society and driving club all contribute in some way to maintenance.

The recreation department program events at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium which is owned by the city.

Last night the board passed a recommendation expressing a desire to be out of any exhibition park management on condition that city interests were protected.

Accordingly the board felt it an inopportune time to make any recommendation as to the possible future use of the exhibition grounds.

Split Vote Endorses Proposal To Refuse Almo Zoning Request

The city parks board and the recreation and arena committee have given conditional endorsation to a Belleville and Suburban Planning Board recommendation to refuse an application for rezoning in the north end Park Village area, but only over the objection of both committee chairmen.

The application by Almo Developments was for rezoning north of Cascade Blvd. to allow for construction of apartment blocks in an area now zoned single family residential.

The planning board recommendation was before city council three weeks ago but was referred back to that body for reconsideration and also to the two city bodies.

The parks motion yesterday noted that a study was now under way regarding land use in the area and suggested that the board be prepared to reconsider its recommendation for refusal when the matter was clarified.

The motion asked that if city council ultimately agrees to the rezoning request that the board be satisfied with respect to park requirements be applied.

Planning Board staff recently completed a development study for what is termed the West Park Village Community setting out land use for the various areas.

Sufficient park area was indicated for existing zoning, but parks board members were not convinced that this would be the case if higher density construction was granted.

Planning director Bert Kenny said that if rezoning was allowed the entire study would have to be reconsidered.

City council decided against immediate approval of the planning board recommendation when it was pointed out that for financial reasons there was a diminishing demand for single family housing.

The same feeling was expressed at yesterday's parks board meeting but a motion from recreation and arena committee chairman Ald. Donald Soutter failed to get a seconder.

Aldermen Paul Russell, who was in the chair at the time of Ald. Soutter's motion, later said he would not be able to support the board recommendation when the matter came back to city council.

Board members were told that Almo Developments would present its case for rezoning to the planning board.

Until this presentation was completed, board members didn't want to make a flat yes or no reply to the re-zoning application.

The board went along with the premise that the West Park Village Community Study be the basis for the official plan for that area.

It agreed that parks should be provided, where possible, in accordance with the standards proposed in the parks planning study, and within the city limits the parks policy as adopted June 9, 1969 should apply.

It also suggests that the same policy should apply in the Sidney township section of the community.

Where possible school sites and park sites should be adjacent in order to make more and better use of the open space and also accommodate the "community school concept."

In another motion the parks board recommended to city council that negotiations be entered into with the county school board for the sale of city industrial owned land south of Treacy Street for the purpose of school construction and that it be developed in cooperation with the school board under the community school concept.

Development Back with Planners

Belleville's more than 32,000 citizens are apparently not particularly interested in what facilities are provided in the East Zwicky Island Park.

Over the next decade the city parks board must be faced with spending up to a quarter of a million in the development of the sanitary land fill area east of Bay Bridge Road as a bayfront park. As a result, the board last summer invited suggestions from citizens as to what facilities might be provided.

But to say the least the response wasn't exactly overwhelming.

The only written comment received was from a citizen who suggested that East Zwick's Island would be a good site for a new arena.

Another citizen phoned to suggest that a miniature farm resembling one in Toronto be considered while another resident suggested a golf course.

Last night the city parks board received staff proposals and recommendations for development of the park but before any final decisions are made the matter will be more thoroughly discussed.

Consultants Johnson, Sustronk, Weinstein and Associates have proposed a three-stage development for the park area and in a concept diagram have outlined such activities as lawn bowling, tennis, swimming pool, a nine-hole par golf course, docking for boats and a possible toboggan hill for winter sports.

A club house and parking would also be provided.

It has been suggested that the railway display now at the Zwick's Centennial Park be moved to the triangle east of the CPR overpass.

But Board member Donald Templeman, who has been in on the park planning proposals for several years, says finances will in all probability preclude any major developments for some time.

For the time being he can't see much wrong with simply grading and seeding the area to provide some place for people to walk.

Mr. Templeman questioned the immediate need of a par three golf course at the Island noting that other playing facilities are being provided in the area.

And he was adamantly opposed to moving the railway display to the east side park area.

He said he liked trains but was opposed to any more being placed at the Island.

"The only place the railway exhibit should be moved is back to the station where it belongs," he said.

City garbage is still being dumped at the East Zwick's Island site but this is expected to be discontinued at the end of the year when garbage will go to a private site in Sidney township.

Parks Board chairman Paul Russell said, however, that all fill possible would be needed for development of the park.

Parks Board Plans Snowmobile Policy

Many of the city's parks are going to be off limits for snowmobile operators this winter and for some of the others a night time curfew is likely to be in force.

That was the indication last night at a parks board meeting when a list of proposed "off limit" parks was proposed.

Signs are proposed for erection at the parks where snowmobiling is to be forbidden, with city council to be asked to pass covering bylaws both for the signs and for the proposed curfew.

One board member said last winter complaints were received of snowmobiles roaring around Stanley Park at two in the morning.

TV-Radio-Mail Courses for 'Great Unused Reservoir'

Britain's 'Open University' Will Cater to Dropouts

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Bletchley, England (AP) — Students will rarely be seen and seldom heard on Britain's newest university campus 80 miles north of London.

This is the new Open University, once described as "one of the bravest and most controversial adventures in British education this century."

It will open in January with 25,000 students who will hear their lectures on television or radio, receive their assignments by mail, do their studying at home and take their final examinations at regional centres.

Those who complete their courses successfully will receive bachelor of arts degrees.

Open University students will be scattered about Britain from Aberdeen to Bournemouth.

Administration buildings are still under construction on 70 acres of green farm land outside Bletchley.

The new institution was conceived and designed during the Labor government for former prime minister Harold Wilson. The Conservative government has given the university its blessing.

No academic qualifications or secondary school diplomas are required for entrance. The school was planned for "dropouts" in a country where only a quarter of the children remain in school after the age of 16.

Britain, with two of the world's most famous universities in Oxford and Cambridge, has only 46 universities for a population of 55 million. There are only 220,000 university students and another 350,000 studying in teachers' colleges or technical schools which do not award degrees.

Under the existing system, for all its expansion, misses and leaves aside a great unused reservoir of human talent and potential," says Leol Crowther, the first chancellor of the new university.

The university was opened for applications in January. Within three months there were 25,000 applications and 42,811 when registration closed in August.

Using a computer, the university allocated 25,000 students for the first year's studies on the basis of their regional location, their occupations and the courses they wanted.

For the first year, four lines are available: mathematics, science, arts and social science. Technology and education studies will be offered in 1972.

After the first year, advanced courses will be available. A student taking two years a year could obtain his BA in three years. Completion of six courses is required for a degree.

In addition to the weekly television and radio classes and the tuition by correspondence mailed to students, there will be summer periods of about two weeks in the regions and some "face-to-face" teaching at study centres throughout the country on evenings or weekends.

A student earning his BA degree in three years will pay about $360 in tuition and fees for it.

The university now has a staff of 400, including 180 teachers, and more will be added.

'Open' University

Bletchley, Bucks. (Buckinghamshire) is one of those combinations of names in England which somehow go well together. Could it be that this augurs well for the bold British experiment in education described elsewhere on this page — the Open University for dropouts which opens in the Bletchley area in January.

The idea of an educational establishment for dropouts, aimed at giving them the same opportunities in life as those who go to traditional universities, or at least upgrading their knowledge and skills, is an inspired one. Its progress will be watched with the keenest interest in other parts of the world, and no more so than here in Ontario where there is similar untapped human resource going to waste for lack of initiative. Youth needs motivation, we are told, and no more so than today when jobs are scarce for young people leaving school and many are disenchanted with what they see of adult society. What more effective way to harness their latent talents than by such a venture as this.

Imagine too a university where the student body is scattered throughout the country, lectures by television or radio and assignments by mail. Since there will be 25,000 students, eliminated will be the overcrowding, the tension, the politicking and plotting which traditionally — and today more than ever — has been a feature of university life, with what disastrous consequences are now apparent around the world.

That is not to say of course that we should immediately replace the traditional university with establishments in the same mold as this one at Bletchley, Bucks. There may be a "Big Brother" in atmosphere to such a college, a loneliness and alienation among students studying in isolation, as they will be, which could create a different set of problems. That is why its progress will be watched so closely. After all, television has been used in the schools in Canada, but we seem to recall reading that there is not the same rapport between students and the TV lecturer that there is when the latter is in the same room with his class.

Nevertheless, here is an experiment in education that deserves to succeed. We hope it does, and that the desired end of a more educated society will materialize.

School Garb

It is a sorry day when schools become involved in the what-to-wear issue, especially among the girls. We would like to think that as long as the kids come clean and tidy, then the schools are free to perform their main function of imparting education.

But Loyalist Collegiate in Kingston has just such a hassle at the moment. The school forbids the wearing of slacks, so when 25 girls showed up in this garb the other day Principal J. G. Linscott called a school forum.

The meeting lasted two-and-a-half hours during which Mr. Linscott made the rather strange (in the circumstances) remark about confrontation (in this case the wearing of slacks by the girls) "serves only to disrupt the functions of the school."

We wonder who is confronting whom, particularly since Mr. Linscott also said that "the general rule is to dress in a manner suitable for the occasion. Slacks have not been allowed on most school days, more by custom than by rule, through past discussions among students and staff."

All of which leaves room for doubt and equivocation among the students, but this is the Kingston school's problem. The word is that there is going to be a referendum among the students, with the approval of school authorities, and that this will serve as a guide to future modes of dress.

An Ottawa school has had a similar confrontation in recent weeks. Dresses and skirts had been the norm for girls at Brookfield High. Then a petition was presented to the principal and now, according to The Ottawa Journal, "any form of presentable 'dress' will be permitted." The result is that 90 per cent of the girls are wearing pants and jeans. It seems they used to wear them in winter anyway, for warmth, then changed into dresses or skirts on arrival at school.

But we doubt if this will be a final solution. Three Brookfield girls, pictured in wrinkled pants and jeans, look sloppy and unattractive compared with the chic, feminine appearance of the same trio wearing mini dresses.

We repeat though, this is a time-wasting problem which should be settled by school authorities, and are so that they can get on with their main function of education.

Quetico Park's Unspoiled Wilderness Threatened By Canadian and U.S. Lumbermen

Windsor Star

Ontario's unspoiled wilderness areas are so few and so threatened that the government should not delay in protecting what remains from the ravages of commercial exploitation.

One area of the province particularly threatened by lumbering companies is Ontario's famous Quetico Park, located on the border with Minnesota.

In this verdant part of the province, the Canadian-controlled Domtar corporation has been logging over 468 square miles of the park since 1967. It is now negotiating with Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Co., a subsidiary of Boise Cascade Corp. of Boise, Idaho, for the sale to the U.S. firm of 82 million words of sawmill and lumbermen's cabins. Boise Cascade already has logging rights to 420 square miles in the park.

Conservationists from both sides of the international border have become very concerned that the sale not only includes the buildings and mechanical equipment, but also the right to log in the area. While Domtar officials point out that under Ontario law, logging permits...cannot be sold, conservationists argue with sound logic that no corporation is going to buy millions of dollars of logging equipment and buildings if it could not conduct lumbering operations.

The timber manager for the U.S. company, admitting by implication that his company is indeed buying logging rights, said it needs the 200,000 cords of wood which it can remove from the park. He said, "If we're kicked out, I guess we'll just have to look somewhere else and that is not going to be so easy." Who cares?

The issue is both complicated and simple. What is complicated is the deal which Domtar is working out with the U.S. company. What is equally unclear is the province's reason for silence. What is simple is the principle involved. The government of this province must fulfill its responsibility to the people of this province and this country. It must hold, maintain and protect the few wilderness areas which remain for future generations.

Quetico has been placed in a category which permits the sale of logging permits by the department of lands and forests. This categorization should be changed to permit only those people who seek refuge from cities, pollution and pollution to use the park for their recreation.

Parents' Carelessness Cited

Children's Car Seats, Belts, Inadequate Woman Claims

Letter to
The Globe and Mail

I am most encouraged by Mrs. Jean Crittenden letter on child safety in cars (Safety Seats — Oct. 12). Since my arrival in Canada a little over a year ago, I have been appalled by the carelessness of parents with their travelling children, and I know of only one family — American immigrants — who share my views. I have yet to see one Canadian child in a seat which would be approved by RoSPA — The British equivalent, I imagine, of the Ontario Safety League.

I wrote an article on the subject of children in cars which is now circulated by the English Consumers' Association, and while doing so, unearthed many facts which might help Mrs. Crittenden, and any other parents who prefer to think their children would survive an auto crash.

First and foremost, since no one here seems to realize it, hook-on car seats are a menace. It is my personal view they should be banned, in the event of a crash, there is nothing to stop the whole seat, child and all, being hurled around the car, resulting in injuries from both car and seat. Parents who have thought of this, and strap the child, and seat, in the adult safety belts provided don't improve matters.

To quote from RoSPA: "The danger of restraining a child's car seat fixed on the front seat by means of the adult safety belt is due to the fact that it was not designed for this purpose. Harness, both for adults and for children, has to be specially designed to provide the right degree of restraint and to contain the right amount of 'give' so that the human frame suffers the minimum amount of damage in the event of a sudden stop. Any 'do it yourself' idea is therefore likely to be hazardous.

In England, there is a safety standard (BS 3254) for child seats and belts, which defines the strength of buckles, strength and size of webbing, and states that such belts must be designed for use in the rear seat, and that they "must, besides holding the child, hold back the seat," to prevent its weight crushing the child. (In practice, this usually means the belt is attached to the car's body.)

If the belt passes the tests, it bears a "kitemark" — the mark of the British Standards Institute (it tests pretty well anything). And the buyer can be sure the child will be adequately protected. Of the multitude of seats on the market, only six qualify for the kitemark. I have yet to see a Canadian belt which would even approach the standard. Of those there must be some but why aren't they submitted and tested by, for instance, the Ontario Safety League, or CA?

At Canadian Tire, one can buy, for $2.98, a belt which is vastly preferable to a hook-on seat, but it is still far from ideal. My American friends have a proper belt for each of their children, purchased from a parachute firm in the States — Irving Airchute, Lexington, Ky.

In the meantime, why doesn't everyone publicize any decent belts they know of which are available here — such as the Ontario Safety League before they buy. And avoid hook-on seats, unless you are tremendously inclined.

A footnote: Babies should be placed in the rear seat in a carrycot secured to the body-work of the car with strong netting, or in the well of the car behind the front seat, and should never be placed on the lap of the mother when she is sitting in the front seat — and especially not inside her seat belt with her. In the event of a crash, the child would be crushed by her weight.

(Mrs.) Elspeth Christie,
Hanmer.

U.S. Donor

Museum Phonograph

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Early this month your paper published a good picture of a group with an old phonograph at the Ameliasburg Museum. I believe this machine was donated by my parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Stewart, of RR3, Carrying Place.

If the phonograph is the one I believe it to be, I feel it would have been appropriate for you to have mentioned the donor's name. This particular phonograph was given to my Dad by his father many years ago and was treasured by my Dad as one of his prized possessions. I am sure your readers will appreciate knowing who the donor of the Old Time phonograph was.

TV Manners

BBC Women's Hour

For years we have watched on television how grown-ups and children grab greedily at candy, cookies, soups and food of all kinds. But we have never once heard anyone say "Please" or "Thank you" for anything. It is just grab and guzzle. What kind of example is that for our children?

President's Procession Pelted After Rally

SAN JOSE, Calif. (Reuter) — A rock narrowly missed President Nixon's head Thursday night as angry demonstrators attacked his motorcade in what the president said was the worst violence he had seen since he was spat upon in Venezuela a dozen years ago.

Nixon's procession was pelted with rocks, eggs and other objects as the president left a campaign rally and several of the missiles hit the presidential limousine.

Before the episode, Nixon told his San Jose audience the secret service had informed him 300 protesters were outside. Reporters thought there were considerably more, perhaps as many as 2,500.

As he came out of the auditorium after the rally, Nixon appeared slightly nervous at the crowd confronting him but he climbed on to his limousine to wave triumphantly and give a V-shaped victory sign.

"That's what they hate to see," the president was overheard to remark as he left for the demonstrators.

A White house spokesman later refused suggestions that Nixon had taunted the crowd, which had shouted obscenities at him.

Four of the demonstrators were arrested, including one for investigation of assaulting a policeman and another for investigation of looting.

The Associated Press said it was the worst violence against a U.S. president since the assassination of John F. Kennedy in Dallas, Tex., in November, 1963.

Six cars in the procession shouted each other when a lead car bracketed it with a rock studded against its windshield. Chanting demonstrators ripped antennas off other cars and windows were shattered in a bus carrying presidential guests and aides.

The president issued an angry statement after arriving at the western White house in San Clemente

He described the violence as "the action of an unruly mob that represents the worst in America."

Presidential spokesman Royal Ziegler said Nixon had described the incident as disgraceful and in his statement the president promised to speak out today on "what America must do to end the wave of violence and terrorism by the radical anti-democratic elements in our society."

Nixon had settled down for the night at his Spanish-style villa in San Clemente when a small fire broke out in his study, forcing the president to flee in his pyjamas. He spent the rest of the night in a guest house.

Ziegler said the blaze was caused by heat conducted downward from a fireplace in Nixon's second-floor study to wood within the thick but hollow wall of the dining room below.

The president's valet, Manolo Sanchez, had built a fire in the fireplace where Nixon worked for a time before retiring. The president had arrived at his home shortly before 10 p.m. PST and the fire was discovered at 11:30 p.m. by Flna Sanchez, housekeeper and wife of Manolo.

Nixon was awakened by Secret Service agents and left the house before two fire units arrived within six minutes after discovery of the blaze.

Ziegler said damage was "very minor" but that "there was extensive smoke throughout the president's residence." Damage was confined to portions of the dining room wall and ceiling.

In the San Jose demonstration against Nixon, police fired riot gas and drove a motorcycle wedge through crowds of demonstrators who pelted the motorcade.

The trouble started just after Nixon left the auditorium where he claimed he was not campaigning on a partisan but on an ideological basis.

Nixon stood talking outside the auditorium while about 20 yards away demonstrators chanted: "One, two, three, four, we don't want your (obscenity) war."

Nine police motorcyclists drove slowly toward the demonstrators, forcing them to clear a road" leading from the auditorium. The crowd jeered and booed and then the rock-throwing began.

Hundreds of demonstrators had been blocking all exit roads. Nixon's limousine edged slowly forward with about 10 secret servicemen on each side.

Press Secretary Ziegler said the president reported feeling something fly by his head before he entered his car. Ziegler said a secret service agent told Nixon it was a small rock.

Nixon also was aware of objects striking his car as it accelerated after the police motorcyclists had cleared a way through the massed crowd of demonstrators.

As the procession left the auditorium, secret service men travelling in an open car behind Nixon were bombarded with rocks and other objects and spat upon by the jeering demonstrators.

Ziegler said Nixon was not unduly disturbed by what took place in San Jose, but that the president told him he had not experienced anything like it since he was attacked by a mob in Caracas during a visit to Venezuela while vice-president under the late President Eisenhower.

Nixon issued his statement on what took place as his presidential jet landed in San Clemente, where he will spend the last few days of the election campaign before the voting next Tuesday.

MDs May Get Raise

TORONTO (CP) — Pay increases for some Ontario doctors will take effect May 1 if approved next month by the council of the Ontario Medical Association, a spokesman for the organization said Thursday.

Dr. Nate Robertson, association president, said the increases would apply to doctors in general practice, pediatrics and psychiatry in order to bring their income to the level of doctors in other fields.

Dr. Stephenson said the Ontario government will decide whether patients will have to pay more than the 19 per cent currently not covered by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, as a result of the increases.

Dr. Stephenson did not reveal the exact amounts of the increases, but said they would not be more than 4.5 per cent.

Ziegler said Nixon told him he thought it time for this kind of disgraceful behavior to stop.

White House officials said that about six cars in the presidential procession of cars bumped into each other when the car in front stopped abruptly after the driver was startled when a rock hit the windshield.

The cars behind piled up one by one, but without serious damage. Nixon's car already had passed and did not stop.

California's Republican senator, George Murphy, for whom Nixon was campaigning and who was traveling in the car with the president, told reporters he could tell from the sound of the impacts that the rocks thrown at the car were large.

Murphy said: "The president was just as surprised as we were. . . . I just think it's shocking. I'm (profanity) mad about it."

"This was as vicious a crowd as I have ever seen in the U.S. I am ashamed what has happened in our state."

The president promised he would speak out against mob rule and violence during a campaign trip to Anaheim, Calif., later today.

"Freedom of speech and freedom of assembly cannot exist when people who peacefully attend rallies are assaulted with flying rocks," the president said.

"The stoning at San Jose is an example of the viciousness of the lawless elements of our society. This was no attack by a single individual. This was the action of any unruly mob that represents the worst in America," Nixon said.

Ziegler said at a late night news conference he assumed there would be an investigation of how the unruly demonstrators were able to get as close to the president as they did.

Ziegler said that as usual the Secret Service was responsible for security in the area immediately surrounding the president while local and state police took care of the wider area.

Asked whether in his view security precautions in San Jose were adequate, Ziegler said he had no way to judge.

Asked how much physical danger the president was in, Ziegler said this was difficult to assess and he declined to discuss it.

Broaden Probe, Doctor Says

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. John Griffin, general director of the Canadian Mental Health Association, says the Le Dain inquiry should investigate what he calls the enormous problem of discouraged and alienated youth whose illicit drug use is only a symptom of their despair.

He said Thursday the scope of the inquiry should be enlarged because it is "shooting at a problem we all see and having the great bulk of the problem untouched as long as it discusses drugs."

He was speaking at a one-day public hearing of the Le Dain commission into the non-medical use of drugs. The commission, appointed by the federal government is beginning a third and final national tour in search of public comment after released an interim report last June.

The commission also heard:

—That legalization of marijuana could lead to an increase in the number and seriousness of traffic accidents.

—Dr. Griffin says it no longer matters whether Canada legalizes marijuana — if people want it, they're going to get it.

—The president of the Canadian Student Liberals says his group believes the federal government should remove "all penalties for simple possession" of marijuana or cannibis.

Dr. Griffin said many of the young people he sees have the feeling of being useless, with no opportunity to do anything useful, creative or satisfying.

On drug education, he said:

"There's no point in showing them film after film that says you're going to go crazy if you take LSD. There's no point in giving them the Le Dain report to read — they won't read it."

Cathy Biggal, representing the Canada Council of Young Drivers, who said legalization of marijuana could lead to an increase in accidents, called for research into the effects of such drugs on skills such as driving.

"Drugging and driving is just as dangerous as drinking and driving," she said.

John Varley of the Student Liberals said his group wants the government to prepare "legislation to allow, legal, quality-controlled distribution" of marijuana.

The commission recommended in its interim report in June that prison sentences be discontinued for possession of marijuana and a maximum $100 fine be substituted.

Mr. Varley said his group also wants all persons now in prison for possession of marijuana to "be pardoned immediately."

Quebec Gets Medicare In Spite of Doctors

MONTREAL (CP) — Statin-run compulsory medical care insurance goes into effect in Quebec Sunday, whether doctors like it or not.

It begins in unprecedented fashion. Doctors who went on a 10-day strike earlier this month in opposition to the plan were ordered back to their practices by emergency legislation.

The legislation, aimed specifically at 3,000 striking medical specialists, provided for stiff fines or imprisonment for any specialist who did not resume and maintain his normal practice until mid-November.

It also forbids any mass exodus of doctors from the province, although a health department official says any individual doctor is permitted to move out if he desires.

The government could clamp down again after Nov. 15 if it viewed any general movement by doctors as a "form of contestation" or concerted action against the system.

So far most doctors have adopted a wait-and-see attitude. Only a handful have made inquiries to the Canadian Medical Association for information on job opportunities in other provinces.

The government's drastic move came as the 10-day specialists strike gradually gave rise to what the health department considered a critical situation in the province's medical care services.

At the root of the dispute is the issue of fees. The aim of medical care, most doctors agree, is good—elimination of unjust economic barriers and the provision of equal medical care for all.

But the provincial government insisted that only about $260 million could be spent annually to pay patients' bills under the plan. The doctors, especially medical specialists, wanted a larger sum to permit higher fees for each separate medical act.

It has been argued by both sides that specialists and some doctors that once a "reasonable" fee scale is negotiated, their issues such as opting out will pass by the wayside.

At the outset, there will be virtually no non-participating doctors in the plan. All doctors are considered opted in until three months after written notice to the contrary is received by the health insurance board.

Opted-in doctors will abide by the scale of fees adopted temporarily at the special session of the legislature Oct. 15 that ended the specialists' strike.

Any doctor who opts out so that he can charge a higher rate will have no part of his patient's bill paid by the insurance board.

Negotiations with doctors' groups—general practitioners, dental surgeons, optometrists—are nearing agreement on more permanent tariffs. But the government and the largest group —the 4,000 medical specialists— are still far from agreement.

Salary deductions amounting to eight-tenths of one per cent of net income to a maximum $125 start next week, and although 6.4 million people have registered, only 4.5 million have received numbered white plastic cards identifying them as medical care members.

Everyone in the province is covered by the scheme. Doctors will be expected to treat those still without blue and white cards, a specialist explained, leaving it to the goodwill of the patient to return when he has the card so that the bill can be processed with the board.

Robarts Refuses To Release Report

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Roberts said Thursday he will not make public a police commission report on organized crime in the Ontario construction industry, nor will he discuss the report's contents.

He was replying in the legislature to Morton Shulman (NDP — Wards High Park) who says he has used parts of the report as a basis for his charge that the Mafia had links with a company-sponsored union.

Dr. Shulman said the report contains a recommendation for a royal commission on organized crime in Ontario, and he asked whether the premier would adopt the recommendation.

Mr. Roberts said the report is a working document concerned with the administration of justice and not a public report.

Over 200 Attend Trent Valley W.I. Convention at Club Canara

Mrs. A. Zoeller, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario was the guest speaker at the 46th annual convention of the Trent Valley Area Women's Institutes held at Club Canara on October 28 and 29.

In the course of her address she referred to WI projects including McDonald Hall Guelph where training in home economics is given to women of all ages and nationalities and to Lee Homestead, Stoney Creek. She also mentioned that the new book to mark the 70th anniversary of WI's will be ready for printing in 1971.

She spoke of her visit to England last year to attend the world conference of WI's and quoted Mrs. Aeroi Dutt of India, president of the World WI who appealed to all WI members to accept the challenge of living together. Mrs. Zoeller commended the area executive for collecting "pennies for friendship" which are used for various projects including McDonald Hall in Guelph. She used an overhead projector to update the delegates on happenings at the provincial level.

Mrs. Zoeller introduced by Mrs. W. C. Mann.

Representatives of Hastings east, north and west, and Northumberland east, Peterborough and Prince Edward areas participated in the convention the theme of which was "go forward—look upward in the 70's".

On the first day the convention was attended by the Mayor, F. E. Scott of Belleville.

Zoologist Supervises Own Pets

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Anita Voss, wife of the new Metropolitan Toronto zoo director, Dr. Gunter Voss, has not herself up as a zoo director in her own right.

A zoologist herself, she supervises the pets the family keeps at their fieldstone farmhouse in nearby Pickering.

There are two black Australian swans called Karl Hugo and Eva living in the garage as well as two eyebrow ducks from New Zealand.

The family also keeps a cat called Muscle that strayed into the fold last summer and a groundhog in the garden, which the children are being taught to feed.

They could have no better teachers than their mother. She studied zoology at the University of Basel, Switzerland, and wrote her doctoral thesis on duck feathers.

Dr. Voss also spend two days a week at the Royal Ontario Museum where she is a research associate.

When her husband was zoo director in Winnipeg, she worked at the University of Manitoba under a research grant from the United States National Research Foundation.

She says she also discusses the Toronto zoo with her husband but "I wouldn't dare direct a zoological garden because that requires special training."

"But my husband and I discuss the problems and I tell him as a layman and a zoologist what I think should be done."

Points for Parents

Father: "Tracy must have taken the phone off the hook again. I've been trying to call home."

Mother: "I can't watch her every minute."

Small children are fascinated with telephones. Until they learn to leave them alone, try a temporary solution to the annoying "phone off the hook" problem.

Put a piece of tape over the phone buttons to hold them down if your toddler can reach the phone. When you want to use the phone, simply life up the tape and replace it when you're through.

Wants to Tell Ex-wife the Story

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am divorced with two children. I went out with a man my age (31) for a long time and have him a son six months ago. He is divorced from his first wife and now she wants to go back with him. Apparently she isn't marriage minded but wants to be a girl friend. Their three children are going to school.

Now he has stopped coming to see me and tells me I'm cheating him when I phoned him. He says I'm marriage minded even though he is the one who used to keep raising this issue himself.

I think I should let his ex-wife know about this son he has. When I said this he warned me to stay away from her, but there are things I think she should know. Just tell me the do's and don'ts. I don't want any advice about seeing a counselor. — Perplexed.

Dear Perplexed: In other words, you'd like somebody to give you the cut - and - dried recipe for getting out of an unhappy situation. I'm sorry, but that is not the way human relations get solved.

All a counselor does is help you to think through your situation and summon the moral courage to take the action you decide is needed. It is never a question of the counselor directing your future for you.

If this vacillating mal- has begun to revive sweet memories with his ex-wife, I can't see that your meddling in the situation is going to endear you to him. Of course, you can see him for support (will do nothing to help himself.

But the main thing you can do is let him know he is responsible for himself and his own wasted life and health. You cannot carry his load nor cover up for him.

Prayer has power — to give you peace of mind and to make a change in him. Frank Laubach calls it "the greatest force in the world." Keep on with it and with your group.

Ann Landers

Says Widowed Sister Making A Mistake

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please tell my idiot sister (age 32, husband killed in Vietnam) that just because a guy has been married and fathered a child does not mean he is straight.

Everybody in town seems to know B is a fag — except my sister. Now she says they are planning to get married. Get this: He is sewing her wedding dress, redecorating her apartment and will bake the 3-tier wedding cake himself. Sis says it will not be a large wedding (her husband has been dead less than six months) but B has already asked five of his "chums" to stand up for him. Every one of his "chums" is three feet off the ground. They don't walk, they flit.

Sis is a lovely girl, but I believe she went to pieces mentally when her husband was killed. I've tried to tell her what she is getting into but she insists I am mistaken and swears that "our life is very good." Can this be possible? What are the chances for a successful marriage with a homosexual? — SLEEPLESS NIGHTS.

DEAR SLEEPLESS: Marriage today is risky even with a man who is straight. Most women who marry homosexuals (S is apparently A.C. - D.C.) are a little odd also. There are isolated examples of such marriages which have worked, but the overwhelming majority fail. In nearly all cases, the husband tires of the masquerade and drifts back to the kind of sex he likes best — and it's with the boys, not the girls.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 12-year-old girl with a nine-year-old problem. My sister. When my friends come over she hangs around and acts like she is one of our crowd which she is not. If I want her to leave us alone I have to knock her down or pay her off. When I go someplace I must take this grimy little pest along. I keep telling my mother it's not fair but she says, "You're older and the same rights as you."

Shouldn't a nine-year-old be playing with kids her own age? When I tell her this she says kids her own age are boring. Can you help me? — GOING MAD.

DEAR MAD: As older sister's friends are always more interesting, especially if the sister is 12 and the "grimy little pest" is nine. Your mother should not allow your kid sis to inflict herself on you. Such injustice makes siblings hate each other. The nine-year-old should be encouraged to cultivate friends of her own. If she is permitted to hang around with you she won't make the effort. Show this column to your mother. It might help.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A gal I went to school with (many years ago) moved to this city eight months ago. We were never close friends but I try to be cordial. The problem: Whenever we meet (and we seem to meet quite often) I'm never sure how she will greet me. One day she falls on my neck and showers me with hugs and kisses. The next day she treats me as if I had bubonic plague.

How do I deal with someone who is so unpredictable? Any advice? — BLOW HOT. BLOW COLD.

DEAR BLOW: Unpredictability is one of the principal symptoms of emotional illness. The cordiality of your friend's greetings have nothing to do with you — they are a barometer of her mood. If she's up she'll be effusive. If she's down you'll get the small hello. Understanding this should make you less reactive.

Beef and Kidney Pie A Treat

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am a young doctor's wife and remember you gave a recipe for Beef and Kidney Pie two or three years ago finishing with the comment that individual pies could be frozen and were a boon to those who had husbands on irregular hours. Irregular hours is putting it mildly. My British husband loves Beef and Kidney Pies. Would you be kind enough to repeat this recipe? — Melanie H.

ANSWER: I do with alacrity.

BEEF AND KIDNEY PIE (Will freeze; may be made into individual pies)

1 lb. stewing beef
½-lb. kidney — beef or pork
1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ cup onion, chopped
Cold water

Remove fat from kidney, and cut into ¼" pieces. Soak in cold water ½ hr. Drain and dry. With sharp knife remove all fat and gristle from beef and cut into ½" or ¾" cubes. In a saucepan combine both meats and add salt, pepper and onion. Add cold water to cover and simmer covered 3 hrs. Drain broth into another saucepan. Stir together 1 tbsp. flour, 2 tbsps. corn starch and 1-3 cup cold water until smooth then stir in hot broth over heat until thick. Return meat to broth and cool.

Make your very finest plain pastry (3 cups flour, 1 cup shortening, 1-3 cup butter, 1½ tsps. salt, about 6 tbsps. cold water) and line one 9" pie plate and two 3½" individual pie plates with it. Spoon in meat filling. Cover all with gashed top crusts and seal and crimp edges. Brush tops with glaze made by beating together 1 egg and 1 tbsp. water. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. 10 min., then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake until filling bubbles a little through gashes. The pie requires about 40 min in all. Individual pies require about 30 min. in all. They are ready to eat now and are lovely with chili sauce.

NOTES: 1) If you freeze these pies, freezewrap in pans and freeze hard. Remove from pans and re-freezewrap and store in freezer. 2) Obviously this beef and kidney pie filling may be made up into individual pies. 3) To serve frozen pies return to pans and reheat in oven at 300 deg. Fahr. until hot.

First Major Legislation of Session

Federal Court of Canada Bill Given Approval

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill establishing the Federal Court of Canada was given third and final reading in the Commons Thursday, the first major piece of legislation to be approved since Parliament began its new session Oct. 8.

Justice Minister John Turner, who piloted the bill, had his hand shaken and his shoulders patted by fellow cabinet ministers as though he had scored the winning goal in a hockey game.

Opposition members chose not to make any speeches at the third-reading stage. Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said his party wanted to see "if the government has any effective legislation" to put before the Commons.

Approval came after several votes on opposition amendments to the Federal Court bill were voted down by government supporters.

In the debate on the report stage, Mr. Turner took issue with opposition claims that the federal government is moving into provincial legal jurisdictions by setting up the new court.

Mr. Turner said the Federal Court's jurisdiction would differ little from that of the Exchequer Court which it will replace.

The main difference was that it would handle appeals and reviews of decisions made by federal boards and tribunals.

The Federal Court also will have concurrent jurisdiction with provincial courts over matters involving promissory notes or bills of exchange in which the government was involved. It also will share jurisdiction with superior courts in matters concerning severance.

Mr. Turner said that despite the urging of some Ontario and Quebec judges, jurisdiction over divorce and bankruptcy was left to provincial courts.

"We are not grabbing back jurisdiction," the minister said in reference to statements by Elden Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), who led the Conservative attack on the legislation.

Mr. Woolliams, a Calgary lawyer, argued that the court would become "a specialized field for a few people."

Specialists handling Federal Court cases would command high fees. The average man, litigating against a more powerful opponent such as the state, would not be able to hire expensive lawyers.

"As a result, justice will not be done."

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) took issue with a clause of the bill that would allow the government to refuse to make public certain documents on grounds of security even though they might be part of a case against the federal government.

The Commons also resumed its second-reading debate on a government bill to extend the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act until June 30, 1973. The debate continues today.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said Northern Ontario communities are relying on the act to keep the mines in production.

In Senate debate on the speech from the throne, Senator Hazen Argue (L — Saskatchewan) said the present Quebec crisis is being fired by an alarming economic situation.

An emergency economic program for Quebec is required, he said.

"High unemployment, economic stagnation and poverty are the rotten conditions that foster the FLQ, the separatists that would destroy Canada," he said.

Budget on it.

CHARGEX

Your Chargex card can help you with your budget. Simply by taking a lot of the confusion out of budgeting.

For example, when you use your Chargex card, you only get one bill every month. Instead of a whole pile of bills.

That means you only have to write one cheque. Which, you'll find, is a lot easier (and cheaper) than writing a whole pile of cheques.

At the same time, your Chargex billing gives you a complete record of your monthly purchases. It tells you where and when you bought it, and how much you paid.

So you know exactly where you stand. And that's half the battle.

After all, what's the sense of putting yourself on a budget, if you can't tell whether you're sticking to it or not?

Chargex. Count on it.

MPs Add To Staff

By DAVE McINTOSH

While MPs were making sure government departments were practising austerity, they were increasing their secretarial and other staff.

The four-member commission of internal economy of the House of Commons says in its latest tabled reports that 46 secretaries have been added to the staff—23 for the Liberals, 13 for the Conservatives, six for the NDP and four for the Creditistes.

The commission comprises Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, chairman, and three cabinet ministers, who are changed frequently.

It says the staff of Commons committees has been increased by 22 persons. Top salary is $30,031.

Other items from the commission's reports:

Former MP Ed Schreyer was reimbursed $132.50 for moving his things back to Manitoba, where he became premier.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's office was equipped with additional telephone lines at a cost of $4,300.

Intercom systems were approved for MPs' offices where required. Only Paul Hellyer, former defence and transport minister, undertook to pay the cost himself.

Language training for MPs is costing $70,000 this year compared with $60,000 last.

Pay raises were approved for, among others, potwashers, the assistant head dishwasher, the sauce chef assistant, the bar attendant, the cold meat assistant and the assistant pastry cook in the parliamentary restaurant.

The shoe shine boy also got a raise: to $3,756 a year from $3,560.

A Commons return for Robert Coates, Conservative MP for Cumberland-Colchester North, shows that R. J. (Bud) Orange, Liberal MP for the Northwest Territories, got more for travelling expenses than any other parliamentary secretary in the 1969-70 fiscal year.

Mr. Orange, who along with 13 Liberal colleagues was replaced as parliamentary secretary early this month, received a total of $7,843. He made many speeches for Energy Minister J. J. Greene when the latter was ill.

James Walker, Liberal MP for York Centre and former parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, received only $33 in travel expenses in 1969-70.

Two secretaries—David Gross, defence, and Yves Forest, privy council—received nothing.

Bay Bridge Road Lombardy Poplars Victim of City Road Widening Program

Trees Come Down While Parks Board Making Last Try

As far as the Bay Bridge Road Lombardy Poplars are concerned it is a case of too little and too late!

Some years ago the city parks committee planted a row of poplars along the west side of the Bay Bridge Road bordering West Zwick's Island.

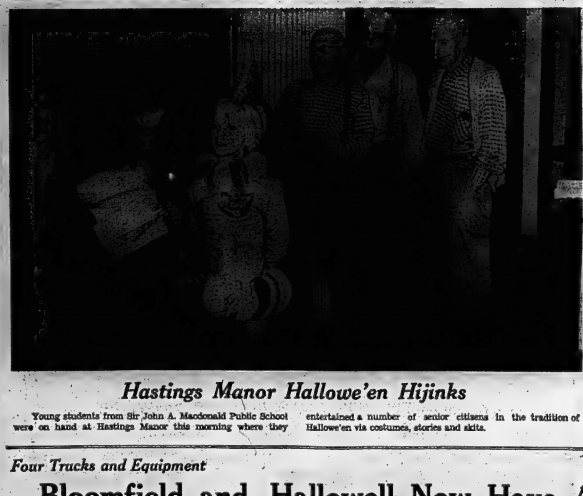
But the existing roadway is narrow and its need of updating so council has awarded a contract for widening and repaving.

This necessitated removal of the row of poplars and the idea of relocating the 65 or so trees involved.

An estimate of $3,500 had been obtained for relocation of the trees, but the tenderer's price came in at $11,000 and council decided to abandon the trees.

But the matter of the Lombardy Poplars was re-opened last night at parks board and it seemed there was still a possibility of them being saved.

Parks superintendent Lloyd Syer told the board that he had quoted a price of $70 each for moving the trees which would work out at about $4,900.



So board members decided the trees were worth saving and Mr. Syer said he would check with the road contractor today to ascertain his road building schedule.

However as it turns out it was already too late to save the trees — the contractor had already cut them down.

But the parks board will nevertheless seek compensation from the city for loss of the trees.

Last night the board passed a recommendation to request the city to leave the $3,500 originally estimated as the cost of relocating the trees to be left in the Bay Bridge Road budget and be made available to the board to purchase replacement trees.

"It's not a question of asking," said one board member. "It is a request for compensation, the same as any other private owner would ask."

Guild's First Musical Producing Enthusiasm

The work is hot and heavy at the Belleville Theatre Guild's Pinnacle Playhouse these days.

And the reason for all the excitement is the rehearsal for the guild's first musical production since its formation in 1951, The Fantasticks.

Resident artistic director, Lawrence Evenden, described The Fantasticks as a "romantic fantasy" and a "parable of love."

The plot surrounds the story of a young boy and girl who fall in love because their parents try to keep them apart. In reality, however, the parents were actually trying to get them together by keeping them apart and when the lovers learn this, the romance begins to spoil.

The musical features songs like Try to Remember the Days of September and Soon It's Gonna Rain.

"It's a simplistic musical. It only has a cast of 10," Mr. Evenden said. "It has been running in New York since 1960."

The Fantasticks will run in Belleville Nov. 18 - 22 and from Nov. 24 - 28.

The production, quite heavy on young people, stars Bob Lawton as El Gallo, the narrator; Marje Brain as the young girl and Alec Pearse as the young man.

Also in the cast are Dennis Rowbotham, Michael Reed, James Westhauser, Paul Black and Milton McCrystal.

"I like romantic fantasies," Mr. Evenden said about the show. "It's a very theatrical show and I like that. We require and have a very competent technical crew for the show. We've done all sorts of research into special lighting which will be a highlight."

PICTON (Staff) — Fire protection services provided by the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department were recently displayed to ratepayers during an open house marking the official opening of the brigade's new fire hall.

Described by Bloomfield reeve Allen Anderson as "a pretty adequate fire department" Bloomfield - Hallowell firefighters map four trucks and own a wide variety of emergency equipment ranging from Scott air packs to resuscitators.

The fire department was organized a year ago following Hallowell township's purchase of firefighting equipment used by the former Camp Picton and sold by the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation.

Hallowell reeve George Vincent suggested to fellow councillors that by joining forces with Bloomfield fire department the township could save tax dollars and avoid duplication of services. The central location of Bloomfield village in the township made it an ideal location for the proposed fire department. Bloomfield village council agreed with Hallowell's plan and the municipalities joined forces.

Included in the firefighting equipment purchased by Hallowell were two fire trucks, resuscitators, Scott air packs, a drying cabinet and oxygen tanks. Bloomfield fire department contributed one fire pumper. Later teamed with a second truck financed by a walkathon sponsored by the Bloomfield firefighters' club.

The new truck, which has a water capacity of 1850 gallons was turned over to the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department. Its team mate, a fire pumper purchased by Bloomfield village in 1948, boasts a carrying capacity of 500 gallons.

Mr. Anderson points out that lack of water has been a fault in rural firefighting but the 2350 gallon combined carrying capacity of these two trucks combats this problem effectively. The trucks purchased by Hallowell township have a combined capacity of 600 gallons of water.

Fire chief for the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department is Ralph Rolston, who became Bloomfield's fire chief in 1948.

The fire department is guided by a five - man fire commission including two members from each municipal council and fire chief Ralph Rolston .Bloomfield village is represented by commission chairman Allen Anderson and Jack Benning and Hallowell reeve George Vincent and councillor Keith MacDonald represent Hallowell township. These appointed members are responsible to their municipal councils.

The Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department belongs to the mutual aid protection system. Mr. Anderson explains that if fire breaks out in Ameliasburg, Wellington, Bloomfield, Hallowell or Picton — all municipalities protected by mutual aid, a co - ordinator assisted by the fire chief assesses the dangers of the blaze. Help is dispatched to the fire centre and fire trucks from outlying areas move in to stand by and protect communities belonging to mutual aid.

Fire Chief Ralph Rolston observes that the first Bloomfield fire department was organized in October, 1948. A fire pumper bought at that time today sits in the new fire hall, ready for action. The Bloomfield - Hallowell fire department claims 25 volunteers most of them living in Bloomfield village. These men are now receiving special training from Herbert Rolston, former deputy fire chief at Camp Picton. Three of the firefighters joined the department in 1948 and remain active.

An alarm system hooked to village telephones has been purchased by the fire department.

Reeve Vincent feels that the fire fighting brigade is well equipped to serve ratepayers efficiently. Hallowell township formerly purchased its fire protection from Bloomfield paying an annual standby fee of $500, and a charge of $200 per call. Hallowell township bought the service station recently converted to the Bloomfield - Hallowell fire hall but the cost of renovations, maintenance and repairs to five trucks and several other expenses is shared by the two municipalities on an assessment basis.

Mr. Vincent explained that Hallowell pays approximately 42 per cent of the cost while Bloomfield is responsible for 58 per cent of all expenses.

Both Reeve Anderson and Reeve Vincent agree that their fire department is well equipped and fully prepared to swing into action should fire break out. Fortunately, no major fires have occurred since the department organized.

Backstrom Would Welcome Deal to Vancouver Canucks

MONTREAL (CP) — Ralph Backstrom appears ready to end his three-week retirement from National Hockey League competition with a team other than Montreal Canadiens.

Backstrom, a 33-year-old native of Kirkland Lake, Ont., played 12 seasons with the Canadiens before announcing his retirement Oct. 10, on the eve of Montreal's season opener in Philadelphia against the Flyers.

"At the moment I am still retired," said Backstrom Thursday after a meeting with Canadiens general manager Sam Pollock.

"But if a deal could be worked out to play in a suitable city I would have to sit down with my wife and discuss it."

"We have been considering a move—without a deadline—to a warmer climate, anyway, where I intend to make my permanent home. If hockey enters into it now, I must consider that possibility."

Recent reports from Kirkland Lake indicated Backstrom's desire to move to Vancouver and resume a career there with the Canucks if a deal can be worked out between the two clubs.

"It's not whether I can deal with Vancouver," said Backstrom, "but whether Vancouver can deal with Montreal."

The Canucks are one of nine NHL clubs who showed interest in Backstrom as soon as he retired from the Canadiens.

"We would certainly use him," said Bud Poile, Canucks' general manager. "He can play here any time he wants but the question is how am I going to deal for him."

As for playing in cities other than Vancouver, Backstrom said:

"There are some cities I would never consider trying to bring up my family."

Backstrom has not skated since Oct. 19 but claims he will not have too much of a problem getting back into condition.

"I weigh 175 pounds, only three over my playing weight," he said. Poile has indicated he may talk with Pollock this weekend. The Canucks are scheduled to meet the Canadiens at the Forum here Saturday night.

Halt Boston Win String

Red Wing Vets Reach Milestones

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a night for milestones for Detroit Red Wings in their National Hockey League game Thursday with Boston Bruins, Stanley Cup champions.

First, Alex Delvecchio scored his 400th NHL career goal, unassisted after he stole the puck at centre from defenceman Bobby Orr, winner last season of almost every award in the NHL.

Then Gordie Howe picked up his 1,000th regular-season assist on Delvecchio's second goal of the night and his 491st in the NHL.

Not content with those achievements, the two Red Wings combined with their team-mates to defeat Boston 5-3 and snap the Bruins' unbeaten streak at 18 games, going back into last spring's playoffs.

Boston, in its first six games this season, had won five and tied one after ending last season with 10 straight playoffs win. Detroit's win was its first in the last four games.

The loss left the Bruins tied with Montreal Canadiens for second place, each with 11 points, but the Bruins have two games in hand. Detroit moved into fifth place with seven points, one behind Vancouver.

In the only other game Thursday, Philadelphia Flyers scored three third-period goals to beat Los Angeles Kings 3-1.

Delvecchio, who scored 15 goals and 22 assists in his first professional season with Detroit in 1951-52, has been a top scorer for the Red Wings ever since. He has spent much of his career as a playmaking centre for the incomparable Gordie Howe but the Red Wing team captain also has been a standout at left wing.

And Howe? Well his 1000th regular-season assist Thursday night just adds to the string of records he has compiled in the NHL, including the league's top scorer and most valuable player, both six times.

Howe also scored a goal Thursday night while his linemate Frank Mahovlich and defenceman Dale Rolfe added the others before a hometown Olympia crowd of 14,335.

Phil Esposito, Ed Westfall and Don Marcotte scored for Boston. Esposito's goal was his seventh of the season and his eight assists give him a total of 15 points, tops among the scoring leaders.

The Red Wings refused to be intimidated by the bruising Bruins, coming back twice after losing leads. They had a 2-0 lead before the game was four minutes old on goals by Delvecchio and Mahovlich. Boston tied the score on goals by Esposito and Westfall.

Rolfe scored on a slapshot about midway in the second period but Marcotte brought the Bruins even again in less than a minute. Delvecchio and Howe then put the Wings in front to stay in the third period after they had withstood a Boston power play.

At Philadelphia, Los Angeles took a 1-0 lead on Doug Robinson's goal with slightly more than two minutes remaining in the second period. But third-period goals by Wayne Hillman, Earl Heiskala and Serge Bernier won it for the Flyers before a Spectrum crowd of 13,557.

Flood Contract Would Have To Include Reserve Clause

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Thursday he would not approve any contract between Washington Senators and outfielder Curt Flood that did not include the controversial reserve clause.

At the same time, Flood told the New York Post he is considering signing with the Senators because "like everybody else I've had some business reverses and I need the money. But I still think the reserve clause stinks."

The reserve clause is the portion of the uniform players' contract that binds a player to the club with which he signs. Flood has a $4.1 million anti-trust suit pending that challenges that provision.

The former St. Louis outfielder, who was traded to Philadelphia Phillies and then passed on to Washington, has been negotiating with Senators' owner Bob Short while Kuhn has been kept posted.

"Short is continuing to talk contract with Flood," said Kuhn. "He feels he can sign him.

"But there's a litigation which obviously creates a problem. Flood is concerned that if he signs he prejudices his case and the defendants are concerned that if he signs he prejudices their case."

The defendants include Kuhn, league presidents Charles Feeney of the National and Joe Cronin of the American and the 24 baseball teams.

Kuhn said any contract would have to get the approve of the league president "but final approval does rest with me."

Flood said in The Post interview that Short had offered him more money than he was paid with the Cardinals, which was $90,000 for the last year he played in 1969.

"I'm paying alimony and I got five kids to support," Flood said.

That's enough to drive any man back into the game."

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Sporting News has named Cincinnati Reds' catcher Johnny Bench as Player of the Year in the National League. The weekly publication, through its player poll, named Minnesota Twins' third baseman Harmon Killebrew as American League Player of the Year. Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals was named right-handed Pitcher of the Year and Sam McDowell of Cleveland was chosen as left-handed Pitcher.

TORONTO (CP) — A five-year contract that will help make Bobby Orr a millionaire will be ready for his signature within the next month or two, lawyer Alan Eagleson said Thursday. Orr, the National Hockey League's top defenceman, now is working on the last year of a three-year contract he signed with Boston Bruins in August, 1968. Orr's lawyer said negotiations on the new contract started with the Bruins about six months ago. Eagleson predicted by the time Orr finishes the five-year pact, he will be a millionaire.

Asked about reports that the contract would be the last for Orr, Eagleson said:

Sports On All Fronts

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have cut flanker Billy Gembrell to make room for Jim Thorpe's return from the suspended list in preparation for Saturday's Eastern Football Conference game with Ottawa Rough Riders. Assistant coach Frank Johnston said Thursday Thorpe, suspended more than two weeks ago for refusing treatment of an injured ankle, has been re-activated and Gambrell dropped from the roster. Thorpe's return to action Saturday may be in the company of flanker partner Bobby Taylor who came off the injury reserve list Wednesday. Taylor has been out with a knee injury since the first game of the season.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore Orioles were rewarded Thursday for blitzing Cincinnati Reds in the World Series with winning shares of $18,215.78 for each man — ironically just $122.40 short of the record $18,338.18 established by New York Mets a year ago.

The Orioles awarded 31 full shares of the $18,215.78 prize money and 13 partial shares or cash awards. The Reds handed out 32 full shares of the losers' spoils of $13,667.59 a man plus 13 partial shares or cash awards.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Oscar Bonavena scored a fourth-round heavyweight victory over Brazil's Luis Faustino Pires Thursday night. The scheduled 10-rounder ended when Pires' seconds threw in the towel after 2:30 of the fourth stanza. Pires had a deep cut on his right eyelid and his right cheekbone was swollen. Bonavena, of Buenos Aires, weighed 206½, Pires 209½. Bonavena was expected to fight Muhammad Ali in December, probably at Miami.

Expos Must Grow Own Infield Reserve Strength

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos may have to look to their own organization if they hope to gain infield strength for the 1971 season—their third in baseball's National League.

General manager Jim Fanning, fresh from major league baseball's meeting of general managers at Orlando, Fla., said Thursday there appears "to be a dearth of good backup infielders" available for trade by the Dec. 15 inter-league trade deadline.

The Expos specifically would like a shortstop to spell regular Bobby Wine, who appeared in 158 games last season.

Wine, 32, appeared fully recovered from an operation for a ruptured disc in his spine performed in 1968. However, the club would like to obtain a player capable of giving him a rest from time to time.

"We, we didn't do anything at the meetings," Fanning said. "There were only minor trades, but I believe we planted the seeds for other things that may take place later.

"We talked earlier about infielders. And there seems to be a dearth of them. And we don't want to give up one of our established players in a deal like that."

Fanning said the Expos, with catchers John Bateman, John Boccabella and Ron Brand, appeared to have come along well in that department, and "we have outfielders in numbers," but "clubs that have backup infielders want to hang onto them."

He said every major league club, including the American League world series champion Baltimore Orioles, appears to be seeking "another starting pitcher."

Brand, who worked more as a utility infielder last season than a catcher, left for Los Angeles Thursday to take a job in his father-in-laws floor - covering business. He had been unable to obtain off - season employment here.

Brand, who hit .228 in 72 games last season, said he will report to spring training unless his new job "proves so lucrative that it overcomes my baseball earnings."

Meanwhile, second baseman Gary Sutherland was released from a Montreal hospital Thursday, Fanning said.

Sutherland appeared in 116 games last season, but his only .200 as he was platooned with Marv Staehle. He had been attending the Instructional League in St. Petersburg, Fla., for intense batting drills when he developed an infection from a blister on his left hand.

Fanning said he visited the St. Petersburg instructional site and was particularly impressed with a trio of youngsters. He said first baseman Randy Vifehaus, 18, from St. Louis, third baseman Pat Scanlon, 17, from Minneapolis, and Richard Boisvert, an 18-year-old catcher from Montreal, had been impressive.

Stewart on Fall Can-Am Circuit

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Former world champion Jackie Stewart of Scotland announced today he will drive the full Formula 1 Owen Trophy and Canadian-American Challenge Cup racing circuits next year.

The 32-year-old top-haired Scot said he will campaign a Ken Tyrrell-designed, Ford-powered machine on the world championship trail and a Brit-ish-made Lola-Chevrolet in the $1 million Can-Am series.

He also announced he has signed an agreement with Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. as a major sponsor, replacing Dunlop which is pulling out of auto racing at the end of the year.

Revealing his plans at a news conference, Stewart said his Can-Am car will be owned by Carl Haas and Associates of Chicago. Haas' Lolas have been regulars on the Can-Am circuit for several years and this year have driven by New Yorker Peter Revson.

It was learned that Revson, a crack road racer, will become the No. 2 driver behind New Zealander Denis Mulme in the McLaren Can-Am team.

Revson, 29, would replace Britisher Peter Gethin who joined McLaren after the third race in the 1970 Can-Am. Gethin, 30, will concentrate on McLaren's effort in Formula 1, insiders say.

Revson also will be one of McLaren's drivers in the three 500-mile races on the United States Auto Club championship circuit next year. These races are at Indianapolis; Pocono, Pa., and Ontario, Calif. He drove for the McLaren team at Indy and Ontario this year.

With Hulme winning five of the first nine races, McLaren already has clinched its third straight Can-Am title. The final event on the schedule will be at Riverside, Calif., Sunday.

Stewart, who drove a French Matra-Ford to the world Formula 1 title in 1969, started out this year in a March-Ford. But he was not satisfied with the performance of the March, designed his own car at midseason and Stewart drove it in the final five races.

The mild Scot had one fling at the Can-Am this year, driving Jim Hall's radical "ground-effects" car at Watkins Glen, N.Y. in July. He set fast time but the car succumbed to development problems early in the race.

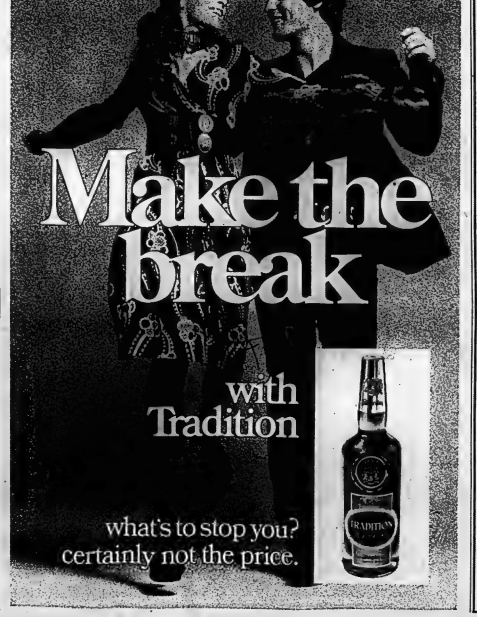
Stewart's agreement with Goodyear, announced by racing chief Larry Truesdale, calls for extensive testing programs not only in Formula 1 but in other types of racing.

His first competitive race for the Akron rubber firm will be in the South African Grand Prix in March.

Bowerman Far Off Sahara Pacesetter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tommy Aaron, in a rut since winning the Atlanta Classic earlier this year, shot a 64 Thursday in the opening round of the $100,000 Sahara invitational golf tournament.

"I think I'm starting to play a little better," the 33-year-old Aaron said after tearing to shreds the par 36-35—71 Dunes Golf and Country Club course, ripping out nine birdies in his round.



The 64 was good for a two-stroke lead over Don January, and Joe Carr. They carded their 66s on the Sahara Nevada course, another par 36-35—71 layout. Both courses are being used for the first two rounds with the players switching courses each day. The final two rounds will be played on the Paradise Valley course.

Larry Hinson and Tony Pace were next at 67, another 11 players were tied at 68 while Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg was in a group of 10 who shot 69. Homenuik had rounds of 34-35.

The other Canadians were well back in the field. Ben Kern of Toronto shot a 37-37—74, one stroke better than Al Balding, another Torontonian who had 39-36. Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver had rounds of 39-39 and Gary Bowerman shot 39-39.

Mo-Hawks Look for Goal Production

The Belleville Mo - Hawks will be trying to get back on the winning track tonight when they travel to Woodstock to take on the last place Athletics.

Coach Dave Jones is looking for more goal production from his club following a pair of losses in the league leading Orillia Terriers last weekend.

Only one Belleville player, George Godson, has cracked the top 17 OHA Senior A scorers this season. The Mo-Hawk scoring leader of the past two seasons is currently in a five - way tie for 12th spot with one goal and six assists, seven points behind the leader, Clare Alexander of Orillia.

One remedy for the Mo-Hawk scoring woes could be re-uniting the line of Godson-

GEORGE GODSON

Lorne O'Donnell and Al Ferguson, Jones is pondering just such a move for tonight's contest.

Another switch will come up front where centre Billy Armour will drop back to the Woodstock game. Armour was the fifth leading scorer for Belleville last season recording seven goals and adding 20 assists.

Bob Moon, who started last Friday's game against Orillia has drawn a three - game suspension for jostling referee Sandy Proctor in a third - period argument, meaning that Steve Rezo will be between the pipes for tonight's encounter.

The Belleville management has also decided not to follow up the protest that was lodged as a result of Proctor's match penalty interpretation.

Sunday, the Mo - Hawks will be at home to the Barrie Flyers in a 2.30 p.m. contest.

Don't let your protection run out on you.

It doesn't make sense to put anti-freeze into your radiator if a tiny, unnoticed leak in your cooling system lets it all run out. Or if it allows rust and corrosion inside to cause as much (or more) damage than the frigid temperatures outside could ever do.

So what we've done is develop a new "Prestone" Anti-Freeze formula that will protect your car down to 90° below zero. You'll never need that strong a concentration, of course. But still, it's comforting to know that the protection is there if you want it.

What's more, if a minor leak develops in your cooling system, the new "Prestone" anti-leak formula will also seal it completely. In seconds.

And with "Prestone" Anti-Freeze, don't worry about additional rust and corrosion building up in your cooling system. It simply can't happen. In fact, the new "Prestone" anti-leak, anti-rust, anti-corrosion formula is so effective, we put our Union Carbide guarantee right on the can. So this winter, get real "Prestone" Anti-Leak Anti-Freeze. Then you'll be sure your protection won't run out on you.

Available at most Supermarkets, Discount and Department Stores

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"He had this crazy idea it would be funny to shout, 'Woman's place is in the home!' at a feminine liberation meeting."

Reports False, Publisher Says

MONTREAL (CP) — Publisher Claude Ryan says that during the height of the kidnapping crisis he discussed, in a professional sense, the possibility of a provincial government in Quebec.

This was a "free examination at the start of the crisis," of possible implications resulting from the kidnappings.

But he said there was no questions of working toward or suggesting a provisional government, as suggested by some published reports.

In an editorial in Le Devoir, Mr. Ryan said the discussion on three hypotheses that included the provisional government were held with "principal colleagues" on Oct. 11, the day after the Laporte kidnapping.

The discussion on a provisional government touched on what could happen if there were new developments and if the government of Premier Robert Bourassa were unable to cope.

"In that case," Mr. Ryan said, "there probably could have been only one short-term solution":

"The constitution of a . . . provisional government team made up of the most valid elements of various provincial parties, reinforced by several political personalities from various milieux."

Mr. Ryan said that in telephone conversations with Premier Bourassa and Lucien Saulnier, chairman now of the Montreal Urban Community, he had described the government as in "profound disarray."

He had also signed later a "common declaration" with several labor leaders and Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois.

The declaration urged the government to negotiate with the FLQ for the safe release of James Jasper Cross, the British envoy kidnapped Oct. 5 and believed now to be still alive.

Mr. Ryan said he did not mention a provisional government to the others who signed the common declaration, nor had they talked to him about it.

He "categorically" denied a story in The Star that he approached several persons and suggested a replacement government.

Lawyer-scholar Supports War Measures Act

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government should hold on to exclusive, reserve power to counter sedition that threatens civil authority or the unity of Canada, says Frank R. Scott, authority in constitutional law, civil liberties and Anglo-French relations.

The lawyer-scholar said in an interview Thursday the authority of the controversial War Measures Act should be retained without amendment.

Prof. Scott, who has helped write policy for the New Democratic Party and the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, drew a distinction between the Public Order Regulations in force now and the War Measures Act under which the regulations were proclaimed by the Trudeau cabinet.

The 56-year-old act was invoked and the regulations proclaimed at the same time two weeks ago to counter the Front de Liberation du Quebec and its supporters.

Prof. Scott said the cabinet should proclaim a revised version of the Public Order Regulations that would be "less severe in deprivation of the right of an arrested person to judicial review of his case."

In addition, he suggested enactment of "a sort of mini-war-measures act" to provide the government with more limited reserve powers to proclaim emergency regulations against future civil disorders.

He said the proposed legislation, less sweeping than the War Measures Act and possibly providing for provincial concurrence in its use, could provide authority for a first-step response to limited disorders short of full-scale insurrection.

But the powerful authority of the War Measures Act should remain on the statute book as an ultimate government weapon, Prof. Scott suggested.

He was asked about public suggestions that the War Measures Act should be amended to require agreement by provincial governments before its powers could be invoked in future. Some public figures in Quebec have criticized the action of proposed safeguards to prevent abuse of the power.

Prof. Scott, tall and vigorous at 71, is one of 14 members of a special committee formed last week with the aim of watching over persons detained under the Oct. 16 regulations. A three-man sub-committee under publisher Jacques Hebert has been authorized to visit detainees.

A member of the Civil Liberties Union, Prof. Scott has fought and won major human-rights cases, including the 1938-37 campaign against Quebec's notorious padlock law against subversives.

He is former dean of law at McGill University, Montreal. At present, he conducts a seminar on minority language rights in Canada at McGill's centre of French-Canadian studies and commutes weekly to Halifax to lecture on constitutional law at Dalhousie University.

As a member of the bilingualism commission, Prof. Scott dissented from its majority conclusion last December that French should be the principal language of work in Quebec. The bilingual professor said the majority view would encourage development of "a Quebec that will not recognize minority linguistic rights." rights that he advocates for French-speaking citizens in the rest of Canada.

A socialist who helped draft policy for the New Democratic Party, Prof. Scott disagrees with criticism of the government's Oct. 16 action expressed by a majority of the New Democrats in Parliament.

"Trudeau, in the light of the request from the Province of Quebec and the evidence of an organized conspiracy, could not have refused emergency help," he said. "The only way he could give it under present law was through the War Measures Act."

Prof. Scott said the government could not have dealt with "the seditious conspiracy" through the Criminal Code because the persons conspiring were unknown.

However, he said the government should amend the Oct. 16 Public Order Regulations, which he said were probably drawn up hurriedly by the cabinet at a time when swift action was required.

The regulations outlaw the FLQ and persons supporting it, even to the extent of having attended an FLQ meeting. They permit searches and arrests without warrants and effectively require anyone accused to prove his innocence—a reversal of the normal legal principle of innocence until proved guilty.

Prof. Scott suggested that revisions should provide for the right of a detainee to advice from a lawyer—since permitted by Quebec authorities administering the act—and a written assurance that a detainee would be cautioned against incriminating himself.

Further, he said, there should be judicial surveillance at an earlier stage—a requirement that a detainee be brought before a judge within, say, three days.

Tests Prove It's the Taste

There is quite a difference between Canadians and Americans, but until recently no one realized that the difference extended to the taste buds.

Experiments conducted at Mead Johnson plant here and in Indiana seem to indicate that Americans like sweeter food and drink than Canadians. Dr. Lewis Schnell, director of technical services at the Belleville plant, has made the observation as the result of supervising taste panels for the last three years.

As a rule, imported products sold in the United States are sweeter than those on the market in Canada.

"Tests here with the American products have led us to accept the fact that Canadians find them too sweet," says Dr. Schnell.

Mead Johnson employees participate in the taste panels, held to determine taste preferences among flavors under consideration for a new or altered product.

When a weight-control product is tested, more women are likely to be used exclusively. If the product is a weight-gain platform, both men and women are invited to form the panel.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I suffer from psoriasis. I am 22. It has ruined my life. I'm ashamed to get married. Everything else is fine. I have education, enough money, am considered good - looking and feel healthy otherwise.

But I have psoriasis in my scalp, under my arms, all over my abdomen, on my breasts and other places. I've been told about a former hospital attendant who claims he has a sure cure for psoriasis. But I'm wary of quacks as three excellent dermatologists have (so far) been unable to cure me. I'd appreciate anything you can advise me to do. — Miss D.

Comment: One estimate is that two to three persons out of every hundred suffer some degree of psoriasis. Skin specialists tell me that there seems to be some hereditary factor, but the real cause is not known.

The skin becomes greatly thickened, and there is an abnormally rapid turnover of cells which cause the inflammation and scaling. It may even involve the nails. Some patients also complain of arthritis as a complication of psoriasis.

I can understand your disappointment; this condition has a tendency to have remissions and exacerbations. For example, in the summer it often gets better and the patient thinks it has gone. When it returns, there is a natural letdown in spirits. It is no wonder that patients like yourself become unhappy and depressed.

I suppose doctors do little to help your outlook when they say that there is no specific cure. Nevertheless, they can help — especially if the patient develops the proper philosophy of acceptance (which, I admit, is extremely difficult).

As dejected and frustrated as you are, I believe, Miss D., that you should see your skin specialist at regular interval. Psoriasis may not be curable but it may be helped. Patients can be made more comfortable. They can be made more presentable. The doctor can try many methods which may be effectual — anything from the usual coal tar preparations to corticosteroid creams to new drugs.

Investigation is going on. Someday, soon I hope, we will have the answer for patients like yourself. Incidentally, I have known many patients with psoriasis (both male and female) who have made happy marriages. So don't think your world has come to an end at the age of 22.

For Mrs. L.: Even though you have a slightly higher cholesterol than normal, I agree with your doctor that you should not waste too much energy going from store to store looking for bread made only from vegetable oils.

Use ordinary bread, but concentrate on eliminating other foods that contain an excess of saturated fats, such as eggs, cream, fatty meats and other fatty foods. As your doctor says, it doesn't make sense to go overboard in eliminating cholesterol from the diet. I tell patients there is a danger of becoming "cholesteaholes."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been pregnant for three and one-half months. Would any harm come to the fetus if I should happen to be exposed to a child who has just had German measles? Shall I be vaccinated now? — Mrs. B.

Comment: Danger to the infant is greatest during the first three months of pregnancy. Although experience with the vaccine is relatively short, I believe current feeling is that pregnant women should not be given the vaccine. However, there may be exceptions. Depending upon all the circumstances, the decision will have to come from your own obstetrician. I am not qualified from here just advising you how to solve your problem.

Psoriasis A Challenge

By Sydney J. Harris Says

Sports Fans Hero-hungry

Most of what we think is the American penchant for sports is really a hunger for heroes. We are much less interested in the game itself than in the feats of individual stars.

I thought of this while watching the professional tennis matches at Northwestern University last month. The double matches were scheduled for the tail-end of the evening, and half the large audience went home before they started.

Yet, as everyone who knows the game will admit, doubles is far superior to singles, both for playing and for watching. It calls for more precision, more co-ordination, more strategy, more intelligence, and more versatility. Many of the finest singles champions have been little better than mediocre in doubles.

But the viewing public does not care about all that. It wants to see a smashing duel that depends almost entirely on strength and service ability — the big serve, the overhead kill, that dominate the singles game. So much so, in fact, that tennis officials may soon change the serving rules to equalize the contest and make it more interesting and complex.

Much of what passes for sports enthusiasm is actually a kind of Walter Mitty fantasizing — the male spectators identify with some individual star, just as boys used to identify with the hero in a Western film serial. The game itself is only a vehicle for the day-dream of glory.

And this public attitude is bad for any team game, where victory depends more upon the collective effort of the group than upon any single act of derring-do. When a player gets bigger than his team, then the beauty of the collective enterprise is often sacrificed to showmanship, and the game itself degenerates from a sport to a spectacle.

One of the reasons that so many prominent athletes have been openly contemptuous of the viewing public at end of the sports commentators as well) has been this puerile glorification of the personality, with no real recognition of the combined talents and skills necessary for victory. The subtlety and complexity of modern football, for instance, eludes most of the spectators, who see only the end-product — the glorious touchdown run by a "star".

The next best thing to learning how to play a game is learning how to watch it: and we are not only not a nation of participators, we are hardly a nation of knowledgeable spectators. If we were, doubles would not have been scheduled for the tail-end of the evening, nor would the audience have trooped out when the singles heroes retired from the court.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For October 31

Your birthday today: Consolidation, practical application are your most useful approach to life in the year ahead. What you have been learning over the past few years comes together. You gather resolve and momentum to overcome limitations of long standing. Recently developed relationships are considerable stress, older ones quiet down. Today's natives frequently possess unusually great physical strength, at other times amazing emotional talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your own enterprises are the more dependable path, although group matters are worth doing. Check facts thoroughly. Evening is excellent for a party.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Leave nothing to chance; clear off the weekend chores promptly. Then take a break, or at least a change of direction. Your sense of humor makes all the difference.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You are in your natural pattern today. Enjoy diversity of activity, coincidences. The evening is for clowning and fun, but remember there's a serious undertone to it.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your feelings encompass things that are real and true, so other people don't quite understand where you are going with creative projects. This evening enjoy being a spectator.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your home and your basic beliefs are the proper starting point for all actions. Do whatever is possible to improve matters, then gather your loved ones and celebrate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Continuing circumstances are no problem unless you are distracted from serious efforts. Creative ventures are top priority for the moment. Evening parties are an art, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Pursue your goals diligently, while others are intrigued by changing situations. Shortcuts, for a change, really save time and effort. Enjoy yourself this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): If you really want to stay on the path, be clear in regard to; do whatever is needed to confirm your plans. Test and disregard for nostalgia.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Discretion continues to be essential to your projects. You are susceptible to wishful thinking, misleading appearances. Share decisions with associates.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Friends are ready for action—each with his own idea of what should be done. Get an early start and stay ahead of them. With definite direction ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Think through everything before reacting today. Some transactions are complex, have a subtle side. Social activity is pleasant.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Cultural pursuits are the feature of the day. Daydreaming is quite easy. News from far places is encouraging but very incomplete.

yourself to become unhappy and depressed.

I suppose doctors do little to help your outlook when they say that there is no specific cure. Nevertheless, they can help — especially if the patient develops the proper philosophy of acceptance (which, I admit, is extremely difficult).

Policy Would Guarantee Farm Income

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Thursday proposed what amounts to a guaranteed annual income for the western grains industry as a whole, but individual farmers would still have to scurry to get their share.

The proposals for a new grains policy for western farmers was tabled in the Commons by Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, who said they would be turned into legislation as soon as farm groups made representations on them.

One major proposal is aimed at stabilizing the gross receipts of grain producers.

The plan would attempt to stabilize incomes throughout the industry by setting up a fund into which farmers each year would pay a percentage of their crop income.

That fund would guarantee the industry would not, even in a disastrous grain year, be forced to subsist at a level lower than its average receipts for the previous five years.

If there wasn't enough money in the fund in a particular crop year to make up this deficit, the federal government would make up the deficit with a grant.

Mr. Lang estimated, outside the Commons that, based on actuarial statistics for recent years, the government would end up paying at least slightly more than the farmers toward the plan.

Individual farmers would receive payments from the fund based on their sales in that year plus their sales in the two preceding years.

The report explained this formula as an encouragement for farmers to choose their crops wisely. By doing so they could sell more than their neighbours during bad times and be eligible for relatively-higher benefits.

The choice of crops formed the main basis for the proposals.

The government plans to spend $18 million a year on research into the best long-range grains to raise, the best way to raise them and in keeping the farmers informed of what crops will sell best for the longest period.

In this way the government hopes to induce farmers to be more selective in the crops they grow and at the same time encourage them to stick with a crop that has a long-term potential in preference to one with greater immediate gain.

Farmers now get initial payments from a crop pool based on sales expectations for the current year—usually lower than the anticipated final selling price.

As a result the pools seldom show a deficit.

Under the new proposal, these payments would be based on sales expectations for future years, adding further incentive for the producers to stay with their chosen crop.

Crops included under the proposals are wheat, barley, oats, flaxseed, rapeseed and rye.

The proposals, if finally adopted, would be effective as of last Aug. 1, the beginning of this crop year.

The government would pick up the whole tab for the industry income guarantee in the current crop year, which the report said would probably be more than $100 million.

The proposals also put pressure on farmers to make crop choices it considers favorable in more obvious ways.

Storage payments for wheat under the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act would be terminated. "By taking the proposed action," the report says, "wheat would become less of a preferred crop, easing the pressure to overproduce."

As well, the government would "aggressively pursue a policy of substantially increasing exports of feed grains, principally barley."

The incentive program begun last year to encourage the conversion of grain land to hay and pasture would be continued, with hopes of converting an additional four million acres to grass in the next three years.

The government would also commit itself to announcing initial prices for wheat, oats and barley by March 1 each year.

Opposition response to the plan was non-existent Thursday, as members presumably took time to study the document.

Kidnapped, Beaten, Stripped, Painted

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man said he was abducted, stripped, beaten and painted yellow from head to toe Wednesday night, police said Thursday.

Florest Hoffmans, 38, unemployed as a steward at a city hotel, told police he was walking along a street when a motorist beckoned to him.

When he approached the car, the driver got out and held a knife against his back. He told police there were two men and two women in the car. He was blindfolded and driven to a house where the blindfold was removed.

Hoffmans said he was kicked and punched by both the men and the women, stripped and painted yellow from head to foot by the women.

He was allowed to take a bath before the paint was completely dry. He later was blindfolded again and driven to a parkway where he was set free.

Hoffmans told police he was robbed of a wallet containing $37.

You may be too late to have the first color television on your street, but you're just in time for the best.

Perhaps you haven't bought color television because you haven't seen what you really want. Perhaps you've worried about tuning color color. Or you've been fearful of the high costs of servicing. Well, now is the time to look again. Because we at Sylvania have just what you've been waiting for. And we'd like to tell you all about it.

New Dimensional Color makes 'true to life' viewing a reality

Take our 'true to life' dimensions. We've revised our screen height to screen width ratio to coincide exactly with that of television cameras. So now Sylvania shows all that the camera intended. And you never miss a thing.

To bring 'true to life' color, we've added a wrap-around "black composite" for very high contrast. And other special elements for a definite brightness advantage. It is this brightness, contrast combination that makes Sylvania's new dimensional picture tube the sharpest ever seen.

Fourteen leading television manufacturers use Sylvania picture tubes. So we must be doing something right.

Perfect tuning is now automatic

We do however ask you to tune each channel the first time. But only the first time. After that, our Memory Fine Tuning device goes to work. It locks in your perfect choice and automatically remembers it for you every-time thereafter.

Automatic Fine Tuning also includes a Deluxe 3-Stage Video IF Amplifier for more pleasing sound. A Keyed Automatic Gain Control that keeps the contrast uniform even in difficult reception areas. And an Automatic Degaussing Unit that purifies the color as soon as the set warms-up. Warm-up, by the way, takes only five seconds or less with new Instant Color.

Finally, Automatic Fine Tuning continuously adjusts to a station's carrier signal. So Sylvania always gives you the strongest possible reception. Automatically, of course.

Gibraltar Chassis eliminates heat and power overload problems

We've designed out these two major causes of television failure by designing in two new features.

First is a special Line Voltage Control. This little switch at the back of our set enables you to choose the best voltage for your area.

And the second is really a first. To the industry, that is. As a matter of fact we're very proud of our High Voltage Tripler. It's one solid state device that eliminates two most troublesome receiving tubes. And two pretty hot ones at that.

So Sylvania runs cooler now. On a lot less power.

Sylvania has more bright ideas

If you don't like the idea of twisting UHF and VHF dials, you'll like our Style 4C2647. Instant Pushbutton Tuning makes it the right Sylvania for you.

Or perhaps you'd like us to take you one step further. Chairside Cobra Control lets you operate the whole Sylvania show from the comfort of your favorite chair. Can you think of a better place?

We also have a chassis for people who prefer their color television with no tube but the picture tube. Sylvania viewing is even more reliable the Gibraltar solid state way.

And if you choose a 26" Sylvania you can take a perfect flesh tones for granted. New Perma Tint locks them in and eliminates the annoying greens from the picture.

We think these ideas will help you enjoy Sylvania even more. But then, we let you have the final say.

Sylvania is the best color protection in the business

A nice thing about our warranty is the easy-to-follow questions and answer format. But the best thing is the manner in which we take care of you.

A full five year plan covers the picture tube and all solid state devices. Everything else is protected for one year. And you needn't worry about replacement parts. They're guaranteed for the balance of the warranty period.

We're not a manufacturer who's afraid to mention breakdowns. They happen because a color television is a highly complex piece of machinery. Besides, a Sylvania color television is going to last a very long time.

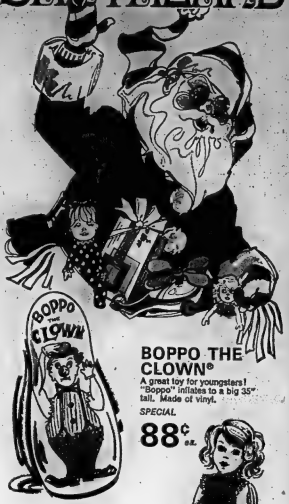
Realizing today's problems of repair and subsequent high costs, we've created our own coast-to-coast service organization. Our factory-trained personnel will be instantly accessible. They will do whatever has to be done quickly, at a low cost.

A Sylvania color television will be easy to service. We designed it that way.

The finest quality comes at the best price

Sylvania will save you some annoying expenses. Like government import duties and international shipping costs. For these two reasons as well as being able to give you more personal attention, we make our complete line of portable, table and console models right here in Canada. But only to the exact specifications established for our award-winning line in the U.S.

So there's no question about quality. Which you now know comes at the best price. And with that our story ends.



Except you haven't seen our Sylvania color television yet. We suggest you look for it at your dealer's now. And test our color against every other one there. We think you'll agree that Sylvania is just what you've been waiting for. And more.

Not Cause for Action

Ottawa Knew About the 'No Plot' Plot: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — For the first time, Prime Minister Trudeau referred Friday to "solid information" that had been received about talks of a provisional government in Quebec during the height of the kidnapping crisis.

But he reiterated that this information was not a factor in the Oct. 16 proclamation of the War Measures Act.

After staving off another heavy round of Commons questioning Friday, the prime minister told reporters outside the House that such solid information had been received concerning prominent Quebec citizens who had discussed the possible creation of a provisional government. While the information had been followed up, he said, the federal government did not feel it to be a cause for action.

Mr. Trudeau, speaking to reporters as he climbed the stairs toward his third-floor Centre Block office, said editor Claude Ryan of Montreal's Le Devoir had made a "clean breast" of the story in a Friday editorial.

"Ryan," he said, "gave a story which I think contradicts some of his earlier stories."

Mr. Ryan wrote that a provisional government had been one of three hypotheses discussed by him with his editorial colleagues the day after Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, later murdered, was kidnapped by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

That discussed was the fear that Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa would crack under the pressure and pass his prerogatives to the federal government.

But Mr. Ryan said he favored the third hypothesis—a negotiated release of Mr. Laporte and British Trade Commissioner James Cross, kidnapped by the FLQ days earlier.

In the last week there have been a spate of reports and rumors concerning a group of "prominent Quebecers" who, it was alleged, planned to establish a provisional government to replace the Bourassa government during the crisis.

Friday, for the first time, the prime minister said that "solid information" had been in hand concerning the question of a provisional government.

Mr. Trudeau made his comments after reporters suggested to him that the government was responsible for some of the rumors. The prime minister said the rumors had come from the press.

"If you think you have a good rumor then go ahead and spread it, fine."

Ryan Says Plot Rumors Meant to Destroy Him

Harry Mulhall

Critic's Role Only

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir, says rumors linking him to a plot to set up a "provisional government" in Quebec are an attempt by the federal and Montreal city governments to destroy him.

"I'm one of the only voices of opposition." Mr. Ryan said in an interview, "and if they could destroy me, it would be perfect."

Mr. Ryan said he believes he is being attacked as a result of his newspaper's opposition to proclamation of the War Measures Act

Its opposition to the "dictatorial tendencies of the municipal government and, of late, the federal government" would also be a probable motive.

But he said he thinks the attempt by the two governments to destroy him has failed.

"They tried and I think they missed," he said. "I hope they did."

In Le Devoir editorials, Mr. Ryan has denied stories which suggest he was involved in a plan to usurp the authority of Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal government with a "provisional" regime of leading Quebec citizens.

Mr. Ryan says what he considers a campaign against him is not limited to the plot stories.

The federal government "has had errand boys after us," he said, citing as an example a Liberal member of Parliament who he said has been questioning a member of Le Devoir's editorial staff about the publisher.

Mr. Ryan said the stories implicating him in a plot were leaked by two cabinet ministers in Ottawa.

He suggested they are based on an Oct. 11 discussion he had with Lucien Saulnier, then chairman of the Montreal executive committee. The discussion followed the kidnappings of James Cross, British trade commissioner, and Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister.

Pressure Mounts On Quebec Police

MONTREAL (CP) — Police arrested four more persons under the War Measures Act Friday, bringing the total since Oct. 16 to 469, but reported no luck in the massive manhunt for the terrorist kidnappers of James Cross and Pierre Laporte.

Warrants have been out for five men in the kidnap-strangling of Mr. Laporte, 49, Quebec labor minister. His body was found Oct. 18.

Mr. Cross, also 49, British trade commissioner here, was kidnapped Oct. 5, five days before Mr Laporte, and apparently was still alive the day after the labor minister was slain.

Contents of a note received Tuesday night from the abductors, members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, haven't been divulged by police.

Meanwhile pressure on the police to get results apparently is mounting. In the Commons, Solicitor-General George McIlraith, pressed by the opposition to explain why there have been no breaks in the case, said:

"We often come to this kind of situation during an investigation."

Mr McIlraith said nearly 600 RCMP officers are working with provincial and city police in the manhunt, which involved widespread searches in Montreal and Repentigny, an eastern suburb.

In Quebec, Premier Robert Bourassa also expressed impatience with the lack of results.

Prime Minister Trudeau was seen Friday night at Montreal's Queen Elizabeth Hotel, where Premier Bourassa has a suite, but reporters were unable to confirm whether the two had met. Mr. Trudeau's office said he was visiting his mother and friends.

The federal government is preparing a bill to be introduced in the Commons next week, to supplant the regulations of the War Measures Act.

The regulations, which came into effect Oct. 16, allow police to arrest on suspicion and hold without charge for 21 days. A number of the 122 persons in jail Friday were arrested Oct. 16.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette confirmed Friday that charges of treason, which carries the death penalty or life in prison, and sedition, up to 14 years, may be laid against some.

The Bourassa government, aroused at the Laporte slaying, is said by informed sources to be pressing for suspension of jury trials in the expected FLQ cases.

Mr Bourassa, feeding off criticism that his government was over-reacted in seeking use of the War Measures Act to deal with "a state of aggravated insurrection, said Friday night it would have been "stupefying naivety" to depend on normal methods.

"In times like these we must bypass or eliminate traditional methods," he said in a television interview. "We are fighting a new kind of terrorism—one where a small group can effect a kidnap. It is not easy to fight this form of action.

Thirteen Killed In Train Crash

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Thirteen black South Africans died and 220 more were injured when a crowded commuter train crashed into the rear of a stationary passenger train at Dube station near here today.

By noon, all the injured had been taken to hospital. A spokesman said most received only minor injuries and shock and were released after treatment.

It was likely that no more than 19 or 12 persons would be kept in hospital, he added.

The two trains were carrying black South African workers from the township of Soweto to downtown Johannesburg. The crash happened about 7 a.m. just outside Dube station, which is in the Soweto area.

Early rescue attempts were hampered by angry crowds of blacks who flocked to the scene and began stoning ambulance men trying to free a white driver of one train who was trapped in the cab.

Whistles, boos and shouts broke from hundreds of onlookers when they saw a railway policeman throw a black news photographer to the ground.

Railway police urgently called in reinforcements to control the crowds.

Banks Drop Rate

TORONTO (CP) — It will cost less to get a low-risk loan from Canada's chartered banks starting Monday. At the same time the interest paid on savings deposits also will go down.

In some cases, it will also cost less to get a mortgage loan.

All five major chartered banks announced Friday that their prime rate—the interest charged on loans to their best customers—will be 7½ per cent, down from eight per cent, effective Monday.

The interest paid on non-chequing savings accounts will be reduced to 5½ from six per cent.

Most also reduced the interest on chequing savings accounts to three from 3½ per cent.

The Royal Bank of Canada, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Bank of Nova Scotia and the Bank of Montreal made their announcements Friday.

The Toronto Dominion, which Wednesday announced a prime rate cut to 7½ per cent, fell into line and followed the other banks Friday with a cut to 7½ per cent.

Stiffer Fines for Water Polluters

TORONTO (CP) — Municipalities, corporations or individuals that discharge pollutants into any Ontario waterway will be liable to maximum fines of $2,000 on first conviction—five times the present maximum fine—under a bill introduced Friday by the Ontario government.

The amendments to the Ontario Water Resources Commission Act also provide for a fine of hot more than $10,000 or imprisonment for up to a year, or both, for subsequent convictions.

Any municipality, corporation or person polluting waterways is required to notify the commission and is liable to a maximum fine of $5,000 for failing to do so.

The amendments give the OWRC supervision of all water in the province. At present it is responsible only for water used as a source of supply.

The bill increases the maximum number of members of the commission to 11, from seven and says copies of all OWRC directions, orders, permits reports and approvals can be used as evidence in any court.

Under the amended act, any members of the OWRC, its employees and agents are authorized to enter lands, buildings or boats for the purpose of making surveys or investigations. It will become an offence to obstruct them in performance of their duties and a maximum fine of $200 a day is introduced.

Glory on Show Circuit

Visiting 'Showgirl' Insured for $8,000

A Proud Beauty

If she's a proud pekinese Zu-Zee, here with owner and professional handler Mrs. Susann Hearne, Stittsville, it's not without reason. The finely-bred pet, is now at the height of a championship career — and this weekend joins some 1,100 dogs of top pedigree in Belleville dog show.

Dogs Leading Great Life At Quinte's Biggest Show

By HARRY MULRALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville should go to the dogs this weekend.

That is, if there's enough room left over after all the dogs are in.

As predicted by its organizers the biggest dog show and obedience trial ever staged in Belleville opened a two-day stand in a big way today.

Some 1,100 entries have been registered by owners across Canada and the United States for the dash show organized by the Belleville and District Kennel Club.

As scheduled, the first day's judging got under way at Ben Bleecker Auditorium this morning with some of the continent's finest championship breeds in competition.

Kennel club president Lew Barks was jubilant at the responses which, he said, had met club ambitions when it decided to seek the big show for Belleville.

The show's success seemed assured despite heavy, almost continual rain, which had dropped more than a half-inch of rain on the city by the time the show began.

Inside the auditorium dogs reigned supreme, with owners bustling to provide last minute touchups to a pekinet, well-bred array of Afghans, collies, terriers, St. Bernards, setters and a multitude of other show breeds.

Reason for the overwhelming response, says Mr. Barks, is the scheduling of the show. Staged near the end of the annual show circuit it's spotted midway between shows in Ottawa and Toronto.

Owners intent on picking up points toward their pets' championship status, eagerly responded to the Belleville event.

Local pet lovers also have an opportunity of viewing some of the finest specimens of canine breeding on the continent.

There also is material benefit for the community at large.

One professional dog handler says it is estimated that an average of 2.5 people accompany each dog at such events.

This means hundreds of unexpected customers for motel, hotel, food and other services and consumer industries, he says.

"It brings to the community quite a lot of additional business — an awful lot of business," he said.

Organizing such an event has kept kennel club members working feverishly in recent days. Besides installing show and spectator facilities at the arena, a large 100-foot-long tent had to be erected outside for preshow grooming and last preparation purposes.

Yet, the success of the effort has encouraged club members to look forward to a repeat presentation. Already, says Mr. Barks, the show has been booked again for next year.

Pollution Watchdog Possible

The recent seminar on pollution at Loyalist College may result in a permanent community committee.

A meeting will be called soon to publicly discuss formation of such a group to act as an anti - pollution watchdog in the Belleville area.

The meeting will be held early next month, its chairman Robert Andrus, president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

The council and Loyalist College jointly organized the seminar on pollution three weeks ago.

FELL SHORT

Poland failed to reach a hoped-for five-per-cent increase in economic development last year, achieving only a 2.5-per-cent rise.

Zu-Zee is a showgirl at the height of her career. But there's more to her than good looks and a magnificent fur coat.

She has intelligence, breeding and honors — all in magnificent proportions.

So much so, Zu-Zee, a champion female pekingese, is insured by her owners Alan and Susann Hearne of Stittsville, for $8,000.

Last night she was among hundreds of finely - bred canines being groomed in hotel and motel rooms around Belleville in preparation for today's international dog show.

The event — at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium today and Sunday — is first of its kind on such a major scale here. As such, it gives Bellevillians a glimpse of an activity which is attracting hundreds more participants in Canada each year.

Evidence of that fascination is the huge number of annual pure - bred dog registrations in the country, says Alan Hearne.

In 1945 there were 17,260 dog registrations. By 1965 these had grown to 100,000. Last year they had grown to 145,000.

Neither is there any exclusiveness about the people participating. The competitors are as varied as the species they exhibit.

The Hearnes — a man-and-wife team of professional handlers (Mrs. Hearne is one of only five Canadians licensed as a handler in the United States) must exact a clientele than ranges from company presidents to a carpenter and a mail carrier.

"I think it's a tremendous thing that can be offered to people as a hobby," says Mr. Hearne.

Crucial highlights for the absorbing hobby — and for a hobby are events such as this weekend's dog show competition.

As professionals, the Hearnes can put the hobby's dimension in true perspective.

Exhibiting their own dogs or those of clients takes them annually around North America.

Thus far, this year, Mr. Hearne estimates he and his wife have clocked about 35,000 miles on show circuits that begin in January in Florida, and are now drawing to a close in Canada.

"We find it a very interesting life," he says. "When you walk into an arena you have something in common with every single person in that arena. It's called dogs."

"Because we've been doing this for years there are people in every location that we know. Shows are a sort of an annual visit - and it's great fun."

But it also is a finely-organized pursuit. Since its headquarters in the fine breeding of the animals exhibited, each dog's family tree is a matter of careful record with national kennel club associations.

Every registered animal comes with its own papers and can be easily traced without them.

Once registered, a dog is either tattooed with an individual number — or its nose print taken. Noseprints, says Mr. Hearne, are as individual as fingerprints.

There are more than ordinary reasons for such practices. Theft is not unknown at dog shows.

That's one of the reasons Zu-Zee is insured for $8,000.

However, a stolen dog is almost valueless without its registration papers to identify its breeding. It's offspring cannot be registered.

But getting a dog to the point where it can be exhibited before show judges, is a matter of more than papers.

"Everything is different with each breed of dog and each individual dog," says Mr. Hearne. "A dog is strictly an individual and you must treat them as individual personalities — both physically and mentally."

"You've got to have tremendous respect for dogs whether you're a professional handler or the owner of a pet dog. The first thing that dog must know is that you respect him.

"And when you get to know them you have every reason to respect them, because they are far more intelligent than most of us credit. And they have far more feelings than most of us credit."

Police Recover Part of Explosive

City police today repeated danger warnings as they continued the search for 30 bags of benzoyl peroxide — the remainder of a haul still outstanding after an anonymous tip revealed a cache of the explosive last night.

Added urgency today was given police warnings as heavy rain continued to fall in the city and district. Police say dampness renders the explosive more volatile.

Some 49 one-lb. bags of the explosive — stolen from Lecithin Products Ltd., West Dundas Street — were found by police in nearby bush on Wareham Street, after an anonymous phone call to police headquarters before 4 p.m.

The explosive is so sensitive that simple friction — even dropping it on the ground — could cause a detonation, police believe.

It is contained in one-lb. bags marked Vespo Dry and was stolen from 50-lb. boxes at the Lecithin plant some time this week.

Two bags were quickly recovered — one in possession of two juveniles at Queen Mary Public School, the other near Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School yard.

College Students On Move

Loyalist College students tomorrow stage a 25-mile marathon race around the Belleville area.

The gruelling course starts at the college and winds through Sidney and Thurlow townships to Foxboro, ending at Belleville city hall.

Participating are 25 members of Outward Bound — the college student dedicated to venturesome outdoor activities.

This Hallowe'en It's A Dirty Trick

Quinte weather is giving Hallowe'en 1970 the dirty trick treatment.

The traditional trick-or-treat neighborhood night calls of Quinte's youngsters this year faces a dismal outlook.

The Belleville district today continued to soak in the second day of almost-continual rain.

Up to mid-morning 1¼ inches of rain had fallen on the area in 30 hours, reported the CFB weatherman.

Forecasts called for the soaking — varying in intensity — to continue into the night.

Tomorrow the outlook is for cloudy skies — and showers.

Mr. Ryan said his private and confidential meeting with Mr. Saulnier was to help Le Devoir arrive at an editorial position on the crisis touched off by the kidnappings.

He said he discussed with Mr. Saulnier three hypotheses he mulled earlier in the day by the Le Devoir editorial board.

The world of the journal of the Bourassa government being incapable of handling the crisis, in which case a short-term solution might be establishment of a provisional government, drawn from various political parties and reinforced by other political personalities.

Although he denied there was any plot, Mr. Ryan said it is possible Mr. Saulnier didn't realize they were discussing only a hypothesis.

IN MEMORIAM

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Milton Wood, who passed away Oct. 26, 1967.
Today recalls the Sorrow,

Don't Need It Say Doctors

Board Turns Thumbs Down on Outpatient Service at Hospital

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A permanently - staffed outpatient department at Belleville General Hospital would require the services of at least three doctors — maybe more, the hospital's board of governors was told yesterday by medical staff spokesmen.

Complaints against the present doctors' emergency - call system "are almost groundless" and, while the Belleville area needs more medical men, the district now is receiving better services than many other parts of the province, the board was told.

Among the board members advising against a permanent out-patient unit was Mayor Dr. Russell Scott.

The advice came as statistics showed the caseload at the hospital's emergency unit continued to mount above last year — pressure which has developed despite a recent board meeting in recent months.

By Sept. 30, the emergency unit had recorded 23,300 visits — compared to 18,050 for all 1969.

Contributing to the increase are persons either without family physicians or those using emergency unit to more quickly secure a doctor's attention. This has led the board to publicly caution that the centre is designed for emergencies alone and not as an out-patient clinic service.

Such clinics are standard units at larger, teaching hospitals and when approved are subsidized by the Ontario Hospital's Services Commission. Belleville General does not qualify for such OHSC grants.

However, Ald. Gerald Joyce told yesterday's meeting, Dr. D. J. Twiss, LHSC commissioner of hospitals recently indicated some possible solutions to the Belleville General dilemma. Among them was developing an out-patient staff on a fee-for-service basis.

"But that's what we're doing with 60 doctors now instead of two," countered Mayor Scott. (The mayor later estimated there are about 60 Belleville-area doctors available to the hospital.)

Dr. R. S. Berry said the present system —whereby doctors are now always available for emergency - unit calls — is "working very well."

"There are very very few complaints, and most of the complaints are groundless," he added.

Since a permanently staffed outpatient unit at Belleville General would be ineligible for OHSC grants, setting up such a service would result in "a worse situation than you have now," he said.

For round-the-clock service the hospital would require "at least" three doctors.

"And a fourth for holidays," added Mayor Scott.

Ald. Joyce said the public might query the extent of services available.

"The public in Belleville and area are getting more than 99.9 per cent of the population," said Dr. Berry. "In Belleville and area they are well covered."

Ald. Enos Devlin believed the present emergency - call system should remain untouched.

"It's working well and I think we should leave it as it is," he said.

Mayor Scott indicated that even persons using such an out-patient service might still prefer their own personal doctor to the unit's staff. There was a "personal communication" between doctors and patients not existing in other professional relationships," he said.

Ald. David recalled that Ald. Joyce at earlier board meetings had urged that attempts be made to secure more doctors in the city and district.

The proposal still held merit and it was desirable to follow it through. "If general practitioners are overworked we should get more doctors in Belleville," he said.

The need for more doctors was confirmed by Dr. Peter Scott, reporting on the findings of a special committee set up to review the situation by the hospital's medical advisory committee.

The committee's report, he said, showed a need for more family practitioners and obstetists and an additional psychiatrist.

In an attempt to attract more doctors to the area, letters have been written to the Canadian Medical Association's placement service, said Dr. Scott.

"Beyond that, and word of mouth, there is nothing you can do," he added.

Meantime the board will continue to publicly emphasize the emergency unit's function.

Ambulance Despatching To Be Done by Hospital

Centralized despatch of ambulances throughout Hastings County will be operational early next month.

The services links ambulance units in Belleville, Madoc and Bancroft through a central despatch unit at Belleville General Hospital.

The scheme is part of the province-wide integrated ambulance operations system being developed by the Emergency Health Services Division of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

Ambulance services in the three communities will be linked to the hospital by a radio tower now being installed on the Oak Hills, hospital acting administrator John Kunetsky said.

Starting of the service had been slightly delayed by installation problems, but the system would be operational "in early November," he said.

The service works this way:

Persons needing an ambulance will dial the telephone numbers now listed by ambulance companies. These will be answered at the hospital board and the nearest ambulance despatched.

With publication of 1970 telephone directories, the company numbers will be replaced by a not-toll 3xxxxx number.

The hospital's despatch centre also will have radio contact with similar units in Trenton and Picton and direct lines to local provincial police offices. This facilitates quick contact in the event of large-scale emergencies.

A staff of three will man the despatch centre round-the-clock.

When Mr. Kunetsky reported the details to Belleville General's board of governors yesterday, Ald. Gerald Joyce queried if the hospital had any choice in accepting the service.

"We were asked to do that . . . I don't think we had any choice," replied board chairman Magr. J. P. Sullivan.

Mayor Russell Scott queried if the OHSC had investigated the possibility of using the already existing Emergency - Measures organization network, before installing the ambulance despatch system.

"If they are duplicating, it seems to me a great duplication — at public expense," said the mayor.

Meanwhile, in Quebec...

Doctor Predicts Mass Exodus by June of Next Year

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a highly-successful internist - medical specialist predicts a mass exodus of doctors from the province at the end of the academic year.

"Don't expect them all to go now," he is quoted as saying. "Next June will be the time."

The Varsity reporter says the doctor was in Toronto Friday to transfer his assets to a trust company here.

He was at identified in the story because under Bill 41, passed by the Quebec National Assembly Oct. 16, he could be fined up to $500 and jailed for a month for being away from his practice for a day without a valid reason.

The newspaper says he earns $53,000 annually in Quebec.

He is quoted as saying it is Quebec's medical care proposal and Bill 41, passed to end a 16-day specialists strike in the province, that is driving doctors out, not the threat of FLQ violence.

"I'm more afraid of Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa and Health Minister Claude Castonguay than the separatists.

"I can't work with a gun at my back. I can't accept a law that says work under threat of jail."

The man, good-looking in his late 30s at the peak of his abilities, has a university appointment, a thriving practice and a research project financed by grants totalling more than $75,000 a year.

He is fluently bilingual and so is his wife. Now they are beginning to speak English to their four young children every night at dinner so that the children will not feel so isolated when they go next summer to the United States, Ontario, British Columbia or wherever he finally decides to settle. So far he has had four offers of four top jobs in four major centres in the United States, in addition to offers from various places in Canada, including Toronto.

The doctor turned down a patient last week because he felt too edgy and upset to operate. His surgery involves fine work under a microscope.

"You can't operate when you shake," he shrugged.

He said Premier Bourassa has "overplayed his hand" in assuming that French-speaking doctors at least would be loath to leave because of language difficulties and close family ties.

Virtually all specialists have taken at least one year's post-graduate training outside Quebec. Most were married already so that 95 per cent of their wives have lived outside the province and most are quite willing to go again.

He said that five of the 10 doctors in his own department are planning to leave. The other five include older men not far from retirement. All of these doctors have had experience outside the province. Son of the men senior to him have spent years on university staffs in English - speaking centres in Canada or the United States, at much higher salaries.

"But don't expect them all to go tomorrow or next week. Next June will be the time," he said.

June marks the end of the children's school year and the end of the academic year.

He said he thinks even more English - speaking doctors will leave than the French-speaking most of both languages will be men under 45.

Implications for medical education in Quebec will be serious if this happens.

"I seriously wonder if residents in some of the specialties will finish their courses. . . If there will be enough top men to teach them," he said.

'Outlook Optimistic'

Northern Predicts 100 New Jobs in 1971

Northern Electric yesterday predicted it would add 100 new jobs to its Belleville production schedules next year.

The forecast, by W. A. Thompson, Belleville plant manager, is linked to "a firming of the national economy and an expected sales increase in U.S. markets."

The announcement came the same week Northern's head office announced it was transferring its satellite communications work unit - from Belleville to a new plant at Hull, Que.

"It is apparent from the reports recently published that concern has been caused by the company announcement of the relocation of satellite work from Belleville during the next year," said Mr. Thompson.

"There has been some misinterpretation. I emphasize that we expect work will have to be provided for possibly 39 people now in the satellite program.

During the year there also has been shrinkage of the work force at Northern, the city's biggest employer, now provided some 1,100 jobs.

"Further concern has been expressed over the effect of the overall national economy on the works," said Mr. Thompson.

"While from 1967-68 we have been able to add over 300 people to our plant population, the past eight months has seen shrinkage occur from both attrition and layoff as the economy continues to soften," said Mr. Thompson.

"Our plans for the next year however, see a population growth of approximately 100 people. We see this achieved not only by a firming of the economy but by a determined sales thrust into the U.S. market with our switchboard product line."

The new apparatus is described as a compact, versatile unit, capable of handling more local extensions than current models on the market.

"This i sa unique product designed in Belleville and brought to full production in 1970," said Mr. Thompson.

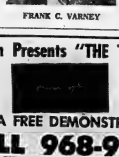
"Generally, our outlook for 1971 is optimistic."

Local AOCO Official Is Going to Hong Kong

Frank C. Varney, marketing manager, consumer products division, with Abercin Optical Corporation, Ltd. has accepted a position with the International Division of AOCO in Hong Kong.

His posting to the east is almost like a return to old haunts for Mr. Varney. Before joining AOCO as sales representative for Cool-Ray Polaroid sunglasses in Oct. 1966, Mr. Varneyy served in Malaysia, Singapore and Slam.

In Feb. 1968 he was appointed to the position he held until his Hong Kong posting.



His new duties, commencing Dec. 1, will be to market AOCO sunglasses throughout Southeast Asia.

Born in Buckinghamshire, England, he has a wife, Maggie, and children Alan, 9, Timothy, 6, and Susan, 3.

Effective Nov. 1, Paul Kennedy will replace Mr. Varney as manager of the Cool-Ray Polaroid Division.

A native of Belleville, Mr. Kennedy is a graduate in business administration from Ryerson Institute of Technology.

Mr. Kennedy joined AOCO Ltd. in March 1965 as a sales representative for the sunglass division, located in Toronto until June of 1967 when he was transferred to Vancouver as sales representative for both the Ophthalmic and Sunglass Divisions in B.C.

Snowmobiling

Snowmobiling is a relatively new winter sport, yet in a short period it has spawned thousands of devotees numerous clubs and in this province a body called the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs.

It has also stirred up among Canadians at large a host of anti-snowmobilers whom the fans feel are motivated by the lunatic behavior of the few rather than the majority who seek to give the fledgling sport a worthier image.

Here is what Henry Flola, editor and publisher of Snowsports had to say in a recent editorial on the subject "You may perhaps be surprised to learn that there is a very real threat to the whole sport of snowmobiling. It may well be that within a few years (or months) local and provincial laws will become so restrictive that you will be unable to operate your snowmobile in many of your favorite areas.

"For example, state and provincial parks. There are those who feel snowmobiles are an intrusion into the woods, and they want to keep them out. And in some communities, non-snowmobilers are so disenchanted with noise, trespassing, careless use on roadways and other examples of mishandling and improper operation that they are increasingly leaning on local politicians to do something about banning or restricting snowmobiles. . . ."

Mr. Flola covers a lot of the ground which has been the subject of complaint in the past winter or two and he concludes: ". . . if you want to do something to preserve the sport as it is, just be sure you are not providing the anti-snowmobilers with ammunition. . ."

There is little we could add to this. Certainly there will be more snowmobiles in operation this winter than ever before. We have heard how valuable they are in the far north, to the native population and officials there. They are a boon to police, doctors and nurses in that region. But to many — and particularly in the more southerly areas where it is merely a sport, it has been demonstrated also to be a dangerous plaything. We would hope that this realization on the part of the sporting public will not continue to spoil the fun of the responsible majority of snowmobilers and at the same time incur further public wrath.

Dangerous Driving

It is not often that we see really dangerous examples of careless driving. That is not to say of course that it is not happening all the time. After all, those accident statistics just do not go away; at the same time we have witness recently to the kind of driving that can result in serious injury or death to drivers.

It was around 9 p.m. on Bridge St. W. when we were passed on the right by a car which then swerved sharply left into our lane, and continued west along Highland Avenue. At the brow of the hill, by the funeral home, the car rocked violently as if it were about to go out of control; but finally it straightened up. It was raining and our lights picked up the leather jackets of four or more teenage boys in the vehicle ahead. We lost sight of it but a minute or two later, approaching the Bay Bridge, a car ahead of us, on the bridge, pulled out sharply and passed another vehicle in face on oncoming cars. The way the driver must be/ driven suggested it could have been the one we observed earlier, but be that as it may both incidents constituted very dangerous maneuvers.

The Workmen's Compensation Board has some good advice in this regard, in an advertisement now appearing in Ontario newspapers. It lists the ways the board assists victims of accidents as well as various boulevards giving further details which are obtainable from the board office at 90 Harbour Street, Toronto 1, and makes this observation: "Prevention is better than compensation. Most important of all, we need everybody to join us in our effort to reduce on-the-job accidents. Accident hazards will always exist; the way to avoid them is to work defensively."

Substitute the word "drive," for "work" and this advice applies equally effectively to the motoring public.

Easy!

Cartoonist Doug Wright has an answer to the current threat of insurrection in Canada. Two men are standing outside a guarded service installation; one is reading a newspaper with news of violence ranging from the FLQ activities to hijackings and 'murders' and he says to his companion: "Seems simple to me . . . pass a new firearms and explosives act and enforce it like we do the liquor laws!"

P.M. and Stanfield Show How It Is Done

Civilized Give-and-Take on Parliament Hill

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Just to cool it, to escape from the crunch of the crisis of terror, slimmer down and quit a casual kidney ache into that quiet retreat, the House of Commons.

It is having its livelier moments, but they are the quintessence of dignity when you recall the high old parliamentary times when Jolting John Diefenbaker and Larrupling Lester Pearson hammered each other with deep-down detestation. .

While Pierre Trudeau and Robert Stanfield may be foes, as Prime Minister and Opposition Leader, opposites in just about any way you might look at them, they have a natural affinity, respect, perhaps even a touch of admiration.

In their personal exchanges across the floor of the Commons they are almost gentle.

Where John and Lester performed as if the House were a ring and they a pair of heavyweights slugging it out for the world championship belt, Pierre and Robert go at it like a couple of tennis stars on the centre court at Wimbledon.

Mr. Stanfield has said he understands and appreciates Mr. Trudeau's difficulties and it's a delicacy of some problems, and the Prime Minister says he is grateful and encouraged by the Opposition Leader's sensitivity and restraint.

It is all such courtesy, so civilized, they even smile — and not at all scurvy — and wave in appreciation of painful points well made.

Neither has ever flared up in temper.

Mr. Stanfield has yet to thunder in outrage — wryly he is known as "Big Thunder" by almost everyone on Parliament Hill.

And Mr. Trudeau has still to pout and throw himself back in his seat in a spoiled-boy sulk.

Even when they are engaged in a cross-fire — and "fire" is scarcely the word for their cool words — on the floor of the Commons they somehow contrive to make it sound, and read, like a patter from Gallagher and Shean or Martin and Lewis.

Like:

Trying to spell out the Conservative approach to the hotly controversial question of foreign investment in Canada Mr. Stanfield allowed it had to be "flexible," sensible, efficient and preserve our autonomy."

Mr. Trudeau: I go for that.

Mr. Stanfield: It must be based on careful and continuing study —

Mr. T.: Good. Good.

Mr. S.: — to decide —

Mr. T.: Yes, yes.

Mr. S.: — which are the industries —

Mr. T.: Right.

Mr. S.: — and which are the sectors of our economy —

Mr. T.: Sure, sure.

Mr. S.: — where Canadian ownership is vital —

Mr. T.: Name them.

Mr. S.: — and where it is less so.

Mr. T.: Good. Exactly.

Mr. S.: The Prime Minister asks me to name them.

Mr. T.: Yes. Please do.

Mr. S.: The Prime Minister may be quite content to talk off the top of his head. But I am saying this is a process into which we would enter carefully.

Mr. T.: The Hon. Opposition Leader has not yet done that.

Mr. S.: The decision should be made on the basis of careful and continuing study.

Mr. T.: Good. Good. Hear, hear!

Mr. S.: It is the only way we can escape from the present pattern of confusion —

Mr. T.: There is no confusion.

Mr. S.: — and of potential injustice. It is not an easy task, but it must be done; otherwise, we shall continue going blindly down the path to nowhere.

Mr. T.: Where are you heading?

Mr. S.: There are some areas of business enterprise in Canada where the importance of Canadian control would be very ill fled. There are others where it would be vital, as in for example, television and certain other areas already designated. You, there may be others as well.

Mr. T.: But the Hon. Member does not know what they are.

Mr. S.: I am suggesting we follow a pattern to obtain a sensible result.

Mr. T.: The Hon. Member is suggesting a White Paper.

Mr. S.: It does not mean a White Paper. It means we move in a concrete way.

Mr. T.: No doubt a Concrete Paper is meant.

And so it went on its fast-paced merry way, not making much sense on either side, but compelling attention and providing some chuckles in appreciation of quick patter.

Fascinating thing was how straight Mr. T. and Mr. S. kept their faces, how even their voices, how calm their manner.

It was almost like Bob Hope and Bing Crosby on the Road to Ridickle-Dockle.

Anglo-French armed forces began bombing Egyptian military bases 14 years ago today—in 1956—with the declared intention of protecting the Suez Canal from Israeli invasion which began the previous day. Egypt rejected an ultimatum and paratroopers were dropped into the canal zone Nov. 5, hours before Paris and London agreed to break off fighting. Later it became clear the incident had been planned to counteract President Nasser's recent expulsion of Suez Canal's European pilots. The first United Nations emergency force, under Gen. E. L. M. Burns of Canada, was formed to supervise evacuation of the invaders.

Beauty Is Where You Find It

Yes, the scene is Belleville, amid low-lying, largely deserted and in places, marshy, terrain. It is fringe country between the tracts and the city's east hill-residential area. Overlooking it, on a rise, are new low-rental housing units, but aside from them there are only a handful of older homes by the roadside. Real estate signs however testify to the land's potential. Some sections will never change, like the swale from which a young couple select bullrushes for interior decorating. Beauty is where you find it and who knows, what they are doing perhaps has never been done before, in this particular spot — the bottom of Herchimer Avenue. It is a sort of no-man's land — given momentary significance by the hand of youth.

Women to the Fore In Africa and Asia

From The Globe and Mail

More women, per capita, hold important executive positions in Eastern and African countries than in Canada, Dorothy Thompson, foreign representative of Zonta International, said she has come to this conclusion after working as a Zonta Club organizer since 1965. She left recently for New Zealand where she will spend the next three months establishing clubs for the international organization.

In June, Miss Thompson returned to Toronto from Africa where she had spent the previous six months putting into operation seven Zonta clubs in independent African countries. In 1963 she set up four clubs in the Philippines. There are now Zonta clubs in nine eastern countries and eight African countries. To qualify for membership a woman must hold an executive position or have a profession.

Miss Thompson says of her work in the East and Africa, "I am not only impressed by the number of women holding high positions in government and private enterprise, but by their quiet vigor, independence and youthfulness. Some of the African women, in particular, are tremendously young and very beautiful."

Miss Thompson says that the most outstanding African women she has met were educated either in England or the United States. "Although," she said, "some enterprising African women have been educated wholly in their own countries, where splendid educational systems exist, the majority of the leaders, notably, Britain, before the countries became independent."

Quebec Unemployment

Montreal Gazette

The rate of unemployment in Quebec was reduced in September to 6.3 per cent from 7.1 per cent in August. The principal cause was the return to school. The number of persons working was reduced by 51,000 to 2,188,000; the number of those without jobs and looking for them was reduced by 34,000.

This appearance of improvement is misleading. After adjustments for seasonal factors, the rate of unemployment remains 8.9 per cent, the same as in July and August and 1.2 percentage points higher than a year ago. The fact that can be said is that it hasn't worsened in the last three months after having risen since the beginning of the year.

Quebec can't be isolated from overall economic trends in the country although it does have the cushioning effect of regional development measures. Much of that light which Prime Minister Benson proposes to obtain by tight spending and make-work will find its way into Quebec. But such measures can't be made to substitute indefinitely for the lack of growth in productive industries, a condition which is existing across the whole country.

The federal government, it is suggested, has been taken aback by the rise in the national rate of unemployment to 6.9 per cent from 6.7 per cent. The end of strikes in British Columbia and the return to school was expected to reduce the rate. It looks now as if projections of a 9 per cent unemployment rate in mid-winter may not be far out.

Foreign Workers

German Features

WIESBADEN — A total of 2.4 million foreigners were living in west Germany last year, according to the Wiesbaden Federal Office of Statistics. The figure, from September 1969, represents an increase of 457,- 000 or 23.7 percent more than for the same month in 1968.

The majority were foreign workers attracted to west Germany by its continued economic prosperity. The Italians led with 315,000, followed by Yugoslavians (333,000). Turks (322,000), and Greeks (271,000).

A Time For Prayer

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

During the war the people of Great Britain paused daily at 9 p.m., at the stroke of 'Big Ben' for prayer. May I suggest that with Canada in such turmoil, Christians everywhere, collectively, pray daily at 9 p.m.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

Men, Women and Midis

Letter to the Hamilton Spectator

O thou poor depraved businessmen and travelling executives! It's just terrible! Air Canada has decided to dress its stewardesses in midis. It makes them look like "flying fraternity" and they're lowviewing to the wishes of the fashion dictatorship (Spectator, Women's Page, October 23).

Honestly, these gentlemen make me sick. Firstly, if they and many others like them persist in such sexist discrimination I'm going to join Women's Lib! The Women's Liberation Movement is not kidding when they say women are being treated like "cattle on display" and used merely as "sex objects."

I don't blame CP Air for changing over to the midi one bit. The stewardesses can now serve meals and drinks in flight without having to watch out for the flying fickle finger of fate. Besides, what they wear really is not going to change the smile on their faces or the courteous and friendly service they provide to their customers.

Help stamp out sexually immature men!

National Poppy Campaign

Legion Magazine

With Remembrance-time approaching, Legion Magazine again focuses attention on one of the important activities of our organization — the National Poppy Campaign.

This November it will be 43 years since the custom of wearing a poppy replica for remembrance was inaugurated in Canada. From a modest beginning in 1921, the custom has become general throughout the country, and this year — with careful preparation and planning by Legion branches everywhere — millions of Canadians will be wearing the familiar symbol.

Remembrance and the Poppy are irrevocably bound together because the memory of Canada's fallen can best be honored by ensuring that none of their comrades or their dependants still living is allowed to suffer want and distress. Poppy Day has become the one annual appeal which the Legion makes to the public to provide funds for the relief of necessitous war veterans and their families.

There are three distinct phases to the observance of remembrance through the poppy. First, there is the act of Remembrance itself, symbolized by wearing the emblem derived from blood-red poppies which grew in such profusion on the Flanders. The wearing of the poppy and the display of wreaths in churches and store windows are tributes to those who paid the supreme sacrifice in all the wars in which this country has been engaged.

Second, there is the way in which the — now standard — poppy the Poppy Campaign is spent. It is a firm rule that the proceeds derived from the Poppy Campaign must be spent on the relief of distress among ex-servicemen and their dependants.

Third, there is the employment provided for disabled veterans who make the poppies under the supervision of the Department of Veterans Affairs. Since the inception of the Poppy Campaign on a national scale the Legion has had a contract with the Department of Veterans Affairs for the manufacture of "Veterans" poppies and wreaths, thus ensuring a livelihood for the men employed in these shops.

'Righteousness Revolution' Seen By Former Country Minister

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the dropouts, potheads and hippie gauge, he's considered a okay guy. They trust him, even though he wears a necktie. He's devoted to them, too. And he now sees in them the beginnings of a "righteousness revolution" in the United States.

"It's going to be the biggest thing that ever hit this country," says Rev. David Wilkerson, a one-time country minister whose work among dope addicts, runaways and delinquents now extends across the country, ten.

"They're looking for a charismatic experience, for a spiritual source, and this is turning into a mass movement," he says.

"It's a genuine religious awakening and it's going on all over the country. The signs of it have never been greater."

Wilkerson, 39, a warm, handsomely engaging man with dark curling sideburns framing his blue eyes, is the founder and director of Teen Challenge, a sprawling network of centers working with troubled youngsters.

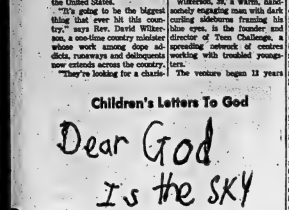
The venture began 12 years ago when the minister, an Assemblies of God pastor in Philipsburg, Pa., went to New York to try to help seven youngsters on trial for murder. Chance incidents drew him into the desperate, harrowing lives of youths in the Brooklyn slums.

He has since left them alone on a widening scale, an evangelist to the wayward young. God loves you, he tells them, despite their frequent scorn. That love, he says, "sees beyond the stupidity, the four-letter words, the long hair, the rebellion, the hate and the bowdy, revolting hearts."

His story, told in his book The Cross and the Switchblade, which has sold five million copies in 12 languages, now has been made into a taut and engrossing motion picture of the same name.

Pat Boone, in the minister's role, says it sharpened his own Christian convictions. Released by Dick Ross Associates, a new company committed to quality films, it focuses on the whole dope-hooked gang and the strange impact of Wilkerson's concern for them, despite their threats.

His original makeshift centre in Brooklyn has grown into a multi-million dollar with a $1 million annual budget, including a 186-room apartment house where ex-addicts stay until they regain stability.



The enterprise also has 27 other centres for addicts and delinquents in the U.S. and abroad, plus a girls' home in Garrison, N.Y., a retraining school in Rhinebeck, N.Y., and three rehabilitation farms in Pennsylvania, Missouri and California.

The minister says the young increasingly are resisting drugs, particularly in urban areas, with the problem now shifted mainly to the suburbs. He said black radicals and underground papers denounce drugs as an establishment plot to undermine the revolution."

Whatever the arguments, he tells them, using drugs "is an admission of being lost."

"There's a better way to go."

Pope Preparing For Longest Trip

VATICAN CITY. (Reuter) — Pope Paul is the jet age Pope. Since he came to the throne seven years ago, he has made seven major air trips to five continents.

Now arrangements have been made for the frail, 72-year-old pontiff to make his longest and most testing journey yet. In late November he will fly to the other end of the world to visit the Philippines and Australia.

The Pope started his series of air pilgrimages in January, 1964, with a historic trip to the Holy Land. That same year he flew to Bombay, in 1965 to New York, in 1967 to Portugal and Turkey, in 1968 to Colombia and last year to Uganda.

Pope Paul is scheduled to arrive in the Philippines capital of Manila Nov. 27 and spend three days there. Then he will travel to Sydney, Australia, for a four-day visit, leaving there Dec. 3rd.

The official program provides for visits to only two cities — Manila and Sydney—but it will certainly be an exhausting trip, with huge crowds expected to press around him during every public appearance.

Surprisingly, the Pope has tended to return from his foreign trips looking fresher than when he left.

Sources close to him say the Pope has great reserves of nervous energy and tends to thrive on the direct contact with ordinary people that is always a dominant feature of his trips.

But there is still some concern about how he will stand up to the unprecedented amount of flying involved in his Far Eastern trip. Sources say there is more provision than usual for him to rest during the journey.

The Pope now flies on the papal plane buys his own ticket, and that includes the Pope himself. He pays the same amount as the 40 to 50 journalists who fly with him.

When chartering a plane for the Pope, the Vatican makes few special requirements. All it asks is that a small area of the first-class compartment be curtained off for the Pope's use, so that he can have a little privacy.

This usually involves taking out a couple of seats and, depending on the length of the journey, putting in a bed.

The rest of the first-class compartment is taken up by the Pope's personal retinue.

Pope Paul has modest tastes, and this is reflected in the flight arrangements. His meals are usually simple—soup, boiled fish, fruit and perhaps half a glass of rose wine.

He works during most of the flights, touching up the prepared speeches he will make on arrival or calling in all editorial to check his pronunciation when the speech is in a foreign language.

He always dresses, washes and shaves himself.

When he is not working, the Pope reads his breviary or a book or chats with his officials.

Thurlow Neighbors' Aid Marks 40th Anniversary

2nd THURLOW — The 40th anniversary of the 2nd Thurlow Neighbors' Aid was marked at a celebration in their hall when a large number gathered for a potluck supper. The main table was centred with a beautiful anniversary cake made for the occasion by Mrs. Jim Dowdle.

The president Mrs. Robert Atkins extended a welcome to everyone and community singing was enjoyed with Mrs. M. Mitchell at the piano.

Stewart Ray was chairman for the program which followed and this was opened with the history of the Neighbors' Aid given by Mrs. A. Mitchell. She stated that when the old Methodist Church was closed, Mrs. J. Donaldson saw the need for an organization to keep friends and neighbors together in the community. During wartime the group sent many parcels overseas as well as doing a number of quilts; also many acts of kindness for those in need.

A humorous skit was presented by Ralph Prentice and Jack Chambley in women's fashions. Mr. and Mrs. Manley Mitchell favored with a cornet and piano duet. A kazoo band also entertained during the evening.

To conclude the program Mr. and Mrs. Percy Dobbie showed slides of their recent tour of the British Isles.

Mrs. Atkins presented the chartered members with centrepieces and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Greatrix were presented with a gift on the occasion of their 55th wedding anniversary.

The president expressed thanks for all who had helped with the program and particularly to Mrs. Sam Peoples for her assistance.

WINDS OF CHANCE

"When a certain style has been around for a while it is certain to induce boredom — and a reaction in the opposite direction." — Bernadine Morris.

Are you in favor of the maxi ?
Do you think it is here to stay ?

"What," we enquire of Blanche Payne's History of Costumes, (Harper and Row Publishers), "brings, influences, ushers in, a new fashion in women's clothes?"

"When various dressmakers," we are told, "come up with the same idea, at the same time, they shrug it off saying, 'It's in the air.' Now this could be. The secret of fashionable dressmaking is a sense of timing."

"But from hence do the winds of change blow?"

"Well — it is surprising how often they blow from a war; a battle. When Charles the Bold of Burgundy was overpowered by the Swiss in Nancy, in 1477 the victorious soldiers slashed their tents and colorful belongings to pieces with which they patched their own torn clothes. This multicolored costume of fact captured the eye of the folks back home and lo! — a late 15th century new fashion was born.

"Again, some 11th century French soldiers quickly tied their cravats and put the ends through a buttonhole, when surprised by an early morning enemy attack. This 'tieless-tie' was imitated by civilians in honor of their victory.

"Note also, how World War II's Eisenhower's waist-length jacket and Winston Churchill's one - piece jumpsuit became civilian fashions. And after the war, the 1947 New Look by the late Christian Dior brought relief from uniforms and rigid patriotic economy. The romantic femininity — wasp waists, near ankle-length skirts — appealed to women.

"Is there any style through the ages that has lasting appeal?"

"Yes — the Greeks — with a dress of simple squares or rectangles of fabric, wrapped around the body which demanded skill from the wearer rather than from the seamstress. The draped garments seen on statues and vases of Greek figures have never been surpassed in grace and dignity."

"Are style origins always accounted for?"

"Well it is difficult to account for the reason which induced 18th century women to wear their hair stiffened with flour and water to maintain such decorations as a model of a ship in full sail. Or why 14th century men wore shoes with 1½ foot long points which made mere walking dangerous.

"And why both men and women endured such amazingly heavy clothes to wear. One woman not recently an early 1800's went home after attending a dress - reform lecture and weighed her clothes. She found she was wearing a burden of 40 pounds."

All of which is a far cry from today's functionalism so dominant in women's fashion consisting of the mini-skirt and mini-dress.

Do you feel if we are to trust the past, that the maxi is . . . is . . . not . . . too . . . far away?

Water Pollution Existed Throughout 19th Century

Water pollution existed as a domestic problem throughout the 19th century. Chlorination was first applied to municipal water systems in England in 1800, although for a different reason than it is used now. It was intended in those days to clarify the water rather than purify it. Alum was used for the same purpose.

In 1827 Dr. Richard Bright discovered Bright's disease, and believed it was spread by communal pumps and drinking fountains. One of the results of this discovery was the removal of communal drinking cups.

The connection between water and water borne diseases became public knowledge very slowly in the 19th century. Water was recommended as a beverage, home brewed ale was considered safer, and after 1840 coffee was known in medical circles at the end of the 18th century that boiled water guarded against cholera and typhus. Clarification of water remained unpopular in the public mind.

Most potteries made water purifiers in the middle of the 19th century for home and public use. Purifiers strain the water, sometimes through unglazed clay filters, sometimes through charcoal. Most are made in sections so they can be cleaned. Their utility is questionable. After an hour's wait, a purifier would supply a thin trickle of water. If the purifier had been in use for any period the water was kept with a flat brackish flavor.

Nevertheless most households had a water purifier which later in the century was advertised as cooling as well as purifying. The majority of purifiers are large and decorative with a variety of embossed detail. Frequently incorporating the royal arms like the one illustrated. "Slack Water Filter, Halse, Manchester, Established 1830".

(Picture Credit: Dundurn Castle Restoration)

Most were made for wooden spigots.

Water purifiers were made in Canada. Some of the early pieces of the Brantford Pottery were founded for water. In 1862 Joseph Brown of Carlton West, near Toronto, won a prize at the Toronto Exhibition for his pottery which included three domestic water filters.

Joseph Brown was the son of a potter, John Brown, who came to Canada in 1849 and settled in Bowmanville. In 1850 John Brown won a prize at Niagara for his earthenware. Both sons, Joseph and his brother William, worked in the earthenware business with their father, and continued the business until about 1880, 14 years after John's death.

Water purifiers now sell for their decorative merits and prices are hard to determine. Those with removable filters have some utility as crocks and fetch the same price as crockery churns — up to $35. Water purifiers are frequently mistaken for, and listed as apothecary jars, because of the fitting for a spigot. It is unlikely that they were ever used for such a purpose.

Poem Says 'Whatever Is, Is Right'

By DORIS CLARE

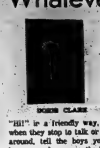
WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT

"All Nature is but art unknown to thee;
All chance, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good;
And spite of pride in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear, Whatever is, is right."
—from Pope's Essay on Man.

Is it possible? When I think of some of the things happenings which turn individuals into completely undreamed-of new paths, I can say, Yes. But it takes a high degree of acceptance to believe that whatever is, is right.

If so, then our biggest job is to figure out how best to work with whatever it is.

Dear Doris: I am a 17-year-old girl and wonder where my father works. You see, I have nice long hair and a beautiful figure, and all the guys that work there like to talk to me.



Every time they talk to me my father gets mad and yells at me. He thinks they're treating me like a loose woman but I don't think this is true. I think they talk to me because I am just friendly and a fun-loving girl.

Every day I'm scared that something might happen and my father might start hitting me right in front of all the people, or he might beat up somebody because he's really jealous of me. I try not to talk to them but after all I can't just work all day and not say a word, can I? — Fun-Loving Girl.

Dear Girl: It's great to be popular — off the job. What kind of a spot do you suppose it puts your dad in, when you keep the boys from doing their work?

Remember, he supports you all year round and depends on his job to do it. He depends on you to set a good example.

Nothing wrong with saying

DORIS CLARE

"Hi!" in a friendly way, but when they stop to talk or loaf around, tell the boys you're busy — and anyway, the boss is watching!

A Repeat of Mincemeat Recipe

By MARY MOORE

Thank You from Mary Moore to all generous readers who came to my rescue when I sent out an SOS for Aristocrat Pickles. You were a great help to me and I am sure Mrs. R. F. appreciates you too. I have forwarded all Aristocrat Pickle recipes that you sent to me to her.

ATTENTION: A.M.M. who requested Monster Dough: If you will send us your name and address on a stamped envelope and 10 cents we will forward to you the response we have received from readers after my appeal to them in this column on Sept. 26. Initials are never sufficient.

QUESTION: Please repeat your excellent Mincemeat recipe from Dec. 1968. — Lettie D.

ANSWER:

HOMEMADE MINCEMEAT
(makes 4 shallow 8" two-crust pies or 2 deep 10" pies)

5 cups ground (or chopped) apples, washed, quartered, cored (and peeled)
1 lemon cut into eighths and seeded
2 cups granulated sugar
1-3 cups finely chopped beef suet, (about 7 oz. — see note below)
½cup (well packed) mixed cut peel, (one 4-oz. pkge.)
1 cup currants
1 cup seeded Muscat raisins
½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg or mace
½ tsp. cloves
½ tsp. salt
One 15-oz. can pitted red (sour) cherries (45 per cent sugar syrup)
1 cup chopped walnuts (optional but recommended)

I used nine medium large McIntosh apples. Put apple quarters and cut lemon through coarse knife of food grinder (together with note below). (Incidentally — a four - cup Pyrex measuring cup when filled to the brim — above the four-cup marking line — holds five cups or a Canadian quart. I used mine that way to measure the chopped apples. The lemon went in for good measure.) Turn ground mixture into a large kettle, add all remaining ingredients, except cherries and nuts and boil gently ½ hr. covered, stirring frequently. Add cherries and nuts and boil gently twenty minutes longer, stirring frequently. Store covered in refrigerator or pour into four sterilized pint jars and seal.

NOTE: It is much better to make four shallow 8" mince pies using 1 pt. or 2 cups of mincemeat than to make two 10" deep mince pies. The mincemeat needs a large proportion of pastry as a contrast to its richness. Bake a two-crust shallow 8" mince-pie at 425 deg. F.(abr. for 25 min., or until bubbling and golden, longer for deep 10". Remember it! If desired chop apples instead of grinding. I ground mine to speed up the process. 2) Usually butchers package chopped suet for Christmas baking in 1-lb. lots. Do not buy a pound. Ask the butcher to weigh 7 oz. for you, for leftover suet is a problem to use up.

Ann Landers

'Planned Parenthood' Group Not Guilty

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago I approached my doctor about a vasectomy. He said he would send some material in the mail so I could better understand what I was asking. A few days later I received an envelope from "Planned Parenthood."

These Waigh-Dugan Family People's Business sent, free of charge, a form prying into my personal life. They wanted to know how many children I had, their ages, my financial status, etc. They didn't ask why we didn't want more children, but offered to "review my request." It was very considerate of them, they would direct me to a doctor and recommend that I have the operation.

I scribbled across the form that my personal life was none of their business and I hoped they would find something better to do with their time and funds. Tell me, Ann, what kind of a Planned Parenthood doing in this sect? — AGE OF AQUARIUS.

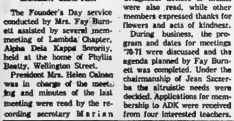
ANN LANDERS

DEAR AGE: The Chicago Chapter of Planned Parenthood knows nothing of such forms and they are as baffled as I. Please send me a copy of the form I will look into it. Planned Parenthood is an extremely fine national organization. If some local chapter is muddying the image, the Board of Directors wants to know about it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in response to the woman who asked, "Must a parent like his children to appreciate him?" I am a teen-ager who is asking the same question — in reverse. Does a kid have to die before his parents appreciate him? I mean appreciate what he is, not what they would like him to be.

If my parents love me it is because they brought me into the world and for no other reason. They don't know me well enough to love me for what I am because they don't know what I am. My parents are decent, upper-middle-class people who, like most other decent, upper-middle-class Americans, want their daughters to graduate from college and have a degree so they can teach school if they don't succeed in finding themselves. For their sons they want successful careers as doctors or lawyers.



I would dearly love to know my parents and have them know me but we live in different worlds and speak different languages. I've tried to scale the wall that separates us, but it is too high. I can't make it. — NORTH SHORE.

DEAR NORTH: If you could peer through that wall you would probably see two decent, upper-middle-class parents who are also trying to scale the wall. They are older than you and it's a much longer climb for them.

There's a door in that wall — one you've passed dozens of times but didn't realize was there. Look for it. And turn the knob gently. It's open.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I don't know what's wrong with Barbara. She loved school last year but all at once she isn't happy there. I'm so busy with the baby, I really don't have time to cope with a problem like this."

Mother: "Barbara may think the baby and I are having a wonderful time at home, and she's left out of the fun. I'll try to give her more attention when she is home, so she won't feel like a displaced person."

A change in the family scene, such as a new baby, may be reflected in a 6-year-old's attitude toward school. Ease the child through this temporary disturbance with understanding and as much special attention as you can give her.

Nixon Appeals for Stand Against Violence

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon, calling Tuesday's election "probably the most important and decisive Senate election" in United States history, has appealed to the nation for a vote of confidence for himself and his programs.

"Vote for those men who will vote for the president rather than against him so that the president can keep his promises to you, the American people," Nixon told 4,000 Republican partisans in Anaheim Convention Centre and television viewers across the country Friday night.

The Republican national committee purchased network time for a telecast of the speech in the wake of Thursday night's incident at San Jose, Calif., in which rocks, bottles and eggs were hurled at the president.

Nixon had said "the time has come to take the gloves off" and that he would discuss in the Anaheim speech "what America must do to end this wave of violence and terrorism." But he gave a toned-down version of the same basic speech he has been delivering in political swings about the country.

The president said, in referring to the San Jose incident, that "it's time to draw the line" against violent demonstrators and that the Republican candidates for whom he has spoken have taken a strong stand against "this kind of lawlessness and this kind of violence."

Nixon appealed to voters to "stand with those men who understand the issues."

The Anaheim appearance was designed principally to bolster the re-election campaign of Senator George Murphy. The program was opened by Gov. Ronald Reagan, a strong favorite for re-election over Democrat Jess Unruh.

His biggest applause came when he said the picture of youthful protesters shown on U.S. television screens gives a false impression.

"They're not a majority of American youth today and they will not be the leaders of America tomorrow," the president said.

He also drew applause when he said: "In a system that provides a method for peaceful change, there is no cause that justifies a resort to violence or lawlessness in the United States".

CN Subsidy Bid Is $40 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Railways applied to the Canadian transport commission Friday for passenger train subsidies that could cost taxpayers up to $40 million a year based on current figures.

The Crown-owned railway asked for subsidies to reduce losses on its transcontinental passenger services, including trains between Maritime points and Montreal and from Montreal and Toronto to Vancouver.

The application referred to a recent decision by the transport commission disallowing an application by Canadian Pacific Railway to scrap The Canadian, its Montreal-Vancouver transcontinental passenger train.

Since that decision last June 18, CP Rail had been eligible for a federal government subsidy of up to 80 per cent of losses sustained for keeping the train in operation. In applying for abandonment, CP Rail said The Canadian lost $15 million in 1969, latest full year for which figures were then available, making it for which figures were then available, making it $12 million.

France Breaking Uranium Pact

BRUSSELS (AP) — France has been told to relax secrecy about its supplies and sales of enriched uranium—including some that could be used for nuclear weapons—or risk being brought before the European Court of Justice on charges of treaty violations.

President Franco Maria Malfatti of the European Common Market Executive Commission has given France until the end of November to comply with a treaty set up by the European Atomic Energy Community.

The pact requires its signers to furnish yearly reports on mineral prospecting, production, reserves and investments.

The next step in the procedure normally would be court action, but a French spokesman said there may still be delays and the case could be dropped entirely.

The European Atomic Energy Community, which deals in nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, is made up of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Its supply agency has the exclusive rights to contract for fissionable materials, which normally are used in electric power plants but can be further refined for use in bombs.

Malfatti says France has refused to make the reports since 1964 and has traded in uranium without telling the organization. But France says the sections of the treaty cited by Malfatti are no longer in effect and never have been fully enforced.

Issues Local In Byelections

OTTAWA (CP) — The biggest current national issue is not expected to be a major issue in three federal byelections, Monday, Nov. 18.

The contests will be held in two Quebec ridings, Frontenac and Labelle, and in the Manitoba constituency of Lisgar.

The keenest fight is expected to be in Frontenac, won by the Creditistes in the 1968 general election. The Liberals are making a big run at getting the seat back.

Spokesmen for all parties say it would be an amazing double upset if the Liberals do not retain Labelle and the Conservatives Lisgar.

The Liberals and Conservatives will have candidates in all three contests. The Creditistes will enter candidates in the Quebec ridings and possibly in Lisgar. The New Democrats will contest only Lisgar.

Party spokesmen say local issues will dominate the byelection campaigns and that apparently little or no effort will be made to support or condemn Ottawa's proclamation of the War Measures Act to fight Quebec terrorists.

Saints Blank Trenton to Cop Senior Crown

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

It's a pretty good bet that if some of the Quinte seniors' defence had been thrown into the Roman Coliseum arena, the ancient Christians vs. Lions "ballgames" might just have had a different outcome.

Certainly the defending Bay of Quinte football champions' defensive crew was more than equal to the occasion in Friday's Saints vs. Tigers 'title match' as they hung a 22-0 loss on Trenton.

Trenton displayed an out-

GREG WHITE

standing defence of their own, that was responsible for only one of the Saint scores as the two teams played excellent football, considering the condition of Quinte's muddy, rain-swept grounds.

The two squads spent most of the first half swapping defensive heroics as they first one and then the other would rebuff the enemy offence.

The Tigers' twice halted threatening Saint marches in the early going, once when Chris Hyatt recovered a Paul McQuaid fumble on the 30 - yard line, and the other time holding on downs at their own 22.

McQuaid broke the scoring ice late in the opening quarter darting around left end for a 46 - yard touchdown on a wingback reverse. Much of the Saints early yardage came on similar counters to McQuaid and Ralph Lepore as Quinte attempted to nullify the Trenton pursuit.

Right end Bob Lee made it 8-0, going over from the 1-foot mark, for a Rick Meagher's throw for the two - point conversion.

In the second quarter it appeared as though the Saints would add to their lead as they marched all the way to the Trenton six - yard line.

After an offside penalty had moved the ball back to the 11-yard line, Terry Meagher put the winners in excellent scoring position following a key block by Brian Hennessey, on a screen play, to the one-foot mark.

A second - down line plunge by Paul Hall, was held for no gain and, finally, John Davy and Jim Ransom combined to give Trenton the ball by throwing fullback Rick Graham for a one - yard loss.

Terry Meagher came up with the big defensive play for Quinte, intercepting an option pass on his own 1 - yard line with one minute-remaining in the half.

The Quinte safety also accounted for the touchdown that pretty much put Trenton out of the running when he followed a wall of grey sweaters for a 49 - yard touchdown on a punt return mid - way through the third quarter.

Brother Rick Meagher completed his second two-point conversion when he slit end Bill Kirkham in the end zone to make it 16-0.

Trenton's only other offensive threat died when a fumbled snap, a loss on a screen attempt and an incomplete pass by Don Farrell turned the ball over to Quinte on their own 25 - yard line.

Perhaps the finest tribute to the Quinte defence was the fact that they were able to hold Trenton fullback Dan Dow to only 24 yards rushing in 22 attempts. They combined to throw the Trenton star for losses on four different occasions.

Flanker Duncan Armstrong was the only other serious Trenton threat. The speedy flanker burned corner - linebacker Brian Hennessey for a 49 - yard gain on a reverse in the second quarter, and caught Trenton's only completed pass, making a spectacular grab of a 23 - yard option throw from Dow.

Quinte's offensive line was superb in splitting the blocking load. In the first half, most of the Saint gains went off left tackle, where guard Greg White and tackle Bill Skinner were opening big holes. White did an especially fine job on standout defensive tackle John Davy.

Durring the final 30 minutes of play, Quinte switched to the right side, where tackle Tom Helm and guard Brian Hennessey were paving the way.

The excellence of Quinte's offensive blocking was shown by the yardage spread among the Saints' starting - running backs. Fullback Paul Hall led all ground gainers with 128 yards on 26 carries, while running mate Rick Graham bulldozed his way for 96 yards in 18 attempts. Wingbacks Paul McQuaid (62 yds. in ten attempts) and Ralph Lepore (37 yds. in six carries) were also highly effective.

Passing was never a factor in the game for either team

DUNCAN ARMSTRONG with Meagher completing only three of 12 throws and Trenton hitting on only one of 11 attempts.

Standouts on defence for the winners were end Steve Whalen, linebacker Ken Yee and safety Terry Meagher.

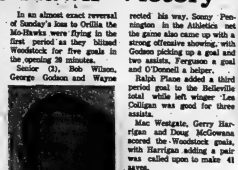
Whalen was the player responsible for Quinte's final score blocking a Chris Long punting attempt on the Trenton one-yard line to set up Paul Hall for the final touchdown.

The tough defensive end was forced to leave the game with a fourth-quarter leg injury.

Yee was one of the main men responsible for containing Dow and Meagher added some effective safety blitzes to his interception and touchdown run.

Linebacker Brian Hennessey was a standout for the Trenton defence that thwarted many Quinte scoring chances.

The Saints now meet the second place finishers in the Lake Ontario District for the right to move into the OSSA finals.



Senior Hat Trick Paces 8-3 Mo-Hawk Victory

After last night's 8-3 win over the Woodstock Athletics it appears that the best "move" shown by a Mo-Hawk player didn't occur on the ice.

It was, instead the shift that switched centre Doug Senior from the Kingston Aces to a red-and-white Belleville sweater. The 25-year-old centre, who counted 36 points in Senior A play last season, embellished his move with an assist to lead the Mo-Hawks to their win over the last place Athletics.

In an almost exact reversal of Sunday's loss to Orillia the Mo-Hawks were flying in the first period as they blitzed Woodstock for five goals in the opening 20 minutes.

Senior (2), Bob Wilson, George Godson and Wayne

DOUG SENIOR

McConnell all hit the scoresheet in the first period.

Back-of the blueline, Steve Rear turned aside five of the 41 shots that Woodstock directed his way. Sonny Pennington in the Athletics' net the game also came up with a strong offensive showing, with Godson picking up a goal and two assists, Ferguson a goal and O'Donnell a helper.

Ralph Plaxe added a third period goal to the Belleville total while left winger Les Culligan was good for three assists.

Mac Westgate, Gerry Harrigan and Doug McGowan scored the Woodstock goals, with Harrigan adding a pair was called upon to make 41 saves.

The Godson - O'Donnell - Ferguson line, re - united for assists to his total.

Each team drew a total of 13 penalties including majors to Bill Armour and Ralph Plaxe of Belleville and Woodstock's Larry Tomchick and Bronco Serafini.

The win moved Belleville into fourth place in the OHA Senior A standings with a record of three wins and four losses. Next game for the Mo-Hawks is Sunday afternoon when they play at home to the Barrie Flyers in a 2.30 p.m. contest.

Terriers Trounce Crescents

Orillia Terriers trounced Owen Sound Crescents' Friday night to preserve their perfect record in this season's Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series play.

The Terriers, last season's Allan Cup finalists, have won all of their seven games this season, scoring 36 goals and only allowing 12.

At Orillia, Connie Mandala paced the Terriers with two goals while John Chaszewski, Doug Kelcher, Mike Draper, Bob Cunningham, Jim Keon and Clare Alexander each scored once.

Garrie Vaughan scored both goals for Owen Sound.

The Flyers were handicapped with two injuries in their game against the Aces, but it did not prevent them from winning to solidify their hold on second place in the series standings.

Barrie lost defencemen Jim McCloskey and Jim Thompson in the second period, but was able to hold back Kingston while playing with only three rearguards.

McCloskey got cut for 30 stitches in his face while Thompson suffered a knee injury.

Tom St. Onge paced the Barrie attack with two goals, including the winning marker midway through the second period. Pete Panagakos and Mc-Closkey got the other goals while Bob Clayton scored twice for Kingston.

Golden Hawks Stop Peterborough 4-3

Trenton Golden Hawks hit the win column in impressive style Friday night by taking a 4-3 decision from the league leading Peterborough Lions.

Strong defence, coupled with the outstanding puck stopping of Tony Minasker and a rash of penalties to the visitors combined to give the Golden Hawks their first win of the Eastern Ontario Junior B starts.

Mike Hall opened the scoring for Trenton with an unassisted goal at 8.32 of the first period.

Paul Lavender and Jeff Howard added markers in the opening 20 minutes for the winners, while Rodger and Nobes counted for Peterborough.

Defensive leader Carey Webb scored what proved to be the winning goal at 1.17 of the second period. A tally by Jim Johnson brought Peterborough to within one goal, but the Golden Hawks managed to blank the league leaders over the final twenty minutes.

The visitors drew 20 of the game's 23 penalties.

Next Trenton game will be

MIKE HALL

Monday night when they travel to Cobourg to take on the Cougars.

Fairways Boost Front Lines

The Belleville Fairways will be looking for their first Eastern Ontario Junior B league win this season when they travel to Peterborough for a Sunday afternoon contest.

Belleville lost their opening game to the Oshawa Crushtown and are looking to even their record for the season.

One addition who might give the Fairway offence a boost is Rick O'Gah. The solidly-built Tweed native could add some much-needed muscle at either right wing or centre.

Another player Floyd Crawford hopes to have in the lineup for Sunday's game is winged graduate Phil Kirby. The speedy forward who missed all of the exhibition games due to illness could provide help at any of the forward positions.

The bus for Peterborough will leave at 11 noon Sunday. Some seats are still available for interested spectators, who are asked to contact Frank Mulvihill at 968-6462.

Stailkovich Leads Trojans To Junior Football Title

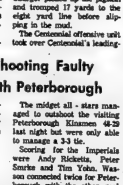
By ALAN TESWORTH

Pete Stailkovich led the Moira Junior Trojans to the COSSA semi-finals against Adam Scott Friday, as he romped 16 times for 223 yards and two touchdowns against the Centennial Jaguars as they beat the Chargers 23-6.

Coach Gord Smith commented on the play of his defensive backfield, especially the play of interior linebacker Larry Kirby, "Their defence played a lot better than we really expected."

That summed up the whole game as the Moira defence did not allow any points with Centennials star Joe Jones going on a Trojan fumble.

Dave Rutherford opened the scoring for Moira, with a yard through the second quarter, point—had held each other scoreless.



Rutherford waded in from the eight yard line on an offtackle play to put the Trojans side. John Loder picked up a two point convert when we pulled in a Steve Hagger pass.

Stailkovich had set up the score by running the previous play and powering his way half in from the 19-yard line.

Pete Stailkovich picked up his 2nd touchdown of the game in on a 3 yard end run in the final half.

Then the Chargers got their only break of the game. Bob Vanderwater punted on a third down situation and Moira fumbled when six-foot Jake Parkhurst-Hilborn hit Dave Hillbrer, running the ball back. The big Charger picked up the pigskin and trounced 17 yards into the eight yard line before slipping in the mud.

The Centennial offensive unit took over Centennial's leading-er in the game Bob Vanderwater carried the ball nine yards to the four to set up Doug Nash for the TD.

MORE-

In the second half Moira completed the play for a major portion of the time. Pete Stailkovich called his second touchdown of the game on a spectacular 50 yard sideline run, in which he out-legged most of the Charger defenders.

John Loder picked up his second two point conversion of the day as he picked off a second Kirby pass as he slipped in the mud. Dave Rutherford accounted for the extra point as his third quarter effort went out of the end zone.

The game was played in the mud for the most part, with not too many passes being thrown. Rodger Mourit o r d completed one complete pass out of four attempts while Kirby was good only on his conversion passes.

Stailkovich was clearly the workhorse for the Trojans, rushing for 223 yards on 16 times for 177 yards for the Chargers.

Jack Adams on the offensive line for Moira led the way while Jake Parmeskerian covered the Chargers defence.

The Moira squad now move on to the COSSA semi-finals against Adam Scott of Peterborough, Wednesday at 2:30 at Moira.

Local Runners Win Two COSSA Titles

Bay of Quinte Cross Country runners made their presence felt at the COSSA championships at Picton yesterday winning tw team titles and qualifying a total of seven individuals for the OFSAA meet next Saturday.

Ron Brown of Centennial came up with the best local showing in the midget competition finishing second to Lakefield's Bob Hall. Joe Noonan of Trenton was next best with a 13th place finish.

In the junior competition; Quinte Secondary School won the team title, while Trenton added a third place team finish.

Quinte placed four runners in the top 15, including a second place finish by Gerard Farrell. Other top finishers were Ron Bell, Quinte (7th); Bob Hartman, Quinte (10th); Grant Martin, Trenton (11th); Barry Bourassa, Quinte (12th); Mark Scott, Quinte (13th) and Roger Ray, Quinte (15th).

Paul Coy added a win in the senior event to his already impressive credentials in leading Picton to the team championship. Ferguson and Chris Conder finished fifth and 12th respectively. Moirk's Dave Grant managed a sixth place finish, while Jim Farrell of Quinte was one place back.

Blake Kerr Shooting Faulty - In 3-3 Tie With Peterborough

Belleville's Blake Kerr Invermidgets have been getting quantity, but necessarily quality from their shots on goal so far this year.

The midget all - stars managed to outshoot the visiting Peterborough Kinsmen 46-29 last night but were only able to manage a 3-3 tie.

Scoring for the Imperials were Andy Ricketts, Peter Smrke and Tim Yoho. Wasnot connected twice for Peterborough with the other goal going to Larry Robocks.

Robbie Foster played a strong two - way game for the midgets, who will be looking for their first win of the season when they play host to Kingston Sunday.

Campbell Claims Junior Split May Force New Loop

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, says the NHL is not happy with the way the Canadian Amateur Association has been handling its problems.

He hinted that the NHL may revert to operating its own player-development leagues

"It's no use us trying to support junior hockey on a split basis," Campbell said in a telephone interview from Montreal with The Record.

"We made a deal in 1967 for five years under which they (CAHA) assumed exclusive control of amateur hockey in Canada. At their request we abandoned sponsorships. Among other things, the age limit was lowered and we agreed not to turn a player over before he was 20 years old."

When the agreement took place in 1967, the Western Canada Hockey League divorced itself from the CAHA and formed a league of its own with an outlaw league operating in Ontario under the title of the Western Ontario Junior Hockey League.

But with the assistance of Campbell the CAHA and the West patched up their differences this season.

Concessions were granted to the West, among them being that each club could carry four over-age players, up to 21 years old, who were to be eliminated in two years. The structure of junior hockey in Canada was changed and a two-level system was adopted.

The WCHL, the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and the Quebec Junior A Hockey League were placed in one level, the other teams in a second level.

However, when it was announced the West was back in the good graces of the CAHA, the OHA and its Quebec counterpart refused to be part of the Canadian final playoff for the junior championship because of the over-age rule.

Quebec and Ontario decided to play for the Memorial Cup, which the OHA owns, and stop there.

Despite the problems, the NHL continues to support amateur hockey but Campbell said the NHL isn't happy with the present setup.

"As long as they are divided, we are not happy about it," Campbell said.

"We have to have definite assurance by 1972 that the CAHA is capable of carrying on. We can't carry on like this. It's nonsense. The West doesn't trust the CAHA and the CAHA doesn't have any faith in the West.

"This doesn't make for better hockey players.

In the meantime, we have a very big stake in this thing. The NHL will pour over $1 million into amateur hockey this year.

"When is the last time the West won the Memorial Cup? You know as well as I that the West was always allowed to add players for the Canadian finals.

"This idea of the West now using over-age players has to be the best form of equalization. There was little foresight shown on the part of the West. It just couldn't see it. This has to be an ideal arrangement. I don't know why the OHA made such a fuss. I guess it couldn't use over-age players and didn't want anyone else to use them."

Campbell is quietly working behind the scenes to have the East and the West meet next spring in Canadian junior finals.

"We're hoping to get this thing resolved. There are rules and everyone has to live up to them.

"We are a partner with the CAHA supporting the CAHA. They say they are in charge of all amateur hockey in Canada. It would be nice if they can prove it."

If no agreement is reached by 1972, the NHL will have to consider some alternatives," Campbell said.

"By far the most efficient way for pro hockey to operate is to run its own player development leagues."

Sports On All Fronts

By THE CANDIAN PRESS

Two rookies, Randy Rota of Providence Reds and John Ferruch of Montreal Voyageurs, provided the sparkle in American Hockey League action Friday night. Rota, a Preston, B.C., native who played junior hockey in Calgary last season, scored twice to lead the Reds in a 5-2 victory over Quebec Aces. Ferruch, who moved to the Voyageurs from Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario junior circuit, scored three goals in a 4-3 Montreal triumph over Springfield Kings. In one other game, Cleveland Barons beat Baltimore Clippers 3-1. Rota's two goals pushed his league-leading total to seven. He also has six assists in eight games. His first goal broke a 2-2 tie in the second period at Providence and his second made it 4-2 for the Reds in the third period. Hilliard Graves, Adam Keller and Ron Garwatiuk also scored for Providence. Bob Clement and Dave Schultz replied for Quebec. French scored twice in the first period and once in the second at Montreal to put the Voyageurs in front 3-1 before Ron Stewart and Doug Volmer tied it up for the Kings. Fran Huck's goal midway through the third period proved the winner for Montreal. Reg Fleming scored the winner for Springfield goal. Cleveland scored once in each period at Baltimore to defeat the Barons who lead the West Division. Wayne Simmons, Barry Meisner and Bill Orban got the Cleveland goals. Jim Niekamp scored for Baltimore.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Taken Aback tarnished the hopes of a pair of bright hopefuls Friday as she scored a victory in the $82,150 Spinster Stakes at Keeneland? Fanfreluche, the Canadian female star of the year owned by J. Louis Levesque of Montreal, had hoped to boost her stock with a Spinster victory and Patties Canyon, a top threat for handicap mare honors, needed the race to add to her credentials. However, they finished second and third, respectively, neither a threat to the winner after Jockey Eddie Belmonte sent Taken Aback to the front in the final three-sixteenths of a mile. Fanfreluche, in the money in all of her 13 starts before the 1¼-mile Spinster this season, held the lead virtually all the way until Taken Aback sped past her at the eighth pole. The time for the race was 1:51 2-5 over a track rated good. The winner paid $18.40, $7.20 and $4.20 while Fanfreluche returned $5.80 and $2.60 and Patties Canyon paid $2.60. Fanfreluche was using the Spinster, one of America's two weight-for-age races for fillies and mares, as a prep for the Washington, D.C. International at Laurel in two weeks.

NEW YORK (AP) — Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez of Puerto Rico has been fined $200 for "conduct unbecoming of a professional golfer" during the final round of last week's Kaiser International golf tournament at Napa, Calif., it was announced Friday. Joe Dey, commissioner of the Professional Golfers Association tournament players, division said golfer Dave Hill had protested that Rodriguez had disturbed his play by an excess of actions not customary in golf, including a simulated attempt to bat a ball with a bunker-rake for the amusement of spectators.

GALT (CP) — Cec Hoekstra, a minor league centre for 15 seasons, has joined Galt Hornets of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series. Hoekstra, 35, who spent the last seven seasons with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League, was reinstated as an amateur this week.

Could Decide Big Four Title

Ti-Cat Veterans Will Test Youthful Larks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tiger-Cat veterans look on Sunday's game against the Alouettes in Montreal as a must-win effort for more reasons than just another victory.

Even a tie would assure the Ticats of a first-place finish in the Eastern Football Conference, but more noteworthy it would enable the veterans to enjoy that extra week of rest before the two-game final showdown.

Hamilton is no stranger to EFC playoffs, having missed out only once (1960) in the last 20 years. Since 1961, they've been Eastern Canada's representative in the Grey Cup classic six times, winning three national titles.

But most of the championship years' personnel still make up the backbone of the 1970club and understandably, with age, would find the extra week's rest a pleasant interval while awaiting the sudden-death semi-final.

Angelo Mosca, Ellison Kelly, John Barrow and Garney Henley — super-performers in the '60s, are all in their 30s and nearing the end of illustrious careers.

And while there's no talk of retirements among the corveted trio of talent, another Grey Cup appearance would more than make up for the frustrations they've had to endure encountered in the two years since their last championship team in 1967.

But while the Ticats have a knack for success with Grey Cup experience the Als, under rookie head coach Sam Etcheverry, are just as eager to prove their unheralded climb up the EFC ladder to become a title contender was no fluke.

Etcheverry said Friday he has a few new wrinkles to throw against the Tiger-Cats in their first-place struggle when the two clubs meet at the Autostade starting at 2 p.m. EST in a game to be carried on CTV's eastern network.

It is one of two EFC scheduele-closing games during the weekend, the first going today at Toronto where the Argonauts are host to Ottawa Rough Riders. It will be Danny Nykoluk Day at CNE stadium where the Argo offensive tackle will be playing in his last scheduled game.

Etcheverry, a veteran Alouette playoff performer during their successful years of the 1950s, has been trying defensive back Richie Davis in the wide receiver slot to give Ticats' deep defenders something more to worry about.

During the season, the Als' most potent pass offence was flanker Terry Evanshen, whose efforts have been muzzled in recent games simply because other clubs in the Canadian Football League have concentrated their deep-pass defences in his area.

Now, with the speedster Davis, Etcheverry hopes to open up these areas in the hopes that at least one of the two will be open occasionally for the long bomb from Montreal's quarterback tandem of Sonny Wade and Tony Passeder.

Hamilton has used just such a play this year to emerge victors, inserting Henley in key situations as wide receiver, flanker or running back to give the Ticats that extra speed he can provide.

Ottawa coach Jack Gotta, whose 1969 Grey Cup champion Rough Riders are already out of the EFC playoff picture, are loose and eager to close the season on a winning note, evidence by their upset of the Alouettes in Montreal last week.

The setback was the first suffered at home by the Als this year.

The Toronto game, to be carried on the CBC's eastern television network starting at 2 p.m. EST today, serves as a breeding ground for next year's Ottawa entry.

Coach Jack Gotta said Friday night that during the off-season "we're going to look hardest for a running back and defensive people."

"We're going to improve our defense. We get 35 points, we get 40, we get 60, they get 43.

"We're going to look for a quarterback and a running back. That's tough. But it should be easier finding good defensive backs.

"We're recruiting right now for next year."

He admitted his quarterback problems were recognized earlier in the year and he went after Wally Gabler when Winnipeg Blue Bombers had him on waivers.

"We went after Gabler, but we didn't stand a chance. I like Gabler. I think he's a very good football player. But he isn't the only one. I'd love to have Frank Cosentino."

Gabler, the former Argo, wound up in Hamilton and after a struggling start has directed the Ticats to three straight victories in the absence of injured Joe Zuger.

Cosentino, former Hamilton, Toronto and Edmonton Eskimo quarterback, quit pro football at the end of last year to concentrate on his duties as head coach of University of Western Ontario Mustangs in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association football circuit.

Individual Battles Continue in CFL West

By THE CANDIAN PRESS

The Western Football Conference picture is completely painted in bold strokes and with a strictly prairie theme, but fans Sunday will be watching some final brushwork on individual records by individual players in the final two games of the season.

Fullback Hugh McKinnis, who played a brilliant rookie season with third-place Calgary Stampeders, has 1,111 yards gained by rushing and won't be averse to picking up a few more for the 1,200 title when Calgary meets the Blue Bombers in Winnipeg.

Jim Evenson, his closest rival, gained three yards more than his thousand-yard target, but heads for the hospital this weekend for an elbow operation while his B.C. Lion team-mates tackle first-place Saskatchewan Roughriders.

For Bombers' Larry Desjardin it's the final game of his football career as well as the last of the season. The 26-year-old centre, an Ottawa native, heads to the University of Toronto at Davis for a two-year post-doctoral fellowship.

There's a handful of other players stretching for assorted honor in Sunday's pair of games. Lions' Jim Young will be trying for the outstanding-Canadian-player award. He has pulled down 47 passes for 965 yards and six touchdowns.

Says coach Jackie Parker: "This has to be Jim's best year because it is the first time he has gone through the season without being handicapped by injuries. He has run better with the football this year and he's a better-than-average blocker."

Lions' quarterback Paul Brothers starts for the Lions, but Parker says Vidal Carlin will get a chance to call the signals in the second half.

Saskatchewan's Larry Robinson will be after the career field-goal mark while Jim Sillye will be out to increase his string of point returns.

The field goal record stands at 114, held jointly by Robinson and inactive Ron Stillwell. Robinson earlier this month set a record for converts and now has 111. Sillye has returned 117 punts, five more than teammate Rudy Linterman did two years ago for the record.

A team mark is at stake for Roughriders. They'll be out for a win against the Lions to give them 14 victories in 16 starts. They've lost only two this year.

Calgary coach Jim Duncan has a big quarterbacking problem. Jerry Keeling has been out since Oct. 7 with a bruised kidney and cracked ribs and hasn't yet received the doctor's okay to dress for Sunday's game.

Duncan expects Keeling to prepare Keeling for the sudden-death semi-final against second-place Edmonton Eskimos the Sunday after, but at last word Larry Lawrence will start Sunday for the Eskimos.

Calgary lineman John Helton hopes for an easier game to allow strained knee ligaments some rest. On the Winnipeg squad, Gene Lakusiak has been placed on the injured list by coach Jim Spavital.

Saskatoon's only doubtful starter is halfback Bob Pearce, who smashed a knee in his team's 34-10 victory last week over Edmonton. Fullback and star player George Reed is resting up for the WFC finals in Regina Nov. 14, giving all his attention to healing an injured leg.

The CTV western network will carry the Stampeders-Bombers game from Winnipeg beginning at 3 p.m. CST.

22 years of hard labour for $1999.

This year it seems everybody's introducing a new economy car.
"Volkswagen-sized."
Volkswagen-priced.
So not to be outdone, we've done the same.
Except, of course, we didn't have to start from scratch.
Because for 22 years, we've concerned ourselves with working better inside, not looking different outside.
And so today, while ours may not look like the newest economy car, it's actually the most advanced.

It's the only one with a sealed steel bottom. To protect its insides against everything outside, including time.
The only one with an air-cooled engine. To eliminate boiling over and freezing up.
And also the only one with a free electronic diagnostic system. To spot trouble early and help extend its life.
And this year, along with everything else, it's the lowest priced car you can buy with a 1600 c.c. engine.
So even if it doesn't look the newest, maybe now it looks the best.

Four Thoroughbreds Drugged

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Robert Horner, Ontario Racing Commission veterinarian, says the drugging of four horses scratched from the fifth race at Greenwood Racetrack Friday appeared to be the work of amateurs

Horner said the swollen needle marks on the necks of three of the thoroughbreds were evidence that injections were administered by an untrained hand.

An investigation has been ordered, with the RCMP, the Thoroughbred Protective Bureau of the Thoroughbred Racing Association and the Jockey Club's security staff involved.

The four horses, scratched were Pataspol, owned by J. Louis Levesque of Montreal and trained by Jacques Dumas; Sir Montague, owned by George Gardiner of Toronto and trained by Lou Cavalarris; Pine Tree Gal, owned by Rodger Leslie and trained by Rod Wright; and Arc O'Fire, owned by Brenmore Stable and trained by David Cross.

Horner said none of the four trainers was under any suspicion. "They all co-operated quickly."

Horner said he first became involved in the case when Cross called him to examine Arc O'Fire.

"It was a couple of minutes before the fourth race when I went over. Cross called me, then Jacques asked me to take a look at Pataspol.

"Arc O'Fire was listless and his eyes were glazed. His head was drooping, so I immediately had him scratched. When I went over to Jacques' barn, I noticed a needle mark in Pataspol's neck. There was quite a bit of swelling where the needle went in.

"I didn't spot any needle mark on Cross's horse," said Horner, but he believed both horses had been tranquillized.

After scratching the two horses, Horner went in the saddling area to check the other six horses entered for the fifth race.

"I checked Cavalaris's horse and he was dead—groggy as a doornail.

Pine Tree Gal looked in bad condition as well. Her eyes were glazed and she was dead.

"Both had needle marks where the neck joins the chest. There was quite a bit of swelling around each mark."

Horner said Pataspol and Sir Montague had been scratched at Greenwood, in Toronto's east end, while the other two druged and had been brought from Woodbine Racetrack Friday morning.

Cross Arc O'Fire appeared normal when he unloaded the horse after bringing it from Woodbine and guessed that the injection was given about 1 p.m., about the time of the first race.

Horner said he found nothing wrong with the other four horses entered for the fifth. Sir Ribot's Lady, Flim, Anita's Warrior and Jewels Jay.

When the race was run, Sir Ribot's Lady won and returned $6.30, $3.50 and $2.10. Flim returned $3.40 and $2.10 for place and Anita's Warrior $2.10 for show.

Marlies Bomb Black Hawks to Move Into Third Place Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros outscored St. Catharines Black Hawks 9-5 in a fight-filled game Friday night and moved up two notches in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings.

Toronto advanced into a share of third place with Hamilton Red Wings, two points behind St. Catharines and nine back of the leading Peterborough Petes.

In other Friday action, London Knights trounced Niagara Falls Flyers 5-1 and Oshawa Generals recorded their first victory of the season, 4-3 over Ottawa 67s.

The Marlboros win, before a Toronto crowd of 4,500, was marred by a second-period incident. A fight broke out when players piled up behind the Toronto net and both benches emptied.

Referee Tom Brown, who assessed a total of 39 minutes in penalties, sent the teams to their dressing rooms and the final four minutes and 23 seconds of the second period were played before the third started.

Steve Shutt and Dave Gardner paced the Toronto win with three goals each Bill Harris scored twice and Steve Vickers once.

Bob Poppler, Brian McKenzie, Marcel Dionne, Pierre Guite and Bob MacMillan scored one each St. Catharines.

Dionne, scoring champion last year and current leader, raised his season total to 31 points in 11 games.

At Niagara Falls, a big effort by London netminder Ted Lemsen helped the Knights drop the Flyers into last place in front of a crowd of 1,800.

Lemsen faced 48 Flyers shots, 26 in the second period as Knights clung to a 2-0 lead.

Terry West and John Raynak both scored twice and Reg Thomas once for London. Wayne Rivers scored the only Niagara Falls goal in the third period.

Oshawa produced its first win of the season in 18 tries, after a record of 0-4-0 at Ottawa.

The 67s were in front 3-0 after one period, but Pete Sullivan and Larry Compton scored for Oshawa in the second period. Terry O'Reilly sparked the Generals with two goals in the third period.

Wayne Merrick, Peter Daw and Brian McSheffrey scored for Ottawa.

Winnipeg goaltender Ted McComb faced 38 Ottawa shots.

All 18 teams are in action Sunday. Hamilton visits Montreal Junior Canadiens, Kitchener Rangers play at St. Catharines, Niagara Falls visits Oshawa, Peterborough travels to Toronto and Ottawa is in London.

Oakland Finally Gets Win With 6-1 Shelling of Sabres

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In mid-September great things were expected of Oakland Seals, fresh from two straight exhibition victories including a 6-0 shutout of Buffalo Sabres, one of two new clubs in the National Hockey League.

The Seals, however, saw their fortunes continue to decline despite a change in name and ownership. They may finally have reversed that trend Friday night at the expense of the same Buffalo Sabres.

Rescued California Golden Seals by Charles O. Finley, who took over the financially-plagued franchise, they swamped the Sabres 6-1 for their first win of the season.

Their previously-anemic offence poured 48 shots through a porous Sabres' defence at Buffalo's pulsating tandem of Joe Daley and Roger Crozier.

Veteran winger Billy Hicke ended a season-long scoring drought with two goals for California and assisted on the game-opening tally by Ted Hampson. Defencemen Gerry Ca rol Vadnais also collected two goals.

Daley, who started in goal for Buffalo and is one of the few netminders in professional hockey who do not wear a face mask, was felled when struck on the temple in the second period by a flip shot off the stick of California's Earl Ingarfield. Twelve stitches were required to close the wound.

Games tonight have Vancouver Canucks at Montreal Canadiens, Minnesota North Stars visiting Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins at home to New York Rangers, Chicago Black Hawks playing the Penguins at Pittsburgh and St. Louis Blues entertaining Los Angeles Kings.

Sunday night Toronto moves to Detroit against the Red Wings, Chicago is at New York, Minnesota continues its road trip at Boston, Buffalo visits Los Angeles and Philadelphia Flyers are at home to Pittsburgh.

The surprising Vancouver club is coming off a five-game home stand in which it won two, lost two and tied one to move fourth place in the NHL's East Division.

Few expected the new Canucks to reach their lofty position in so short a time, but general manager Bud Poile sees no reason why they can't continue at their present pace.

But he hastens to admit he'll need help from the other clubs to keep pace with Detroit, Buffalo and Toronto.

After tonight's game at Montreal, the Canucks continue their road trip at Pittsburgh Wednesday and Buffalo Thursday. They return home for their second meeting of the year with Toronto next Saturday.

With 11 of their next 15 games on the road, Poile admits the Canucks face a task that any of the established teams would find difficult, let alone newcomers to the league.

Aaron Slacks Sahara Pace But Still Maintains Lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tommy Aaron's record went up by seven strokes but the Georgia veteran still held a two-stroke lead going into today's third round in the $100,000 Sahara Invitational golf tournament.

Aaron, the first-day leader with a 64, went to a par 71 for 135, but retained the same leading margin as the field was unable to overtake him in the near-perfect golfing weather, cool and not a hint of wind.

Two strokes back at 137 were Bert Greene, Dave Stockton and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg. Stockton had the day's best round, a 67. Greene had a 69 and Homenuik a 68.

Seven players were tied at 138. They are Dave Hill, Larry Hinson, Don Massengale, Kermit Zarley, Lou Graham, Jim Simons and Joe Carr.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion and pre-tourney favorite, got his own clubs back and just made the cut for the final 36 holes.

Nicklaus, who played with a borrowed set when he shot an opening 76, took a 69 for 145, the cutoff figure.

The only other member of the five-man Canadian contingent entered in the field to make the cut was newcomer Ben Kern of Stockton. Kern 71 Friday gave him a 145 total.

At Balding of Toronto shot his second consecutive 75 for a 150 total while Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, also finishing with a 75, had 151.

Gary Bowerman of Toronto took a 78 in Thursday's opening 18 holes then withdrew from the tournament.

In other NBA action, Cincinnati dropped Cleveland 125-118, Boston downed Phoenix 127-112, Los Angeles beat Buffalo 104-90, Chicago nipped San Francisco 101-98 and Seattle defeated Portland 115-104.

CAHA Blasts Campbell

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — Western Canada could have resolved its amateur hockey problems if there had been no interference and meddling by members of the National Hockey League, a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association official said Friday.

Joe Krycska of Calgary, vice-president of the CAHA, was referring to a statement by NHL president Clarence Campbell, who said he is not happy with the way the CAHA has been handling its problems.

Krycska did not specify what he meant by interference or meddling.

He noted that in 1967 the NHL had signed a five-year agreement giving the CAHA exclusive control over amateur hockey in Canada.

Vikings Meet Lions In Big NFL Clash

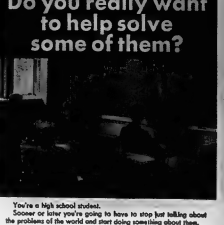
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Minnesota Vikings, sailing clubs collide again on Nov. 15 at steadily through a National Football League tempest, invade Detroit Sunday for their third straight test.

In their last two starts, the Vikings have, overrun Dallas Cowboys 54-13 and slogged past Los Angeles Rams 10-9 but despite these inter-division triumphs over NFL powerhouses—and the earlier victory over Kansas City Chiefs—Minnesota can claim only a share of the lead in the Central Division of the National Conference.

The other first-place share belongs to the title-hungry Lions, who have matched the Vikings' 5-1 record and established themselves as a defensive match for Bud Grant's Purple Gang.

Sunday's loser won't have long to wait for a rematch. The Minnesota.



The winner of the initial New York "championship" game between the Jets and the Giants will have five years to savor its conquest. The intra-city rivals don't meet again until 1975.

Elsewhere Sunday, Oakland Raiders are at Kansas City, Miami Dolphins at Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers at San Francisco 49ers, San Diego Chargers at Cleveland Browns, Los Angeles at New Orleans Saints, Buffalo Bills at Boston Patriots, Chicago Bears at Atlanta Falcons, Houston Oilers at St. Louis Cardinals, Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas and Washington Redskins at Denver Broncos.

Pittsburgh Steelers entertain Cincinnati Bengals Monday night to complete the seventh week of NFL play.

Bush Pilot Walks to Safety After 30 Days Lost in Arctic

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Northern bush pilots are a hardy breed, as was proven again Friday when James Hamilton, 42, showed up at a remote Arctic weather station after being missing 30 days in the treeless, windswept barrens.

The Prince Albert pilot walked into the department of transport weather station at Ennadai Lake, N.W.T., 600 miles northeast of here, and radioed his home base to send a helicopter to take some gasoline to his stranded aircraft. He said he was in good shape and would fly himself out.

Floyd Glass, general manager for Athabasca Airways, said Mr. Hamilton radioed Friday afternoon from the refuelling stop he had overflown in the fog Sept. 30. The pilot had been returning a charter helicopter after a summer's work for an oil company near Baker Lake, N.W.T. Canadian forces aircraft called off the search for the missing helicopter two weeks ago.

"We were very, very sure he'd be found," Mrs. Hamilton said calmly in a telephone interview after hearing the news. "He's an experienced pilot and he knows how to look after himself."

Mr. Glass said the helicopter was equipped with a survival kit, radios for 40 days and a gun.

He said the helicopter was about 40 miles from the weather station, but he had no idea how far the pilot had had to walk during the month.

It was possible he may have had to walk at least twice as far to get around lakes in the area.

Communications with the tiny settlement at Ennadai Lake are through department of transport short-wave link only, and not even Mrs. Hamilton has talked to her husband since he was found.

"I wouldn't try to talk to him on the radio-phone anyway," she said. "Half the North would be listening in and I'd likely say something silly."

The Hamilton's have two sons at home, one 20 and another nine. A married daughter lives in Port Coquitlam, B.C.

Mrs. Hamilton said the family had worried but she added that the other Athabasca employees were also certain that he would be found.

Temperatures during the night in the area were in the 20s and Mrs. Hamilton said she did not expect her husband suffered frostbite.

Mr. Glass said light snow, fog and sleet had hampered search planes.

He was uncertain when Mr. Hamilton would get back to Prince Albert. A helicopter would have to be flown up the 850 miles in two stages because longer-range aircraft have no place to land.

Mr. Hamilton's story now will take its place among other northern sagas.

Last November, John B. (Slev) Woolying, 47, walked 40 miles through deep snow in a 19-day ordeal after his plane was forced to land on the Arctic coast near Inuvik.

One of the most famous stories is that of Robert Gauchie, 36, of Fort Smith, N.W.T., who was marooned for almost two months in 1967, on a windswept lake 850 miles north of Edmonton before being found.

Indian Women Released on Bail to Appeal Case

TORONTO (CP) — A storm over two Indian women who were brought more than 1,000 miles from Kenora to serve sentences in reformatory at Brampton, near Toronto, continued to swirl over the Ontario legislature Friday.

The two women will be freed on bail by Monday to appeal their cases.

Mr. Justice John D. Arnup of the Ontario Court of Appeal granted bail to lawyer James Karswick to appeal the cases of Doris Henry, 23, and Agnes Land, 29, who are serving sentences for window-breaking.

Mr. Justice Arnup granted an extension of the appeal period and allowed the women free on $100 personal bond after written promises to appear or be legally liable to pay the court $100.

Time time allowed for the two women to appeal had run out before their cases were brought to the attention of the Ontario legislature this week.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart admitted Friday in the house the sentences were "inconsistent" with the federal Prison and Reformatories Act which does not allow women to be given "definite" sentences in reformatory.

He thus qualified statements made earlier this week by Allan Grossman, minister of corrections, that the sentences were illegal.

Mr. Karswick said he will probably appeal their conviction by Judge J. V. Ferguson of Kenora as well as their sentences.

Miss Land, a mother of six, was sentenced to nine months definite and six indeterminate for breaking windows valued at $745 in several school houses on the Islington Reserve near Kenora July 28.

Mrs. Henry pleaded guilty to breaking every window in the Indian affairs department school and residence on the reserve July 30 during a drunken spree. Damage to the windows and to a phone booth and telephone outside was $1,300. Judge Ferguson was told.

She was sentenced to 12 months definite and six months indeterminate. A companion, Roy Henry, also pleaded guilty to wilful damage in the July 30 incident and was sentenced to 12 months definite and six months indeterminate.

Attorney-general Arthur Wishart told the legislature Friday Mr. Henry has been provided with legal-aid assistance to appeal his sentence as well.

Now social workers at the Indian Centre of Toronto will probably arrange their trip home pending their appeal, their lawyer said Friday.

Mr. Wishart said an investigation by his department showed that everything was done to make sure they were fairly treated. He said he was in sympathy with those who say there should be a correctional institution closer to the women's home.

He was asked by Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, if he had ever made an analysis of sentences handed out for similar offences by whites and Indians.

The attorney-general said he has looked into this from time to time and "I have not been able to find that there is a great disparity in cases at all."

In other legislature business:

—Municipalities, corporations or individuals that discharge pollutants into any Ontario waterway will be liable to maximum fines of $5,000 on first conviction—five times the present maximum fine—under a bill introduced by the government.

—Separate labor legislation should be enacted for the construction industry to deal with its peculiar problems, the committee on labor was told by R. N. Gomes, chairman of the labor relations committee of the Ontario Mining Association.

—The government added $9 million to its $3.7 billion budget for 1970 to cover the cost of two new tax-rebate programs and extra welfare costs.

Hudon Sentenced To 20 Years in Prison

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Hudon, 26, who admitted earlier this week that he staged 10 robberies to finance the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, was sentenced Friday to a total of 20 years in prison and fined $5,000.

Sentence was based on 27 charges of conspiracy to commit a holdup and car theft connected with 14 armed holdups. Hudon had been found guilty of three charges stemming from one bank holdup at St. Calixte, Que., when he confessed to the other 13.

Failure to pay the fine will result in an additional three years' imprisonment.

Hudon is one of the so-called "political prisoners" whose release from jail was demanded by the FLQ as ransom for kidnaped British diplomat James (Jasper) Cross and Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, now slain.

Values Questioned

Committees Toasted and Roasted

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons committees were toasted Friday for being efficient but criticized for lowering the importance of the House.

James Jerome (L—Sudbury), parliamentary secretary to Privy Council President Allan MacEachen, told the Commons that Parliament could not gain the respect of Canadians unless it was efficient. This was the role of committees.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said committees take away from the importance of the House where often only about 20 MPs are present as others are at committee meetings.

The comments came during debate on a government motion to refer the Auditor-General's 1978 report to the Commons public accounts committee.

The House also gave second reading to government measures extending the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act to June 30, 1979 and granting $4 million to Deuterium of Canada Ltd. to put its Glace Bay, N.S., plant into production.

Justice Minister John Turner opened debate on second reading of a government measure that would allow taxpayers to plead their cases before a reconstituted tax appeal board. Debate on the legislation continues Monday.

Mr. Baldwin repeated a view he expressed two weeks ago in the Commons that his party is going to take a harder line on setting up committees because the current system is being abused.

The Commons must have more control over committee spending, he said.

He was convinced of this after hearing that the Senate poverty and mass media committees spent more than $1 million last year.

Mr. Baldwin called for a review of abuses of the committee system.

Mr. Jerome said the committee system allows more detailed study of legislation than would be possible in the House. The committee system had spent 1200 hours studying bills last year—twice as much time as the Commons.

Referring to committee expenses he said: "It can't just the price but the value for the price that has to be considered."

NOT SATISFIED

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) also expressed dissatisfaction with the value of some committee undertakings.

He described the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution as a "travelling circus." The committee is currently holding public hearings in various parts of the country.

Mr. Woolliams said that the committee is "getting up a political image and aura for the federal party."

Some committee trips were just a "payoff" for MPs.

Mr. T. McMillan (PC—Lambton-Kent) said the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution spent $22,000 during its Manitoba trip in September.

He also said that he resents the government bringing in scads of MPs to "ram through" legislation even though they had not attended hearings where Bill 53 was discussed.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the Commons should have a better way of examining government estimates than sending them to different committees.

NEEDS MORE STAFF

Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington), former chairman of the Commons public accounts committee, said the committee needs more staff, particularly legal counsel.

During debate on the bill that would give a grant to Deuterium of Canada, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) urged the federal government to join with Nova Scotia in developing and managing the Deuterium heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S.

Martin O'Connell, parliamentary secretary to Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, said that a massive investment by the provincial government would melt away if the federal government does not help.

The grant is conditional on the engineering of the plant being satisfactory, he said.

The grant is part of $41 million the government is giving Deuterium, a Nova Scotia Crown-owned corporation. The plant opening, scheduled for 1981, has been delayed by faulty de.ligns and other problems.

Introducing the bill on a revised tax appeal board, Mr. Turner said that it will mean taxpayers will be able to appeal tax assessments at only a modest cost to themselves.

They will be able to plead their own cases without the assistance of lawyers and the proceedings will be less formal than at the present tax appeal board, he said.

Either the chairman or the vice-chairman would have to be a member of the Quebec bar to ensure familiarity with the Quebec Civil Code. All members of the board would have to be lawyers.

Farmer Gets Money Back

PICTON (Staff) — Picton area farmer Carl VanSlyver has been awarded $2,615, in an Ontario Supreme Court action filed against The Chinchilla Guild of Canada Ltd. The farmer's case was heard in a Frontenac County court with Mr. Justice William R. Henderson presiding. Mr. VanSlyver took legal action against the chinchilla guild after the 12 animals purchased with his membership for $1,500, failed to breed as prolifically as their 18 month guarantee promised.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Paget's Disease Not Usually Fatal

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: During a routine series of X rays of my uncle's skull for suspected sinus trouble, the report came back he has Paget's disease. This has upset him very much. He has heard that it is fatal. He has been taking tranquilizers to calm his nerves. Just what is Paget's disease anyway? Can anything be done for it? Is it serious? — Mrs. U.

Comment: We don't know what causes this upset in bone metabolism. But we do know that it is not usually fatal. I hope your uncle reads this. He may stop taking his tranquilizers.)

As in his case, many people may have it, without symptoms, and be surprised when routine X rays reveal that it is present. It may not bother them the rest of their lives. However, in some patients it becomes a progressive condition.

Bone gets spongy and "moth-eaten." Nature replaces it with new bone, but often overdoes it. The new bone may be deposited in places where bone is not affected; and therefore unnecessarily thickens bone abnormally.

It is for this reason that in some patients, the cranium becomes abnormally large. For example, a man may discover that he needs to buy larger hats. "His head becomes too big for him."

Some patients suffer severe headaches. Others have loss of hearing due to thickening of skull bones. Still others suffer pain and loss of use of bones.

Pagets's disease is also called osteitis deformans. Osteo means bone. Itis means inflammation. Deformans means deformity.

Fortunately, the disease is usually painless. Only about 10 percent are overweight. She went to a doctor for a diet. He also prescribed what. If the place learned are amphetamine pills to curb her appetite.

She lost her excess weight, and more. She is now thin in the proverbial rail. Not only that. She is extremely short - tempered and doesn't sleep well. A formerly relaxed household has become a daily battle ground.

She tells me that she now takes at least a half-dozen pills every day, sometimes twice that many. The pharmacist gives her all she wants because the original prescription by her doctor said that she could refill whenever she wanted to. What shall I do? It's ruining our entire relationship. — Mr. X.

Comment: Talk to her doctor. Chances are he does not know what is going on. Sometimes medical men prescribe unlimited refills, thinking the patient will stop taking the amphetamines after a few. The weight-loss point has been reached. I think he will advise her to discontinue.

But it may not be as easy as all that. Many patients keep on "bootlegging" amphetamines (and other forbidden drugs). Then it becomes a stubborn problem.

For Mrs F.: It is understandable that as a young diabetic, on a restricted diet with insulin injections every day, you are hopeful that you might have an operation for "pancreas transplant" which will do away with needing such special care of your self.

All I can tell you is that a few such transplants have been tried, but without success. Therefore, better resolve to stick to your present schedule. As you are still in your teens, it is not impossible you may live to see the day when pancreas transplants (or other treatment) will lessen the need for strict diet and insulin injections every day.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 1

Your birthday today: Spiritual your development in the coming year. Material prosperity depends on some distinctively individual qualities. Your personal habits are subject to drastic changes during this busy, adventurous time. Emotional and social contacts may lapse suddenly and be replaced — or return just as abruptly. Today's natives are characterized by tenacity, willpower, sometimes with a critical attitude, often by a very bright mind.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Take your share in the expression of faith in your community. A better new people, explore fresh relationships. Think about what you will do in the near future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): There are new people all around, and it is them quite interesting once you know them. Welcome old friends as well. Family life improves this quiet Sunday.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Going along with your coworkers associates work out well. You can promote a creative line of ideas and coax the group into quite a lot of amusing chance.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Keeping tightly to a schedule will not work out this Sunday, although nearly everything else, social and normally directed, does. Stretch out and relax in the evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): So many details develop that an extra pair is needed for restimulating and distracting. Enjoy the atmosphere; some of the results are permanent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Details of your home situation require attention, perhaps preempting other chores. Visitors include some who will be important later. It's all right if they find you busy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Seek mental involvement, subtle insights into human relations. Relatives are helpful if you will let them be themselves with a word of praise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Some contact, inactive for a while, springs suddenly to life. You have both a challenge and a momentary dilemma as to how to utilize all advantages.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your past efforts from you will bring co-operation all day. Social contacts work to stimulate and benefit you. Forgive of your spirit and good humor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): The easy way through the day is probably the most constructive. You will meditate, instead of just loafing. You may see some past events.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Friends contribute strongly to your peace and enjoyment. New acquaintances pose challenges. An early start allows time for the necessary amenities.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Sometime in the pleasant drift today, pause and check up on just where you are, and the means you have at hand. Review of recent past is surprisingly helpful.

For November 2

Your birthday today: It is not so much what you do in this year as the way you do it — reflecting your personal values. You find yourself working harder than ever with generally good, occasionally great, results. Your intuition is keen, you are strongly stimulated and become very effective in subtle areas of life. Today's natives all have a streak of wanderlust deep in their unconscious natures. Under a sociable exterior, there's a hidden inclination to be a lonely recluse.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Work cross-currents and impatience of today, get busy early, mind your own work, and continue steadily. Don't let yourself be irritated.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Now with most people close in you showing some restlessness or doubts, your even-tempered tact is very important in keeping things going well.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Strive for overall accuracy in whatever you do. Family questions may lack ready answers. Your consideration is the essential key to real solutions.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): That strong impulse is unrealistic. Let your work run along well-established lines. Avoid criticism of associates, even though they seem to be asking for it.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your temptation now is to get stirred up needlessly. Emotional pressures needn't be expressed in hasty actions. Your money goes quickly, for relatively little.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your plans must be carried out certainly run into some delay. With inner serenity, you can clear off for the necessary annoyances, falling smoothly into place.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your thoughts run ahead of your ability to put them into tangible form. Refrain from changing things until you've slept on it. Tact is essential now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your affairs improve, but this is not the time to share the results with friends. Plan a bk further ahead. Concentrate on your real goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Established routine gets you through the day, while others buzz with arguments. Make your own work the focal point.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Neglected work now comes to crisis stage; find time to straighten them up. Avoid involvement in anything which must be kept secret. You can fool nobody today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Control the urge to get into complex discussions, find flaws. Concentrate on your own efforts or ideas. Give associates time to digest the last ideas you offered.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Bickering is so tempting — simply attend to work. Expect others to temporarily change decisions. What you say could force permanent changes.

UN to Request Ceasefire Continue

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The 121-country General Assembly is expected to agree next week that the Middle East ceasefire should be extended.

It also is expected to make a renewed call on Israel to withdraw from Arab lands captured in the 1967 Middle East war and strongly call for a resumption of peace talks under Gunnar Jarring.

It will reiterate that Security Council Resolution 242 of November, 1967, is the basis for all peace negotiations.

These conclusions were reached by some observers after the end Friday of a seven-day ceasefire extension week of debate on the Middle East.

Last major speaker of the week was Jacob Malik, Soviet ambassador, who demanded immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territories and immediate resumption of the Jarring mission. He charged that Israel is violating Resolution 242 by boycotting that mission.

How the assembly will reach a decision still is open to question. Early next week it is expected to have three resolutions before it.

They are:

—A 19-country Afro-Asian draft calling for Israeli withdrawal, resumption of the Jarring mission and a report by Secretary-General U Thant on Jarring's efforts within two months.

—A United States draft calling for a three-month extension of the ceasefire. It also asks the Middle East parties to create the confidence necessary for resumption of Jarring's mission.

—A Latin-American resolution that had started going the rounds Friday night. It is believed to be more balanced—at least in Western eyes—than the Afro-Asian draft but it still contains calls for resumption of Jarring talks and Israeli withdrawal.

Observers said that all three of these would contain at least an implicit call for extension of the American-sponsored 90-day Middle East ceasefire. This would give Jarring time he needs, not to start fighting Nov. 8, the deadline for the present ceasefire.

The debate is expected to take up all of Monday and perhaps none of Tuesday. There is speculation that it will go further, although Egypt wants something before Thursday—Nov. 2.

Malik dismissed the American ceasefire plan as a "unilateral initiative" and said that the U.S. resolution is "pro-Israel."

He said that the Soviet Union supports the Afro-Asian resolution. The U.S. draft was designed to replace Resolution 242, the primary portion of which called for the withdrawal of Israeli troops to the borders that existed before the June, 1967, war.

He said 242 also contained a reference to the Jarring talks and that Israel is violating that resolution by boycotting the talks.

Israel refuses to return to the Jarring talks until Egypt rectifies alleged violations of the Suez standstill cease-fire part of the U.S. ceasefire initiative. It is supported by the U.S.

Malik also publicly outlined a Soviet plan for guaranteeing a Middle East peace. The plan has been mentioned in the Big Four ambassadors' meetings in New York several times.

He said that after Israel withdraws from all captured territories, demilitarized zones could be established on both sides of the border with UN troops stationed in several places in these zones.

A peace treaty could be concluded in a document which would have international legal force. The Big Four or the Security Council could provide guarantees.

The idea of a UN force also was mentioned by Jacques Kosciusko-Morizet, ambassador of France, in an earlier speech.

He said the solution to the Middle East is "peace and evacuation."

Among his suggestions were demilitarized zones and "along the borders, the continuing presence of United Nations forces."

These forces could not be withdrawn except with the unanimous approval of the Security Council, "so as to implement, according to predetermined schedule, the measures which would make the end of hostilities."

The French ambassador also said the "basic error" of the American ceasefire plan was that it was not guaranteed by the Big Four or the Security Council.

Wallace Wants Lopsided Win

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — There is little doubt, if any, that George C. Wallace will be elected governor of Alabama again next Tuesday, but he's campaigning hard for a lopsided triumph.

He is counting on a white backlash to roll up a solid majority against Dr. John Cashin, a Negro dentist, and at the same time turn back the challenge of other black candidates running for state offices.

Wallace, who carried five states as a third-party presidential candidate in 1968, has kept alive the possibility of another run for the White House two years from now. He doesn't want the record to show he could barely win in his own state.

Cashin, running under the emblem of the predominantly Black National Democratic Party of Alabama which he founded two years ago, convinces he has only an outside chance, but says the NDPA can send Negroes to the all-white legislature and put more blacks in office in the county courthouses.

Negroes already control the government in one rural county, Greene. In Tuskegee, Macon, they run the county school board, the sheriff's office and tax collector's office, and dominate City Hall in Tuskegee, the county seat.

Wallace has four other challengers in the governor's race, all white, but he has singled out Cashin as "our opponent."

Throughout his talks with legislative nominees, he urged them to help turn out a huge vote. Then, to do his bit, he began a series of 14 campaign appearances around the state.

Talking with the voters "about the critical issues facing us."

"We can be sure that the group supporting our opponent will be out in force," Wallace said. "These people are well organized, well financed and supportive of such a good showing because of a small voter turnout."

Alabama has only about 230,000 Negro voters, compared with about 1.3 million whites, but Cashin could run Wallace a fairly close race if Negroes show up in force on election day and a substantial number of white voters stay home.
